WE have had great success with our ads in The Review; we are completely sold out of Chatelaine begonias and Asparagus Sprengeri. — Temperley's, Indianapolis, Ind.

ENCLOSED find check to pay for the ad you recently printed in The Review for me. The ferns sold well and I am still shipping on that little ad.—Henry Daut, Decatur, Ill.

PLEASE discontinue our ad, as we have sold out 90,000 vincas and cannot supply any more. All anybody needs is the goods and an ad in The Review.—Lampert Floral Co., Xenia, O.

I WISH to thank The Review for what it has done for me in the last year; it has sold over 2,000 bales of sphagnum moss and about the same quantity of peat.—Joseph H. Paul, Manahawkin, N. J.

WE are much pleased with the results obtained from our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.—Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports on all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of $1.00, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

A PROFESSIONAL paper, "Peach Scab and Its Control," by G. W. Keitt, published as Bulletin No. 395 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be of interest to many nurserymen.

BENJAMIN E. GAGE, for many years with Peterson Nursery, Chicago, has gone into business for himself as landscape "advisor," with office at 721 Stock Exchange building, Chicago.

IN condemnation proceedings relative to the widening of a street at Washington, D. C., an attorney for the McLean estate, one of the defendants in the case, contended that the half-mile of trees, shrubs and hedge embellishing his client's home grounds was valued at $20,000. Appraisers were appointed from the trade, J. H. Small, Jr., Wm. F. Gude and I. H. Moss, who estimated the value at from $15,000 to $20,000.

ADDRESSING the New England Nurserymen's Association, E. Fred Rowe, of the McFarland organization, said: "The mistake is made, in preparing catalogues for the public, in thinking that the purchasers know as much about technical matters connected with nurseries and with the growth of plants and shrubs as the dealers do themselves. The public for the most part is ignorant of technical methods and the matter in the catalogues should be prepared with this lack of knowledge in view."

THE death of James King, Elmhurst, Ill., is recorded in this week's obituary column.

PREPARATIONS have been made for setting out about 1,300 acres in pecan trees in the section immediately surrounding Albany, Ga., during the present planting season, which ends early in March. This acreage has already been surveyed and trees are being set out. It is expected that several hundred acres more will be planted before the season ends, bringing the increased acreage up to about 2,000 acres for that section. Albany surveyors have also surveyed about 600 acres of land in the Oglethorpe section for pecans.

Toole's Hardy Plants for Cut Flowers

The following varieties are the most valuable for summer cut flowers. Why not grow some of them? The wholesale market uses immense quantities. You will find them valuable in your retail trade to furnish variety, and to fill in when other flowers are scarce.

In growing hardy plants you have no expense for coal, no depreciation and interest charges on expensive glass.

Your original investment is comparatively small and should be returned several fold the first season.

A few of Toole's hardy perennials for cut flowers will increase your net profits for the year, and it is net profits that count.

Let us book your order now for early spring shipment as soon as our season opens here, from April 1 to 15. All fresh dug, healthy stock.

seryman's misrepresentations induced the customer to agree to buy, cannot be defeated by provisions in the written contract that the order is not subject to countermand and that the salesman is not authorized to make vary the terms of the written order. This is the substance of the recent decision of the Kansas Supreme court. In this suit the nurserymen were defeated in an attempt to hold their customer for the contract price of certain seedlings.

The customer, or defendant, signed an order on the nurserymen's printed form for the seedlings. The order contained provisions against countermand and against variation of the terms by any oral statements of the salesman who took the order.

Anything to Get the Order.

The stock was shipped, but the customer refused to receive it, and it was sold at auction. The nurserymen then sued for the excess of the contract price above the amount realized at the auction. The customer relied on claimed oral representations of the salesman that the order might be countermanded any time before shipment, and that the agent misrepresented the market value of the seedlings; the time at which they would mature; the quantity of stock the nurserymen had on hand; that the agent also misrepresented the nurserymen as having raised all their own stock, and that he was planting a half-section of land to seedlings.

The nurserymen insisted that, in view of the terms of the written contract, these oral misrepresentations made by the salesman were not binding upon them. In affirming a judgment in the customer's favor, the Supreme court intimated that the nurserymen were right in their claim that the customer could not rely upon the salesman's oral statement that the order might be countermanded before shipment, since the written contract provided against such countermand and the jury found that the customer had reasonable opportunity to examine the form of contract before signing it. But the court affirmed the judgment because the customer had established fraud on the part of the salesman in misrepresenting the facts above mentioned, concerning the market value of the stock, the time in which it would mature, etc.

Fraud Made Contract Void.

"It is elementary," said the court, "that a contract entered into through the fraud and misrepresentation of one of the parties and relied on by the other, is voidable at the instance of the party defrauded. * * * However reputable a business firm the nurserymen may be, the jury has found that their agent procured the defendant's signature through fraud and misrepresentation."

The court recognized the well established rule of law that the terms of sale as fixed in a written contract cannot be contradicted by a party who signed it with full opportunity to know what he was signing, but held, in line with other courts, that this rule does not prevent a party to a contract from rescinding it on the ground that fraud was practiced upon him to induce him to sign.

When Misrepresentation Is "Puffing."

But there is another well settled rule of law that misrepresentations made by a salesman do not constitute fraud when they relate to mere matters of opinion, or are mere "puffing" of the goods offered for sale. In this case, however, the court declared that the representations of the salesman as to positive facts, such as prevailing market prices, matters of which the customer was ignorant, do not fall within the rule stated. The opinion concludes:

"Since we have seen that the false representations as to the market value were sufficient to avoid this contract, we need not enter the more debatable inquiry as to whether the false representations as to the fast-growing qualities of the seedlings were likewise statements of fact on which the buyer might rely, or whether they were mere expressions of opinion, excusable as 'puffing' or 'dealer's talk.'" ACCORDING TO LAW.

With reference to news of the incorporation of the Mount Arbor Nurseries, of Shenandoah, Ia., which appeared in The Review for December 28, many readers no doubt will be interested in the legal announcement published in a home paper to comply with the law. It was as follows:

NOTICE OF INCORPORATION OF THE MOUNT ARBOR NURSERIES.

First—The name of this corporation shall be the Mount Arbor Nurseries.

Second—The principal place of transacting its business shall be Shenandoah, Page County, Iowa.

Third—The general nature of the business to be transacted by this corporation shall be to propagate, grow, buy, sell, import, export and handle all kinds of nursery stock, seeds and grain both wholesale and retail, also to carry on general farming; to raise, buy, sell live stock; to buy, hold and improve and sell real estate and chattels real; bonds secured by chattels or real estate act necessary or required to fully carry out in every detail the above purposes for which this corporation was organized.

Fourth—The authorized capital stock of said corporation shall be $300,000. Of said capital stock $200,000 shall be subscribed and paid in at the commencement of business, and the remainder of said stock to be issued and disposed of on the order of the board of directors at such times and in such amounts as they shall deem expedient.

Fifth—This corporation shall commence business September 1, 1916, and continue during the period of twenty years unless dissolved prior to that time, which shall only be done by a vote representing two-thirds of the capital stock.

Sixth—The affairs of this corporation shall be conducted by a president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary and a board of directors.

Seventh—The affairs of this corporation shall be conducted by a board of five directors who shall be elected at the meeting of the stockholders in September, 1916, and annually thereafter from among the stockholders at the annual stockholders' meeting, and they shall hold office until their successors are elected and qualified.

Eighth—The private property of the members of this corporation shall be exempt from liability for the debt of the corporation.

Do It Now!

Go over your Rose Houses carefully and estimate the plants you need for replanting this Spring, and place your order. Roses are going to be scarce. The Manetti situation is such that those who get it are fortunate, and the demand is far greater than the limited supply. We have sold over 100,000 grafted Roses in the last two weeks. We have 200,000 more to sell. There is considerable building contemplated. "Changing from Carnations to Roses" is a frequent explanation made when placing an order. If you are short at planting time it will be your fault and not ours. The growing of grafted Roses is an industry in itself. At Cromwell the large quantity of Roses grown for cut flowers makes it possible to get scions that are first-class. We want your Rose Plant order, and we want to be able to say "yes" to your inquiry. Estimate your requirements and write us.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Markets.

Business was brisk last week. Roses and lilies are in short supply and carnations are none too plentiful for a large demand. Sweet peas are in sufficient supply for requirements, but violet receipts could be larger. Romans, tulips, daffodils and narcissi are in liberal supply and, as a rule, of good quality. Potted plants are selling well.

Club Meeting.

The February meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the residence of H. G. Pauli, with a rather light attendance. The session was largely taken up with a discussion of the preliminary work connected with the fall flower show. R. M. C. Rohlf, C. Sorensen and L. Stapp were appointed a committee to nominate the officers for the ensuing year and to report at the next meeting, when the election will be held. The next meeting will be held at Moline, exact location of the club rooms for the meeting to be announced later. W. G.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

The rush of business prevailing since the advent of the year is still in operation. Valentine's day business was expected to surpass all previous records and more advertising than ever before was done by the retailers for this day.

Prices continue satisfactory. More bulbous stock is offered; there is a weakened call for the lower grades of carnations and roses. Roses continue scarce and high in price in all colors, except the whites, the price of which has declined a little. There is a steady increase in the production of carnations, bulbous stock and sweet peas. Tulips and jonquils seem to take the lead and the crop of these is good. Violets are arriving in inferior condition on account of the cold weather. Green goods are extra scarce.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell reported that he was making big preparations for Valentine's day. He is marketing large quantities of bulbous stock in pans.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has a fine lot of cyclamens, azaleas and bulbous stock. This concern has roses, carnations and sweet peas of uncommonly good quality.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that their shipping business last week was unusually heavy. They now are handling fine bulbous stock and their supply business is heavy.

Henry Kusik & Co. still are rushed in the wire department, the out-of-town trade being unusually strong in this line. The cut flower department also has been quite busy.

The Oakwood Floral & Farm Co. in the near future will devote its entire range to cut flowers. This firm now has several houses of vegetables.

The management of the Forest Hill cemetery is contemplating the erection of several additional houses, larger than any it now operates. These houses will be devoted to cut flowers for the cemetery trade.

Mr. Reinhardt is bringing in some of the best sweet peas this market has had for some time.

DONALD MacDONALD

DONALD MacDONALD

A new Hawlmark Red Rose sent out this year by Alex. Dickson and Sons. This rose has been tested for winter forcing for two years, and it produces more red roses during the winter than any rose now being grown. It is not a large rose, but has perfectly formed, medium sized flowers that sell at sight. Color bright orange carmine; will not turn blue because the base of the petals is orange.

It is not a summer rose, as it has the same substance as Killarney, and from Thanksgiving until May it is a money maker for the rose grower, as no pinching is necessary.

Strong Grafted Plants.....	$35.00 per 100	$300.00 per 1000
Own Root Plants.....	30.00 per 100	250.00 per 1000
Grafting Eyes.....		200.00 per 1000

GOLDEN GEM

Golden yellow seedling Rose. A most beautiful shade of deep golden yellow. A medium sized rose; long pointed bud well formed. A good keeper and very free bloomer, and a color that will sell.

Own Root plants only $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000.

ROSE-PINK OPHELIA

A sport of Ophelia. Color clear Rose Pink. Limited quantity this season. Better order quickly if you want a supply.

Prices—Own Root—Per 100, $30.00; per 250, $70.00; per 1000, $250.00.
Grafted—Per 100, $35.00; per 250, $82.50; per 1000, $300.00.

PRIMEROSE

This beautiful forcing rose is of the general type of Ophelia. The young foliage is a lovely bronzy maroon, finishing bronzy green, and is of good habit and free growth.

The bud is long and pointed, ideal in form, and the color is Indian-yellow with apricot shadings, color at base of petals deep golden; has splendid stem. A fine novelty. Own Root, $25.00 per 100, $200.00 per 1000.
Grafted, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000.

Buhl, Idaho—J. J. Brennan has completed the erection of a greenhouse here and christened the business Buhl Floral Co.

READY NOW

HYACINTHS, DAFFODILS, TULIPS, 3½-in. pots, - $6.30 per 100, f. o. b. Chicago

The root development is complete and shoots started—just brought in from field beds. Hyacinths run one to a pot. Daffodils and Tulips will average three flowers to the pot. These are shipped in 100 lots in paper pots, and are ready for forcing in time for Easter.

JUST AS CHEAP AS THE BULBS — ONLY SELECTED STOCK

Order your shipment immediately, as the plants are immune from frost when shipped in this semi-developed state. Retail florists who have no greenhouses can force these Hyacinths, Daffodils and Tulips in their store windows. Your customers will take advantage of this new offering to prolong the season in their homes. To be successful in this plan, order your supply at once.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was exceptionally good, there having been many dinners and receptions and some profitable funeral work. The telegraph business also showed a considerable increase over previous weeks on both incoming and outgoing orders. Prices on all flowers remain about the same as quoted last week. One notable exception was American Beauty roses, on which there was a heavy run, with a diminished supply, and the price on these advanced to $9 per dozen. The shortage was in part due to the filling by one firm of growers in Anacostia of an order for shipment south of 200 first-quality blooms.

Azaleas are coming in more plentifully and are in fair demand. Lilac is also good and selling well, both cut and potted. Washingtonians seem to be going in more for spring flowers this year than ever before, and centerpieces made of lavender and white sweet peas with forsythia, pussy willow, daffodils, tulips, etc., not only sell readily but bring good prices. Daffodils are more plentiful, although bringing $4 per hundred. Tulips are more in evidence and narcissi are to be had in larger quantities. There is not, however, that oversupply of bulbous stock of previous years.

Carnations are high, but they are more plentiful and some of the strain of preceding weeks has gone. All varieties of roses still are scarce and prices are good. A few inferior flowers can be had at $6 per hundred, but aside from that the minimum is $8 and prices then run all the way up to $20 per hundred. Violets are plentiful, but the demand has been limited because of the cold weather.

Various Notes.

All of the 1916 officers of the Florists' Club were renominated to serve during the year 1917 at the monthly meeting of the club held last week. The election will take place at the meeting scheduled for March 6. C. L. L.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—Madison Mines is a grower of vegetable plants and early vegetables who is preparing to graduate into the florists' class. He already is growing geraniums for his local customers and finds a demand for other stock, which he will undertake to fill.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Stock still is rather short in the market; almost everything cleans up as soon as it comes into the wholesale houses. The demand from out of town for stock is heavy.

Both roses and carnations are short of actual needs and are cleaning up at sight. Easter lilies are fairly plentiful. Daffodils are in good supply and are having a good market. The supply of other bulbous stock, including tulips, freesias, Dutch hyacinths and narcissi, is fair. The cut of sweet peas is large and meets with a good demand. Violets were plentiful for the St. Valentine's day demand this week. Lily of the valley and orchids are fairly plentiful. Other offerings include snapdragons, callas, rubrum lilies and primroses. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett are spending the month at West Palm Beach, Fla., with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some excellent forget-me-nots and Dutch hyacinths.

A fire in the basement of the store of the Ohio Cut Flower Co. last week seriously threatened the storeroom of the concern.

The William Murphy Co. was extremely busy last week with shipping business.

P. J. Olinger has been receiving many orders for rooted cuttings of his new red carnation, Radium. This carnation gave a nice cut for St. Valentine's day for Mr. Olinger.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been having excellent cuts of daffodils.

David Cable is opening a retail flower store, the Cable Flower Shop, at 705 Monmouth street, Newport, Ky.

Ralph Schlomer has now joined the force of C. E. Critchell.

C. J. Jones, who has been on the sick list, is now improving.

Among recent visitors were George McCallum, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. T. Herdigen, Aurora, Ind.; H. F. Winter, Charleston, W. Va.; S. S. Skidelsky and wife, Philadelphia, Pa.; George Hampton, representing the Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Beckman, Middletown, O.; Joseph Marks, representing A. IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The cold and dark weather has caused a decrease in the rose supply, but carnations are plentiful and bulbous stock is coming along nicely. Plenty of violets and sweet peas were to be had for Valentine's day, but Easter lilies were limited in numbers. Plants of all kinds are of good quality, especially cyclamens and primroses, and they find a ready market.

The coal problem has made some of the florists uneasy, both as to prices and scarcity of fuel. Those who seemingly had enough fuel to last through the winter find themselves low, even at this early date.

The last few days of zero weather have caused not a little loss among the greenhousemen.

The Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. store, which has been in the hands of the Grand Rapids Trust Co. for the last two years, has been purchased by George F. Crabb and Miss Jessie Crabb, who will continue the business under the name of Crabb & Hunter Floral Shop.

Eli Cross had a slight loss of stock from a freeze out the night of February 11, when the thermometer registered 10 below.

W. L. Cukerski is running for city commissioner under the new charter.

Charles Patters is cutting some fine Bassett carnations.

L. Kunst has been cutting heavily of Purity freesias. A. F. C.

WESTERLY, R. I.

George L. Stillman was elected a director of the Westerly Automatic Telephone Co. at the annual meeting held last week.

Louis J. Reuter was a business visitor to New York last week.

Conrad Schultz made a trip to Providence last week. He has leased the store formerly conducted by Louis P. Rankin.

Louis P. Rankin, who disappeared from here last September and who was located in Memphis, Tenn., about a fortnight ago, after wandering about the country in a state of loss of memory, will be joined by his family at an early date. It is understood that he has recovered from his mental disorder and that he intends to enter the flower business in that city. W. H. M.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

Lawn Hose Made for Rough Usage

We know all about the trouble florists have with the ordinary kind of lawn hose.

We know that nothing but the very best grade of hose will give satisfactory service against the hard usage it must withstand around the greenhouse.

Therefore when we say that Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is made to meet the most trying conditions, we have in mind especially the use of this hose around the greenhouse.

You can drag Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose over cinder and concrete walks and around sharp bench legs. You can leave it lying in the sun and where wheelbarrows run over it. We do not expect you to always put it away and dry it out.

We have all these things in mind when we tell you that Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is the most serviceable, all-around good hose that the florist can possibly buy.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is made in such a way that it cannot kink and it is guaranteed not to burst at any time within two whole lawn hose seasons.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

HAS PIPE ON HAND.

I intend to build a small greenhouse and should like to get your advice about the piping. The house will run north and south and will be 13⅔x25. It will be eight and one-half feet high to the ridge. The side walls will be four feet high, with two feet of glass in each wall. The south gable will be glass. The remainder of the walls will be of matched lumber. What piping will be needed to heat this house to 60 degrees when the outdoor temperature is 16 degrees below zero? I have some 2-inch and 2½-inch pipe on hand. Could I use 2-inch flows with 1½-inch returns, and how many of each would be needed?

D. V. P.—Minn.

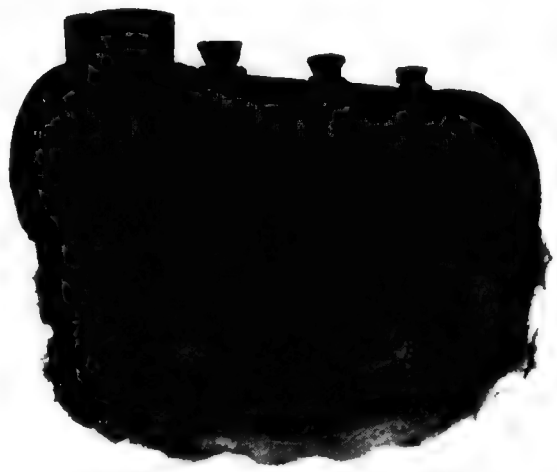
There are various combinations of the pipe mentioned that could be used in the house described. If there are three benches in the house, we would use three 2-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the other about one foot below the ridge, and would connect each of them with a coil of 1½-inch pipes under the corresponding bench. Five pipes may be used under each of the side benches and three in the coil under the middle bench.

Another method of piping would be to use a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each plate and connect each flow pipe with either six 2-inch or eight 1½-inch returns.

The flow and return pipes should have a fall of one inch in ten or twelve feet and the expansion tank should be connected with the highest part of the system.

A HOUSE WITH A PROJECTION.

I am building a new greenhouse, 13½x100 and twelve feet to the ridge, with a projection 8½x21. There will be four feet of glass in one side. The old house adjoining is 27x100 and is heated by fourteen 3½-inch cast-iron pipes. It has five open tanks. I shall use the same boilers to heat both houses. The pipes will have a rise of one and one-half feet in 100 feet.



I have been told that it would be much cheaper and just as effective to use 2-inch pipe instead of expensive 3½-inch cast-iron pipe. I have also been told that it will not be necessary to buy an expansion tank and that only one automatic air valve will be needed. Is this correct? How many flows and returns will be required to heat the warmer end of the house, the forcing house, 8½x21, to a temperature of 60 degrees or more when the outside temperature is at zero? What piping will be required to heat the rest of the house, 13½x100, to 55 degrees? I have not had any experience with pipe smaller than 3½-inch. E. J. H.

To heat a greenhouse 13½x100 to a temperature of 55 degrees in zero weather, when there are four feet of glass in one side wall, we would use two 2½-inch flow pipes, carried on the wall plates. Or, if coils are desired under the middle bench, we would use three 2-inch flow pipes, placing the third pipe a foot or so below the ridge. In either case we would install six 2-inch returns. If two flow pipes are used, we would place three returns under each side bench. If three flow pipes are used, there should be two pipes under each of the three benches. For the propagating house, 8½x21, we would run one 2-inch flow pipe overhead and four 2-inch returns under the bench.

If the pipes run uphill, there should be an automatic air valve at the highest point in each flow pipe. If the flow pipes can be given a slight fall, however, no air valves will be required, but the highest part of each flow should be connected with a 20-gallon galvanized sheet iron expansion tank, although, if there is an air valve in the highest point of each flow, the expansion tanks in the old house would suffice for both.

In case the expansion tanks in the old house are comparatively low, it will not be possible to carry the flow pipes on the plates and under the ridge as suggested, and unless the expansion tanks can be raised it will be necessary to lower the flows to a point two feet below the tops of the expansion tanks, and use only two flows. It is always well to have a valve in each flow pipe, and, if there is another in each main return, it will sometimes be helpful about making repairs.

PIPING HIS FIRST HOUSE.

I am planning to build a small house, 10x24, with 4-foot sides. I have had no experience in hot water heating. How much pipe will be required to heat this house to 55 degrees in zero weather? Where shall I place the pipes and the expansion tank? There will be no glass in the side walls. The house will run east and west and will be located in a sheltered spot, protected from west and north winds. Would you advise putting the boiler in a pit or on a level with the floor? S. E. C.—Mass.

For heating the house described, we would use one 2-inch flow pipe upon each plate and connect each flow with three 1½-inch returns under the side benches. The main flow leading into the house should be 2½-inch if the port in the boiler is of that size, although a 2-inch pipe would answer.

We would prefer to locate the boiler in a pit, so that there would be three or four feet between the top of the boiler and the lower end of the return coils. Carry up the flow pipe to a point an inch or so higher than the highest point of the flows in the greenhouse proper, and from the highest point in the main flow carry up a ¾-inch pipe to a 5-gallon expansion tank. Give both return and flow pipes a slight fall, which will do away with the need of air valves. In case it is necessary to place the boiler on a level with the walks in the greenhouse, a closed system should be used.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The extremely cold weather has curtailed the supply of cut flowers to a considerable extent. Roses are in short supply, especially Russell, Killarney and Ophelia. Shawyer roses are the most plentiful. Carnations are in moderate supply.

Trade last week was exceedingly active. Funeral work was heavy and the demand for decorations better than ever before. The month of February promises to outdo January in the volume of business transacted. Everyone, both retailer and wholesaler, is rushed with orders, and the growers could do twice as much business if they could produce the flowers, especially roses.

Easter lilies are in fine supply and are of excellent quality, with large blooms and long stems. Orchids are in good supply, especially Cattleya Trianæ and Schroederæ. Bulbous stock is moving well, including Dutch hyacinths, Romans, narcissi, jonquils, daffodils, tulips and freesias. Sweet peas are plentiful and are finding a good market. Violets and primroses are in good supply. Pussy willows appeared in the market last week and retailed for $1 per dozen. The sale of blooming plants continues brisk.

Plans last week for St. Valentine's day business were comprehensive—including an advertising campaign, window decorations, etc. A record business was expected.

Various Notes.

Traveling men who called last week and left with smiling countenances were E. S. Fabin, of the Haeger Potteries, of Dundee, Ill.; J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia; I. M. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia.

Knecht & Co. had an unfortunate accident at their greenhouses February 5, when one of the large boilers burned out, causing an explosion. Luckily, the other boiler was intact and the men were able to run a temperature of about 55 degrees until another boiler could be installed. The damage, which was confined to the boiler shed, will amount to several hundred dollars.

S. Hudson, orchid grower for W. J. & M. S. Vesey, is cutting a fine lot of Schroederæ and Cattleya Trianæ. The market is reported brisk. The Vesey greenhouses are showing a fine crop of carnations, Shawyer roses and Easter lilies of splendid quality. Other roses are scarce and many orders are being refused. W. J. Vesey, Jr., has returned from Huntington, W. Va., where he went in the interests of his firm to secure a necessary increase in the coal supply.

On account of the boiler explosion at the Knecht & Co. greenhouses, the meeting of the Florists' Club, scheduled for SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business has been extremely good during the last week. Funeral work has been heavy, and never before in the history of the business has the call for sick room flowers been so large. The demand has been in excess of the supply. Roses are still scarce and sell at $1.50 to $4 per dozen. Carnations are in fair supply and bring $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Spring flowers are arriving more plentifully and, as usual at this time of the year, find an excellent sale. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful and are in good demand. Valley remains scarce. Snapdragons, pansies, freesias, calendulas and violets have a steady sale; potted bulbous stock, primroses, cyclamens, azaleas and cinerarias find a ready outlet. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Scranton Florists' Club was held at the home of T. B. McClintock, on Electric street, February 5. There was a large attendance and much business was transacted. Reports from the flower show committee showed that this year's show perhaps will be the greatest ever. F. G. Moran, who constitutes a committee on out-of-state exhibits, reported that much space has been taken and suggests that all concerns desiring to exhibit should notify him as soon as possible. Coöperative advertising for St. Valentine's day was discussed, and members agreed that it was the only way to advertise large flower days. A luncheon was served by Mrs. T. B. McClintock, the gracious hostess.

A. L. Besancon & Co. last week had a fine window display of spring plants and cut flowers. This company is having a heavy run of funeral work and wedding decorations. Some excellent Ophelia and Russell roses were noted at the store.

The outlook for St. Valentine's day business was promising. The florists undertook extensive advertising this year. All the windows were decorated with heart-shaped novelties, potted plants and baskets of cut flowers.

Muir & Co. report a busy week of funeral work and counter trade.

The Market.

The increasing quantities of bulb stock now being received are causing a general easing off in prices. Owing to the unusually large number of funerals, business keeps steadily up, so that everything in the way of cut flowers is cleaned up daily. Daffodils came into the market last week in a golden flood, but the quantities have been such that there has not been a golden stream returning to the coffers of the growers. The wholesale price of daffodils dropped nearly seventy-five per cent.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The weather last week was unusually cold. Aside from the fact that it makes the coal pile shrink rapidly, compels the express companies to refuse shipments and makes it impossible to ship plants with any degree of satisfaction, the cold weather does not bother the trade much. It held back orders for St. Valentine's day, however, and these did not come in until the last minute. Trade for that occasion was just about normal, and all stock sold readily. A little advertising would have helped quite a bit, as it has been demonstrated that this method of bringing the days to the notice of the public has been successful in the past. There was no advertising done, except window displays, and these naturally did not reach the multitude that a newspaper campaign would have.

Violets and sweet peas, of course, were in big demand, but the supply was sufficiently large to take care of the orders. The quality of the stock was good and no complaints were heard on that score. Cattleyas also had a big call and the stock was in fine shape. All orders were taken care of on this stock, but there was no surplus and good prices were realized.

Roses are in limited supply and short stock, as usual, is quite scarce. Russell roses are scarce and all orders are being cut down to some extent. Valley is scarce and there are practically no lilies in the market. There are plenty of carnations of all colors to go around, and some to spare. The market is not glutted to any extent, however, and the supply is being moved at good prices.

There is a large supply of spring stock now and it cleans up well. Daffodils are lagging a little, though the supply is comparatively small. Small plants have had a large sale; large quantities were moved last week.

Taken as a whole, business has been quite good during the last week, despite adverse conditions.

Various Notes.

Alfred Schiller is improving; his condition is most satisfactory. He will, however, remain at the hospital for some time yet.

William Lubliner, of 225 Grand avenue, lost a window of his store February 7. The building, which was remodeled before he took the location, settled slightly, and the big plate glass window suddenly crumpled up. Although there was a display of plants and flowers in the window, there was no damage done. Mr. Lubliner got quick service and inside of an hour and a half the light had been replaced, without any of the stock suffering from exposure. H. J. S.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

The demand for flowers during the last two or three weeks has broken all records. Stock has been cleaned up closely in all lines and there is a great scramble for it daily. Roses, most of them still off crop, were far from sufficient to meet the heavy demand and the prices are high on those that arrive. Beauties are exceedingly scarce and prospects for a better supply are poor. Russell and Reid roses have taken the place of Beauties and fine stocks of these are to be seen. Ophelia still holds its own as the best all-around rose at this time and is much in demand.

Carnations are plentiful but clean up daily, with no chance of a surplus at any time. Sweet peas have been much in evidence and quantities of them are used at good prices. Bulbous stock is scarce as yet. Only a few tulips, jonquils and Dutch hyacinths are seen, and they do not begin to meet the heavy demand. Violets are moving nicely and the quality is good, both in singles and doubles. Valley is more plentiful, with the prices high and the quality nothing above the average. Lilies are cleared easily and the supply does not meet the demand.

Potted plants are moving nicely, but it has been a difficult proposition to deliver them safely during the cold snap. Azaleas are a disappointment, as many have blighted buds. All hope that the late ones will be in better shape. Cyclamens and other plants are moving well, at fair prices.

Various Notes.

Richard Winters, of Winters & Kramer, is recovering from his attack of rheumatism. He has had quite a siege of it and has been confined to his home for several weeks.

Robert Buehler is convalescing slowly, and the trade hopes that he will be completely himself before long.

Stephens & Son report a great scarcity of stock and great difficulty in procuring enough to fill orders.

E. Metzmaier is short on stock but long on work.

The Columbus Floral Co. has no trouble in disposing of stock these days. It can promise nothing from one day to the next.

DRIP

The Eave That Takes All Care of It

THIS Z-Bar Eave Plate of ours is an Eave Plate and Drip Gutter combined.

It does away entirely with the numerous shade-casting fittings and the necessity of hanging a drip gutter, more or less in the way, below the plate.

But that isn't all. The riveting of that angle drip gutter to the plate stiffens it, making it unnecessary, in the Half Iron Frame house, to have any middle between-the-posts support from the plate to the sill.

Of course, a drip gutter is not a necessity; but when its use adds strength to the house — why not have it?

You know we go anywhere for business—or to talk business.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

The prices of flowers continue high as a rule. Easter lilies now coming in, of excellent quality, bring $3, $4 and more per dozen retail. Roses are good and the better blooms bring $2, $2.50 and up per dozen. Valley sells at $1 a dozen. During the last week potted tulips became more plentiful, but they are of good quality. Jonquils are plentiful and of good quality. Both tulips and jonquils sell well. Carnations are good and retail at 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are coming more plentifully, with the Spencers leading in popularity. Violets are abundant and good, and sell at retail from 60 to 75 cents per hundred. Business in general is good.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report a great deal of funeral work during the last two weeks. Transient work has been quiet.

John Blakeley, of Elizabeth, finds business good and is optimistic as to the future. R. B. M.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held at the G. H. Sinclair establishment, Holyoke, February 6, President George Strugnell presiding. E. J. Canning, who recently attended the convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association, aroused keen interest by an instructive talk on the proposed bill to prohibit plant importations. It was felt that such a drastic measure, if allowed to pass, would seriously hamper nurserymen and florists, without achieving the purpose of the bill.

President Strugnell exhibited a splendid specimen plant of cyclamen. It would have been hard to beat anywhere and deserved the certificate of merit awarded. G. H. Sinclair had a good display of carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons, mignonette and forget-me-nots. D. J. Gallivan showed a vase of Carnation Gorgeous. H. E. D.

GLADIOLI.

WORDS OF PRAISE FOR THE GLADIOLUS MRS. E. W. FRYER.

Epping, N. S. W., Australia.

Mr. W. E. Fryer, Mantorville, Minn., U. S. A.

Dear Sir: Just a note as I promised to report on the gladiolus Mrs. W. E. Fryer. This now has bloomed with me and it is without doubt one of the finest I have seen.

As it was the first parcel to arrive from America this season, it got the pride of place in planting—right near the front gate, and people are attracted by the bright patch it makes in the garden. Yours faithfully,

A. WHITE.
Lower Hutt, New Zealand.

Mr. Willis E. Fryer, Mantorville, Minn., U. S. A.

Dear Sir: Referring to yours of March 16th last, we have this to state, that we have flowered your gladiolus novelty, Mrs. W. E. Fryer, and are very much pleased with its pure, bright color and would ask you to be so good as to send us fifty as early in the fall as possible. We are yours faithfully,

ORR BROTHERS.
Los Angeles, Cal.

Willis E. Fryer, Mantorville, Minn.

Dear Mr. Fryer: The bulbs of the gladiolus Mrs. W. E. Fryer, about which you ask me, were a surprise to me when in bloom. I think it one of the finest varieties yet produced in the gladiolus line. Yours very truly,

W. J. COLCLEUGH.

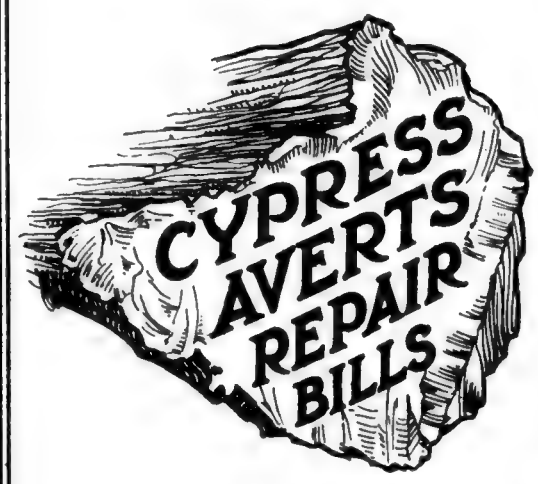
WOOD LABELS.



LABELS FOR NURSERYMEN AND FLORISTS.
Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

Des Moines, Ia.—R. Holt and L. T. Chrisman, proprietors of the Kirkwood Floral Co., recently returned from an eastern buying trip. Since the opening of the company's store September 1, 1916, business has been growing by leaps and bounds. Starting out with one clerk, the press of orders has made it necessary to employ a night force and add two salesmen to the day force. A specially designed and heated automobile serves two purposes—it delivers orders and it advertises the company by its uniqueness. This concern has had great success in featuring funeral baskets.

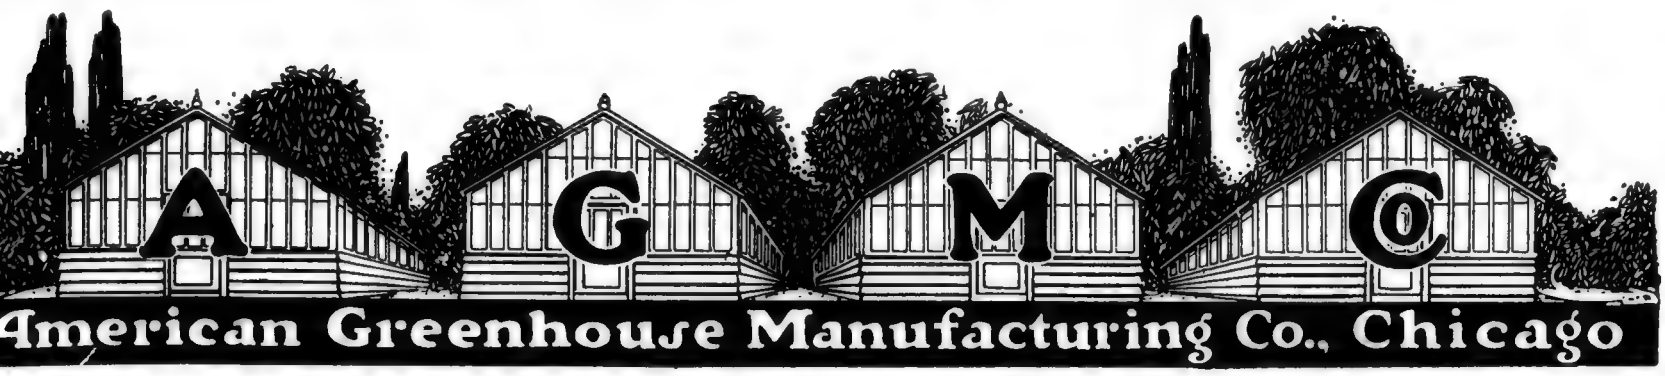
Sash Opening Device and Greenhouse Fittings

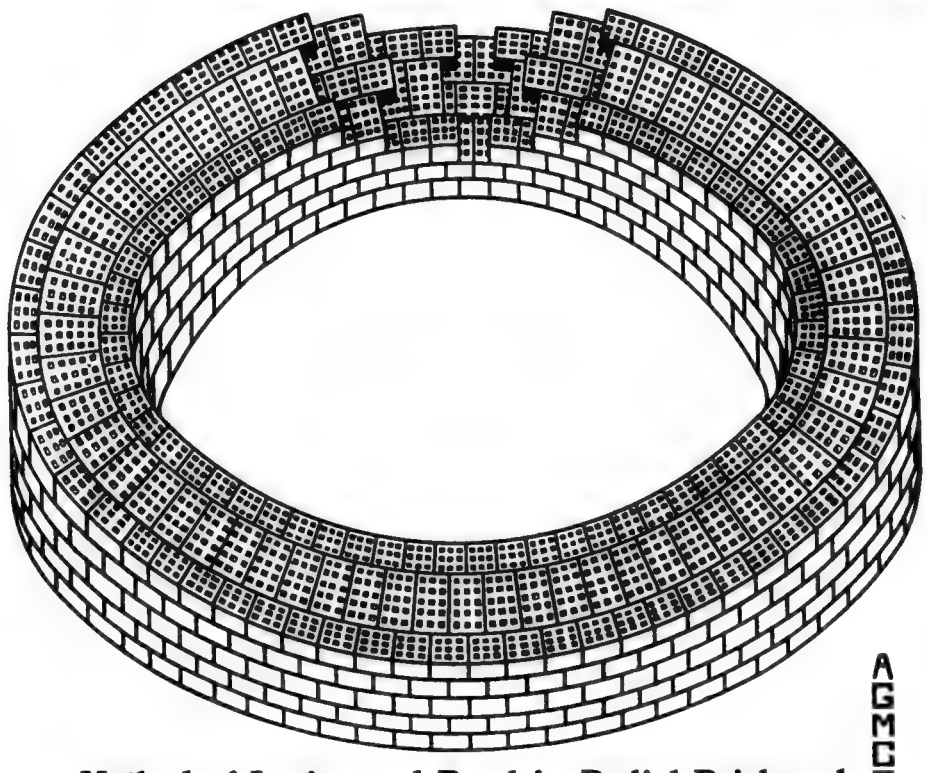
Did you ever stop and notice this cut of the Big Advance Sash Operator? Just at a glance you see a neatly constructed operator. Then starting to look, you see a well built machine plate with worm and gear, then you see a good heavy chain made of the best steel. The hand wheel shows mechanical construction in strongness and appearance. Then going to the top of the machine, examine the roller pipe bearing, the strong but neatly designed sprocket wheel, the angle bracket and other parts. Well, the arms and hangers you notice are made for years' use.

Now that you have noticed each and every part, just picture it in your new or old house. Wouldn't it make a difference? Something that gives years of satisfactory service. All up-to-date florists know the importance of proper ventilation and, therefore, select this unequaled device. Thirteen years devoted to this line means we have a device that is well worth inspection.



We cannot explain how much time and trouble our greenhouse fittings will save you, for there isn't enough space on this page. You know our line, however, and can see what they mean to you.

Our catalogue gives further and more detailed information. Just take one minute of your valuable time and write us for Catalogue U.



Slight increase in our prices was made recently and this catalogue gives full particulars.

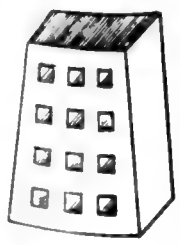
What do You think of THIS?



Method of Laying and Bond in Radial Brickwork

—one of the biggest factors in one of your biggest problems—your heating

You aren't worth much for work when your lungs are shot to pieces, are you? Your brawny arm and your strong right hand soon fail when your breath's cut off, don't they? Surely, you say. Well, that's just the point—your chimney is the lungs of your greenhouse plant. Take care of your lungs!

You want to know why the AGMCO chimney is better than others? Because it isn't a pile of ordinary building brick; it is built of AGMCO radial blocks specially made for the purpose. An eight-inch wall of AGMCO radial blocks is equivalent in strength to a twelve-inch wall of common brick. Molded with vertical perforations, as you see in the cut, these radial blocks are most thoroughly and uniformly burned, increasing, to a marked degree, their density and strength. The perforations form a dead air space around the chimney, insulating the column of hot gases, rising on the inside, from sudden changes of temperature in the outer air. This results in a maximum draft under all conditions.

Study the method of laying and bond. When the blocks are laid in the wall, the mortar is pressed into the perforations, locking them together with a mortise and tenon joint, as it were. This, with the breaking of the joints by use of different lengths of AGMCO radial blocks, forms a most perfect bond, keying the structure in one solid mass from foundation to top.

Is your heating system working to its full efficiency?
Is it equal to the task you are imposing on it?
Is your chimney built this way?
If you can't answer "yes"—write to us.
If you can—write anyway.
You may want another chimney.

COLD WEATHER

Geo. Valker's Range at Minot, N. D.

Last summer we built some greenhouses, a large brick service building and installed two power boilers and complete vacuum heating system for Mr. George Valker, at Minot, N. D.

Today, right in the midst of a "below-zero" spell of weather, Mr. Valker paid us a visit, wearing his usual bright smile.

Naturally during this cold weather, when a great many florists are having trouble with their heating systems, we asked Mr. Valker if he wasn't a bit worried about his greenhouses.

"Not in the least," was his instant reply. "The heating system has given such perfect satisfaction that, although we have had the thermometer as low as 35° below zero, we had no difficulty at all in maintaining our temperature."

Just give us a chance on your greenhouse problems; you will not be disappointed.

WHY SHOULD YOU TAKE A CHANCE

When You Can Get a Machine That Is Absolutely Dependable?

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 15, 1916.
John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.
Gentlemen: With reference to your letter of December 14, would say that we have used at least four different ventilators with little satisfaction; yours, however, has proved an exception. We are exceedingly well pleased with it. We have never seen anything in this line as satisfactory as the double-arm feature.
Yours truly,
Drumm Seed & Floral Co.

Gentlemen: With great satisfaction we have used, for many years, your ventilating machines at our greenhouses. Your double-acting 20th Century Arm is a great success. We like it better than anything we have on the place.
Respectfully yours,

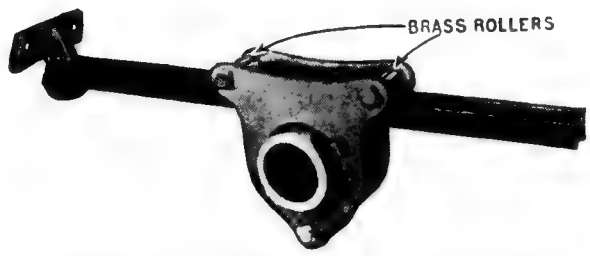
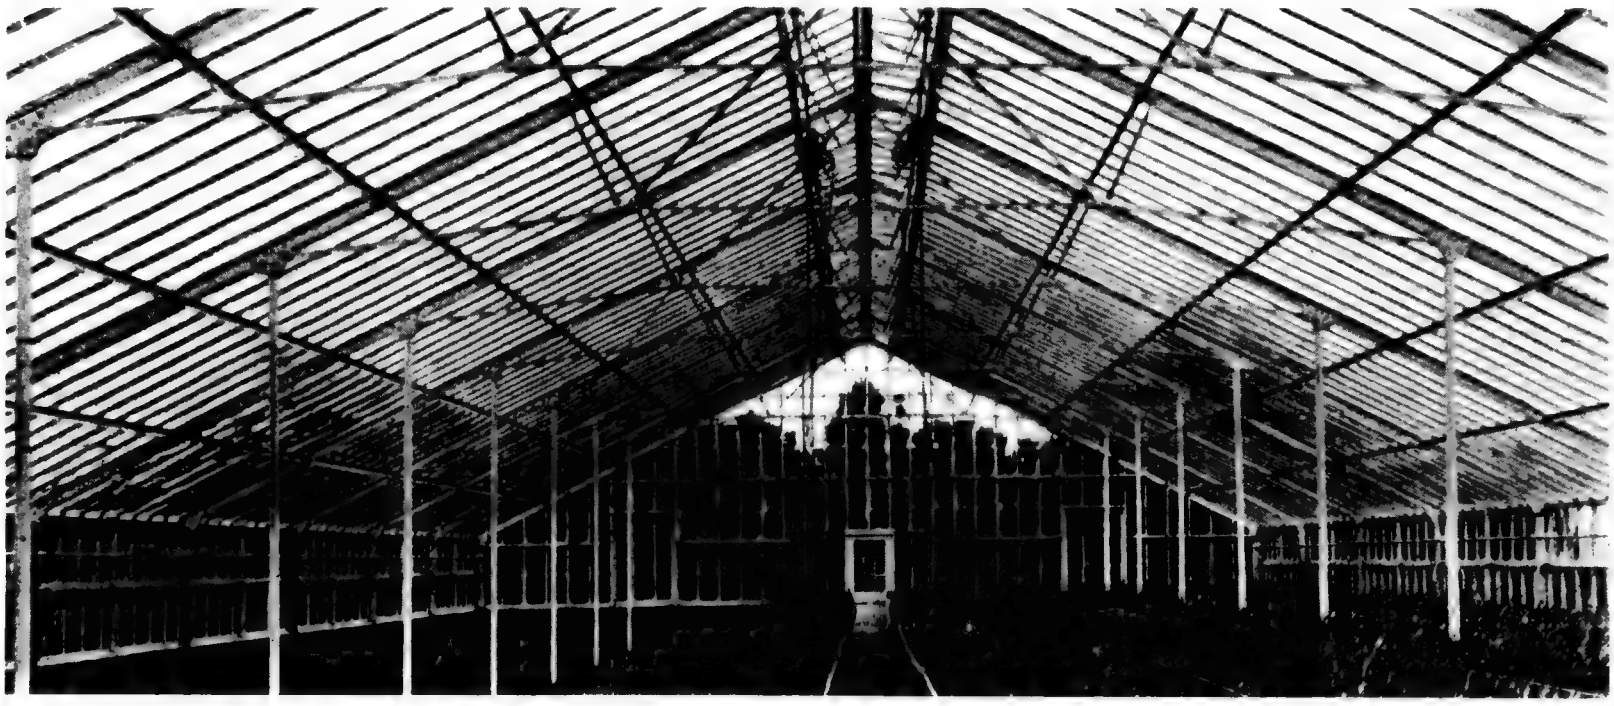
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS PAGES TWO AND THREE

The Heiss Company's Iron Frame house, 51 x 250 feet, is on the outskirts of Dayton. They have a most attractive retail flower shop in the very heart of the city.



The Heiss Company, of Dayton, Ohio Erected this House Themselves

TO rightly erect an Iron Frame house, 51 x 250 feet, is indeed a big task, even for trained erecting men like ours.



Trained as they are in making every move count, and to take advantage of the many mechanical helps both big and little, they can put up a complete frame in a surprisingly short time.

Because, however, of the simplicity of our Iron Frame construction, and the fact that so many of the parts are all assembled and hot riveted together at our factories before shipment, the grower can very successfully do his own erecting of them. Most of the growers who start out doing their own erecting, sooner or later (generally sooner) give it up. They find that in the end it really is more economical to have us do it for them.

For your very careful consideration, let us give you a figure for just the materials alone. And also erected.

The counter-balanced ventilating gear is used. The rack and pinion, with its brass roller bearing, take the place of arm and rods. The twisting of the sash is greatly lessened.

NEW CARNATIONS

ROSALIA—Cerise pink, large three and one-half inch flower of a true cerise pink color. Form is perfect. Calyx strong, never bursting. Stem is at all times strong and wiry. The growth is far above the average when we consider vigor, health and early and free flowering qualities. ROSALIA is a decided improvement on ROSETTE, having a better color and a better commercial habit.

OLD GOLD—We offer this as the earliest and most free flowering yellow carnation we have yet produced. A decided improvement over YELLOW PRINCE, being of a stronger growth, is perfectly clean and healthy, produces larger stems and more bloom. The color is a deep yellow with faint pink stripes.

The above two varieties, Price: $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

NEW LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM

FALL BEAUTY—A large Japanese reflex of a pleasing pink color with a shading of deep cream to the base of the petals and center of the flower. Has an extra strong stem, is especially fine for Thanksgiving, maturing November 25th to December 10th. The color, combined with its being so late and its extra keeping qualities, makes it of especial commercial value.

Price: $3.50 per doz.; $30.00 per 100

THE BEST RED

What are you going to plant for red this year? is a question confronting every grower of carnations. Perhaps we can help you solve it. Naturally you want to plant a winner. In the 100 scarlet class at the A. C. S. exhibition, there were eight entries, embracing practically all the new and standard varieties, and easily the most representative class in the whole show. Our Merry Christmas topped them all, establishing itself as the peer of all scarlet carnations. That ought to help you in making your choice. If you want to be convinced as to its productiveness, come and see it growing. It's the only red we shall grow in quantity next year. February 20th delivery, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

SPRING WINDOWS THAT SELL STOCK

Though normal, healthy people usually enjoy crisp winter weather, yet they look forward longingly to nature's spring reawakening. Hence a realistic spring window is sure to strike a responsive chord in the hearts of the passers-by. The approach of the vernal season, therefore, provides great opportunities for the window decorator.

By FRANK D. PELICANO
Of Pelicano, Rossi & Co.

SPRING is approaching with a fine assortment of bulbous stock, such as daffodils, tulips, hyacinths and other forms of narcissi. As they are about the first brightness and cheer after a long, dismal winter, people are especially susceptible to their charm and an unusual window display is likely to prove irresistible. An artistic basket of spring flowers is emblematic and suggestive of the season and nothing is more tempting—not the same old basket we used to make, however, as basket arrangement, like everything else, must reflect the spirit of the times in order to attract and hold attention. Combination baskets with large, "sassy" bows of ribbon are popular at present.

A Combination Basket.

In making an effective combination basket, one should first select his stock, then his ribbon. A low basket, with a low handle and tin container, so all the stock can be in water, is preferable. Do not mix the colors all up. A better effect can be obtained by keeping every line distinct. This is more essential to the art of a basket than the coloring. Distinct coloring is better than too much harmony. If a basket is made in light pastel shades and something seems to be lacking, try introducing a line of hard color. It may give the touch of life that is required. Mass the flowers in order to bring out the color, and use contrasting colors if possible. People want color creations nowadays, but one must avoid the danger of going to extremes.

As an example, light blue hyacinths, Yellow Prince tulips, snowdrops or lily of the valley and violets make a good combination. Keep each kind of flowers by themselves, so they will contrast well. Select a low-handled basket and save a few flowers for the handle where your delft blue ribbon is tied into a stiff bow.

A Meaning in the Ribbon.

The bow should never sprawl carelessly across the basket and flop over the sides. The effect is insipid. The ribbon should have a meaning. For instance, it may be drawn tightly under the basket and up to the handle on both sides, so as to give the idea it has something to do with keeping the flowers in the basket. Make the bow stand out with life, in millinery style.

Some designers can work to much better advantage than others on account of better materials. Good ideas are rendered more or less ineffective by poor materials. The wisdom of extreme economy in a window trim is questionable, as his display is the best advertising medium a florist has. People talk when they see something clever and desirable, and more if they receive it. Printed matter is not always striking, whereas windows can always be made so.

In arranging a window it is advisable to keep to one or two colors if possible. If your store has two windows, you are at a better advantage than if it has only one. For instance, you can use one for a scenic display and the other for commercial purposes.

Picture windows are only to attract attention, and it is poor policy to feature two of them at the same time. The idea is to stop the people by means of the scenic display and then get them interested in your supplementary commercial window. The illustration on this page shows two such windows featured together.

Too Much Mixture.

There is a tendency among some florists, especially where window display space is limited, to show as much stock as possible in that space, with the result that they have variety and that is all that can be said of their exhibit. Personally, I think too much mixture is a mistake in any kind of window trim. Florists will notice that in other lines of business the display managers do not crowd their windows, and their coloring is watched more than anything else. Originality and effectiveness are the qualities sought by window dressers identified with the department stores, furniture houses, sporting goods and electric light stores, and the florists must keep in line. People passing a crowded window are confused by the excessive variety and really see nothing, whereas a few objects, maybe only one, if well placed, will stand a good chance of catching the eye and causing a great many passers-by to halt for further inspection. The more the better.

A dark, glossy, green tile flooring proves highly satisfactory in a florist's window. It does not show spilled water and it provides a dark setting. Flowers are like diamonds: they are alive with color and a dark setting brings out their life. Artificial light is better, but natural light is good if enough can be obtained. Light portieres, gathered at both sides so they will not take away much light, finish off some windows in elegant style. I would say the woodwork would better be pure white than cream.

A pergola effect is airy and suggestive for some kinds of displays. An appropriate setting will improve the display of any article, and time and money spent in securing the proper surroundings are well expended. There is little danger of driving away middle-class trade by too much style. It is the stock you carry that you are striving to show to advantage.

If necessary, price your stock once in a while; firms in all other lines of business do so. But when you mention prices, make them special offers.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE RETAILER'S PROFIT.

As indicating the rapidity with which the cost of operating a retail flower store is rising, a man who is recognized as one of the most successful in his city states that in the best year he ever had his net profits were seventeen per cent of his total sales, while by last year they had decreased to twelve per cent of a somewhat larger total. This year he expects to see the net cut to ten per cent of the sales, ninety per cent as against a former eighty-three per cent being consumed in operating expenses and the purchase of merchandise.

The figures become all the more interesting when it is stated that this retail florist never has catered to "cheap" trade, but has handled good stock and charged good prices. Indeed, although most retailers consider 100 per cent the necessary margin on cut flowers, this retailer has not hesitated to charge more. That his prices have not been unreasonable is shown by the fact that the yearly sales have grown steadily if not rapidly, while today the total sales are the largest ever known, the percentage added to the cost of goods is higher than it ever was before and yet the net profit is the smallest it ever has been.

The question is, what profit remains for the man who has not raised prices?

THE WOMAN FLORIST.

[The reply of Mrs. J. Drew-Bear, of the London Flower Shop, Philadelphia, to frequent interrogations regarding the florists' business as an occupation for women.]

In the large city or country town there is no more delightful or profitable occupation for a woman than the florists' business. Being in love with your business does not necessarily mean success, but dislike for your business is almost sure to cause failure.

Do you know of a woman who does not love flowers, growing them, handling and arranging them? The woman at least has this asset for success.

In addition to love for the business you must possess the following:

A knowledge of finance.

The art of buying and selling.

Artistic making up and arranging.

The actual capital required need not be large at first, but you should have sufficient outside resources to keep yourself or family for at least two years without drawing a dollar from the business, for as your business increases it will necessarily require larger capital.

Making a Start.

I well remember my first year as a florist. Never did I work harder or longer hours. Not a dollar was drawn out of the business for my labor, but all expenses were paid and my profits for the year were just $5. I thought I had done well and think so still, as the foundation of success was laid in that first year. Taking a position in a successful florists' shop will be of great aid in the art of arranging and putting up flowers, and if you will keep your eyes and ears open you will master much of the difficulties of buying.

There must be a willingness on your part to give up all outside pleasures during the winter and to devote as much time as may be necessary to the business. You may be called on at times to give twenty out of twenty-four hours, or to go to work at 3 o'clock in the morning to get out an important order at 8 o'clock.

Rules for Success.

Should any of my readers decide to engage in the florists' business, let me advise them to adhere strictly to the following rules:

First. Send out absolutely fresh flowers. Refuse to sell stale ones at any price. Throw them away.

Second. Be punctual to the minute in filling an order.

Third. Rectify any complaint at once, without regard to the justice of the claim. No matter whether it is your fault or theirs, make it right—it pays.

This third rule may seem absurd at first sight, but it is not. Let me give you an example of an actual occurrence. Last fall a gentleman ordered a corsage of roses to be worn at a football game. The buds were too tight to be used for that purpose. He was told so, but insisted. Shortly afterward I was told by a mutual friend that the corsage had not been a success. I immediately wrote the young man, told him that I regretted to hear that the roses were unsatisfactory, and enclosed a check for the amount of the purchase. He at once called me on the phone, stated that he had made no complaint and could not accept the check. I insisted, however, and stated that it was not necessary for him to make a complaint, that the mere knowledge on our part that the work proved unsatisfactory was sufficient.

Since then I have sold hundreds of dollars' worth of flowers to this young man and his family, and recently had the pleasure of furnishing the decorations and bridal bouquets for the young man and the identical young lady who wore the corsage. If you will adhere rigidly to these three rules, they will keep you wonderfully on the road to success.

COVER FOR A GRAVE.

Here is a style of funeral piece, not at all common, which might well be carried in mind for use when something out of the ordinary is called for. It is a cover for a grave, made on a solid frame and intended to be placed over the grave at the conclusion of the services.

The piece illustrated was made by the Lang Floral & Nursery Co., Dallas, Tex., using miscellaneous flowers. The price of the piece was $150, the money being raised by subscription among the fellow-employees of the deceased. The inscription was: "Santa Fe employees; every flower a friend."

WHY RESULTS VARY.

"Here is the reason one gets the business and the other does not," said Hilmer V. Swenson, in discussing florists' advertising. "Ninety-nine times out of 100 where a man does not get results on his advertising, investigation shows that he went at it half-heartedly. In other words, if he used folders, all he would do would be to address them, mail them out and that was all there was to it. Or he would contract for space in the newspapers and put in any old kind of ad, usually at the last minute, and then it would only be

BLANK & BLANK,
Florists and Decorators,
Flowers for all Occasions, or something to that effect. Many florists are advertising in this way, spending hundreds of dollars and not getting results. They blame the advertising, whereas the blame really lies on themselves.

"Now, take the man who is successful with his advertising. He is using the same mediums as the other fellow, either newspaper or mail advertising, signboards or street car cards. Why does he get results? Here is the reason:

"He thinks enough of every dollar he spends for advertising to take the trouble of giving the matter thought. He does not advertise spasmodically—he advertises systematically. He keeps a careful check on his mailing lists, makes note of the new customers that come in to his store and follows these names up with literature, featuring his goods in a most interesting way. He watches the newspapers for notices of weddings and social functions and then gets on the job and gets the business. He carefully makes up his mind as to the proper time to send out his circulars. His newspaper ads are attractive—they feature something that is seasonable and something he knows that people are looking for. There is a reason for every move, because he has given it careful thought.

"In other words, the man you hear of who has made his business a success, through advertising, has done some mighty intelligent thinking, giving his advertising and sales problems as much thought as is ordinarily given to the selection of his flowers."

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Mitchell, S. D.—It is alleged that The Newburys, Inc., has become insolvent. D. B. Gurney, of the Gurney Seed & Nursery Co., Yankton, S. D., says: "We hold a mortgage of $23,000 dated February 1, 1912, of which $11,500 was payable February 1, 1917, and $11,500 comes due in 1922, with five per cent interest. The interest was defaulted in 1916 and February 1, 1917, both principal payment and interest were defaulted. The property was sold for taxes of 1915 and the tax now due, with penalties and interest, amounts to nearly $1,000. There are owing to 101 creditors sums varying from 75 cents to $1,250 and aggregating $7,864.82. The largest claim is that of a bank and is secured by mortgage covering all personal property and part of the accounts receivable, which hardly would cover the claim. The accounts receivable are $3,790, but include $2,030 on incompleted contracts which will cost $1,000 to complete. The book accounts are $1,769." Mr. Gurney states that the stockholders of the corporation are willing to turn the property over to him in satisfaction of the mortgage and he offers the creditors 25 cents on the dollar to get quick action and save legal expense. For many years The Newburys was one of the most prosperous establishments in the northwest, doing a general florists' and nursery business. In 1912 a corporation was formed, with $100,000 capital stock, and later in that year the founder and his family sold their interests and removed to Long Beach, Cal. W. T. Marsh, formerly of McCook, Neb., then became manager for the Mitchell owners, none of whom were experienced in the trade.

WHEN TO SOW SEEDS.

Please state when the seeds of the following plants should be sown to have them in bloom for the Christmas and New Year's trade: Angelonia, browallia, cytisus, Impatiens Holstii and Sultani, cineraria, wallflower and Acacia dealbata. C. W. P.—Ont.

Some of the plants referred to in the foregoing list, wanted for winter flowering, would better be produced from cuttings; for example, cytisus and Acacia dealbata, though to get good-sized plants of the latter will require two years. Seeds of angelonia, browallia, impatiens and cineraria should be sown in July or August. Wallflower from seeds sown in August will begin to flower in November and December, provided the forcing variety is used.

W. H. T.

Mantorville, Minn.—W. E. Fryer says the winter in his section of the state has been most severe. As late as February 6 there was the worst storm of the winter, with the temperature 20 degrees below.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Callas.

Almost every country florist grows callas. They can be depended upon to bloom satisfactorily for at least six months and for church decoration, funeral work and other purposes they are extremely useful.

By far the most profitable way to grow callas is in pots; they need never exceed 8-inch or 9-inch. It is a common mistake to grow callas on wide beds or benches, with the pots quite close together. Such plants never flower freely. If you want to see them at their best, use single rows of them close to the glass on narrow benches or shelves along the sides of a house where a night temperature of 55 degrees is maintained in winter. Feed the plants frequently. Fine bone is good; it is surprising the way the roots will devour it. Bone is superior to liquid manure, which, when used to excess, causes flowers and foliage to become soft. The flowers, under such treatment, frequently become brown before becoming matured. Give them an abundance of water and, if you want plenty of flowers of the purest color, grow the Godfrey variety.

Antirrhinums.

The earliest planting of that most useful of annuals, for it is as an annual that we now usually treat the antirrhinum, will now be sending up a veritable thicket of stout shoots from near the base. A number of the weakest of these should be rubbed off, unless you are looking for quantity rather than quality.

When you cut the spikes, do not leave a foot of the stems and allow these to break away and remain; cut them down to within three or four inches of the soil and they will start much more strongly.

Fungous diseases seem to be more prevalent under glass than ever before and it may be necessary to drop the culture of this beautiful flower under glass for a time. Winter is, of course, a time when we get much sunless and cold weather and at such times, if the beds or benches chance to be wet and the plants are not quite dry, fungous troubles will develop fast. I have found that it pays to let the soil dry out well between waterings, to water only on sunny days, to avoid using liquid manure until early March and to watch most carefully for any signs of leaf or stem disease. Snapdragons are a valuable crop, but it needs more care each season to have them clean, thrifty and floriferous. We must use more seedlings and less cuttings to help offset in some degree these antirrhinum troubles.

At this time a top-dressing of old, well decayed manure will be found beneficial to the early planted stock.

Gardenias.

Cuttings of gardenias, if not already in the cutting bench, should go in without delay. A brisk bottom heat is needed and a top heat of 60 to 65 degrees. Much better results can be had if a glass frame or case is used, damping the cuttings over several times daily, tilting up the sash so as to admit a little air during the day and closing about the middle of the afternoon, so as to bottle up a good, brisk heat. With proper care every cutting should root. After potting it will be necessary to keep the little plants well shaded, also close and warm, until they are established, when somewhat more air can be given them. These gardenias will be of suitable size for benching in late May or early June.

Hotbeds.

Every greenhouse becomes terribly overcrowded in late winter, especially where bedding plants are grown in quantity, and hotbeds are a wonderful boon in such cases. The first week in March is a good time to make up one of these in the northern states. Some warm horse manure mixed with leaves, well moistened and tramped firmly, will give a steady and lasting heat, and frames of this character with tight sides, well glazed sashes and mats and board shutters for cold nights will accommodate a lot of bedding plants, carnations and other stock and grow them far better than any greenhouse. The bedding stock, if plunged, will need less watering and make a better growth than if the pots are exposed. If you never tried hotbeds, do so and you will find they are a wondeful help.

Easter Flowers.

The spiræas make rapid growth now and will need frequent spacing apart, an abundance of water and occasional doses of liquid manure. You cannot afford to crowd these plants. Elevate some of them on pots and place saucers below them. Never mind if a little water stands in the saucers. Spiræas are among the few flowering plants which do not mind water in the saucers. What would make foliage turn yellow on most plants, even marguerites, hydrangeas, roses or schizanthus, will have absolutely no effect on spiræas. If you are growing any of the beautiful pink varieties like Peach Blossom or Queen Alexandra, give them shade from direct sun as the flowers open, to prevent fading out.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

BULBS IN THE SOUTH.

Many growers make the mistake of thinking that, because it is so much milder in the south, bulbs can be brought into bloom much sooner here than in colder climates. This is undoubtedly true of bulbs that have been planted outdoors, but when it comes to forcing them into flower in the greenhouse the warmer climate is a detriment. This applies particularly to what are known as Dutch bulbs. To try to force Golden Spur narcissi, tulips and hyacinths into bloom before the end of January or beginning of February is only inviting loss, because either the flowers will not develop at all or so imperfectly as to be unsalable. Duc van Thol tulip is the only exception to this rule that I can recall. This tulip can be brought into heat at the holidays and successfully forced, while January 15 is as early as Golden Spur can be started in forcing quarters. February 1 is as soon as Dutch hyacinths ought to be brought in, except, perhaps, the variety L'Innocence, which can be forced at least two weeks earlier.

While this rule holds good for Dutch bulbs, there are other classes of bulbs where the reverse is true, notably in French-grown bulbs, such as Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths, and probably all classes of liliums, especially giganteum. To have early gladioli it is only necessary to allow the bulbs to remain in the ground all winter. Treated thus, they bloom much sooner than those that have been lifted and replanted at the earliest chance in the spring. Most of the blooms shipped to northern markets in early summer are from bulbs left undisturbed. The same holds good in regard to tuberoses and the old single type is the only one worth growing for cut flowers in the south. The variety Pearl is entirely worthless for this down here. L.

SWEET PEAS OUTDOORS.

The winter over the entire south has been one of exceptional severity and in many sections the sweet pea crop has been completely frozen out. These will ordinarily withstand a temperature of 15 degrees above zero, even if continued for a night or two, but this winter the temperature dropped to zero or nearly so in many localities, remaining there nearly a week, and froze the plants clear down to the roots. What happened to commercial growers happened in private gardens, so that sweet pea flowers ought this summer to meet a readier sale.

There is time to replant successfully if done without delay. The one thing to avoid in growing sweet peas is overcrowding. Let the rows be at least four feet apart, and the plants one foot apart in the row. A hedge of sweet peas as they are usually grown looks grand for a short time, but the flowers are short-stemmed and soon deteriorate so as not to be worth picking. Planted as recommended, the flowers will be longer-stemmed and more numerous, because the flowering season will be greatly prolonged. A heavy mulch of cow manure spread over the ground after picking has started will aid in keeping the ground cool and liberal waterings with the hose or sprinkler system will give the plants the necessary feeding. L.

NOTICE! OHIO FLORISTS

MUST FIREMEN BE LICENSED?

Or Shall the Law Be Amended?

The enforcement of the Ohio law "requiring a licensed fireman for steam boilers of thirty horsepower and over" has lately caused considerable trouble in some sections of the state, and it is only through good luck that you have so far escaped and only a question of time when you will be compelled to obey the law.

This means that you will have to engage one licensed fireman for the day and one for the night, which is all right if you can afford it, but how about the majority of florists, who cannot afford it and who will be compelled to close their establishments and lose all?

According to the letter of the law, you yourself are not permitted to throw a single shovelful of coal under your own boiler, whatever conditions may exist.

By concerted action of all florists and market gardeners, we can have this law amended to exempt greenhouse concerns, if you will support, by writing to your representative, a measure to be introduced into the legislature to that effect.

Intention of the Law.

Without passing any comment on the justice of the law, do you think it was the intention of the law to include greenhouse establishments, which are mostly outside the populated sections of cities and where steam boilers are housed in ordinary barns? An explosion could hardly cause more damage than wrecking the building and may never be attended by the loss of unsuspecting lives.

Engaging licensed firemen would add materially to the cost of production, especially in smaller places, and the costs would have to be tacked onto the prices of the products. In the case of vegetable growers, the additional expense would be added to the cost of food, which is already high enough, and would thus cause unnecessary extra costs to the ultimate consumer.

The "Floating" Sort of Firemen.

Greenhouses only need firemen for about six months in the year, and firemen, as a rule, want a steady, all-the-year job. The consequence is that we cannot get A-1 men, even if we wanted to, and we have to be satisfied with floaters, who do not want to do anything else but just shovel coal. Can you afford it?

Is the safety of your boiler greater under the attention of a licensed fireman who is ready to throw up his job at any trifle and at any time, or is it safer under your own personal attention or that of your tried-out employee, who may have been with you for years?

Does not your insurance company inspect your boiler several times during the year and run all risks of accidents?

The intention of the law was evidently increased safety for human beings living in the same or nearby buildings, and if this law would actually guarantee or increase the safety of people, we would welcome it, but does it?

Write to Your Representative.

It appears to us that a licensed fireman is no safety whatever and that this law is superfluous, but it does cost us a lot of money for state inspectors, running into the thousands each year, not mentioning the cost of the license for each fireman per year, all money expended without deriving any benefit.

We have been at Columbus to get the opinion of several representatives and they have promised to support a bill exempting greenhouses. So, if you will put your shoulder to the wheel and help us now and help us quickly, we can get this through the present session of the legislature.

Will you write to your representative now and kindly let us know?

But do it quickly.

Remember that an amendment means: The saving of trouble and the saving of money to you! Will you save them?

J. L. Schiller, Sec'y.

QUARANTINE LEGISLATION.

The amendment the Senate has made to the agricultural appropriation bill is not objectionable to florists or nursery interests. It gives the Federal Horticultural Board more power over interstate trade in controlling new diseases, such as the pine blister rust, but no increased power over imports. The amendment was introduced in the Senate with the full knowledge and consent of the nurserymen's and florists' legislative committees.

The drastic and dangerous measure to which Mr. Gude's report calls the attention of the trade is fathered by a group of entomologists, who, after years of agitation, have secured support from the American Forestry Association. It is designed to stop the importation of all forms of plant and tree life from all sources, and is a menace to the interests of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen. Having failed to get the support of the Federal Horticultural Board to their scheme, this group now proposes direct legislation, but agreed to confer first with the legislative committees of the three allied trades.

James McHutchison.

BLIND PAPER WHITES.

Our Golden Spurs have been in the coldframe about ten weeks and have made strong roots. They have tops about one to two inches high. Is it best to place them under the bench to draw them up? What causes Paper Whites to come blind? About one-third of mine have been affected this way.

A. L.—Mo.

If you place your flats below the benches they will draw up nicely. Lift them up to the light as the flowers start to open. Extremely wet and cold conditions at the root are responsible for some Paper Whites coming blind, but more probably it is due to heating of the bulbs in transit and the consequent killing of the embryo flower buds. This frequently happens to various narcissi. Then they will produce leaves, but no flowers.

HOW OLD IS ANN?

WHAT IS AN AMATEUR?

I have been requested by our society to invite The Review to publish Prof. Hall's classification of exhibitors at flower shows. The classification, of course, has been drawn up particularly for the American Dahlia Society, and was formally discussed by some members of the executive committee February 12, but these recommendations, or definitions, by Prof. Hall, were not adopted by the Dahlia Society and are sent with a view to having discussion on this subject, as it is one that concerns all flower show societies, and if an agreement can be reached and widely accepted, we feel that much good will have been accomplished.

J. Harrison Dick, Sec'y.

1. Novice Amateurs—This section shall include those growers who raise the flower or plant for personal pleasure or satisfaction only, who do not profit financially in any way through its culture, who employ no skilled labor in its growth or handling, and who have been growing the species not more than fifty years or who have grown less than 100 plants (or forty varieties) of it during the season of the exhibit (or show) at which the display is made.

2. Amateurs—This section shall include growers as described in Section 1, but without limitation as to length of time or extent of cultivation of flower or plant.

3. Advanced Growers—This section shall include those growers who raise the flower or plant mainly for personal pleasure or satisfaction or through scientific interest in its development, who employ no skilled labor in its care or handling, who do not advertise as growers by signs, cards or announcements at the field or garden, by statements or letter-heads or by price lists or catalogues, and whose expenditures for new varieties, for the development of seedlings, or for other testing or experimental work to promote the interests of the flower exceeds all receipts from sales of flowers, stock, or seedlings developed. Expenditures for added stock of varieties already grown are not to be considered in the preceding computation.

4. Professional Gardeners and Their Employers—This section shall include owners of estates and other growers who raise the flower or plant for personal pleasure or satisfaction only, who do not profit financially in any way through its cultivation, but who employ paid skilled assistance in managements of the plants, or in the handling the selection of varieties, in the arrangements and of the flowers. The section shall also include the professional gardeners employed by such growers when exhibiting flowers grown by their employers. Exhibits from such gardeners growing flowers for themselves shall be classed in such other sections as conditions determine.

5. Semi-professional Growers—This section shall include those growers who raise the flower or plant mainly for personal pleasure or satisfaction, who may or may not employ skilled labor in connection with its culture, who do not regularly advertise as growers by any of the means indicated in Section 2, but whose returns from the sale of the flowers, stock and seedlings exceed the limit specified in Section 2.

6. Professional or Commercial Growers—This section shall include all growers who raise the flower or plant for the financial return from its cultivation, whether from sale of flowers, stock or seedlings, at wholesale or retail, and who advertise as growers by signs, cards or announcements at garden or field, by statements or letterheads or by price lists or catalogues.

THE EMPIRE STATE

FEDERATION MEETS.

At Ithaca.

A most enthusiastic meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs was held at Ithaca, N. Y., February 15, in connection with Farmers' Week. Of the ten federated societies and clubs nine sent delegates. Because of the scheduled meeting coming on St. Valentine's day, it was considered better to postpone the luncheon and official meeting of the federation from Wednesday, February 14, until Thursday. During the morning and afternoon the delegates of the federation attended lectures and viewed the exhibit prepared by students in the department of floriculture of the university. At noon a luncheon was given by the department for the various delegates in attendance; thirty were seated at the luncheon.

At 4 o'clock the business meeting of the federation was held. At this meeting it was voted to amend the constitution so that four meetings will be held during the coming year—the annual meeting at Syracuse in connection with the state fair; a winter meeting at Ithaca, during Farmers' Week; a third meeting at New York city during the annual flower show, and a fourth meeting to be held with some affiliated society, upon the call of the president. An invitation was accepted from Dr. Bates, of the Syracuse Rose Society, for the federation to hold a meeting in Syracuse at the time of the next annual exhibition of the society.

To Secure Horticultural Buildings.

A discussion then took place regarding the progress of a bill for the erection of a horticultural building on the New York state fair grounds. After discussion it was decided to appoint a committee, with a joint committee of the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association and with members from horticultural organizations, to confer with various officials at Albany, influential in appropriations. It was voted to instruct this committee to make every effort possible to impress these officials with the need of an immediate appropriation for starting the development of the plans for a horticultural building. It was the feeling of the federation that such a building was absolutely essential for the best development of the horticultural interests of the state of New York.

It was also moved that the question of the introduction of a bill to the legislature, asking for a range of glass houses for investigational use in flower growing and vegetable culture at Cornell University, be referred to the same committee, with power.

It was voted that the president appoint a committee of three to work with the Commissioner of Agriculture and the superintendent of the New York state fair in revising the premium list.

W. F. Bultmann, of Syracuse, presented an application from the Syracuse Florists' Association for membership in the federation. This association was voted into membership.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance on hand of $206.40.

Delegates Present.

The following is a list of those in attendance at this meeting of the federation:

C. S. Wilson, Albany.
Erl A. Bates, Syracuse.
George E. Thorpe, Syracuse.
Edmund M. Mills, Syracuse.
Anton Schultheis, College Point.
H. B. Stringer, Rochester.
A. S. A. Secker, Rochester.

RENTS HIGH AT TERRE HAUTE.

One of the largest deals in greenhouse properties recently was consummated at Terre Haute, Ind., by the filing of a 9-year lease from the J. W. Davis Co. to the Davis Realty Co. Following are the rentals for the nine years:

First six months	$ 6,250
First year	37,500
Second year	36,250
Third year	35,000
Fourth year	33,750
Fifth year	32,500
Sixth year	31,250
Seventh year	30,000
Eighth year	28,750
Ninth year	25,500

Work will be commenced at once on the grading for five more 80x600 feet Lord & Burnham Co. houses. This will bring the total of the range to eleven houses. Part of the new glass will be devoted to ferns, sweet peas, cyclamens and possibly the newer roses.

The officers of the J. W. Davis Co. are: President, J. W. Davis; vice-president, John G. Heinl; secretary, O. K. Owens. The stock in both corporations is held by J. W. Davis, of Davenport, Ia.; John G. Heinl, O. K. Owens, James S. Royse, Fred G. Heinl and S. D. Royse, all of Terre Haute.

Toledo, O.—A building permit for a greenhouse already completed at a cost of $10,000 has been secured by Hecklinger Bros., 1914 Seaman street. In the press of other matters nobody thought of the conventional city permit.

EARLY-FLOWERING SPENCERS.

Many New Varieties.

In an article published in the Yearbook of the National Sweet Pea Society (English) George W. Kerr, president of the American Sweet Pea Society, says in part:

"The sweet pea season in the vicinity of Philadelphia and New York is a short one; in fact, we can only rely on having first-class flowers in the open during June and early July. No matter how well grown, or carefully tended, the extreme heat of July completely takes the vitality out of the plants. But in spite of the short season for outdoor sweet peas, thanks to the recognized value of the early or winter-flowering type, sweet pea flowers are on the market from October until July, ten months out of the twelve.

"During my first winter in America I was naturally much surprised to see the lovely, long-stemmed flowers of my favorite in practically every florist's shop and it is not surprising that I decided to devote some time to crossing the best of the Spencer varieties with these winter-flowering grandifloras the following summer. Therefore, I made a start in 1909, using the best of the available Spencers at that time, all my crosses being made on the Burpee early-flowering varieties and Mont Blanc. Then I had a wait of two years, but results were forthcoming, and now we have the early or winter-flowering Spencers in practically all the colors most esteemed for florists' work. Many of them have been honored with certificates at the winter shows and we are offering a set of my first fixtures in the next issue of our catalogue.

"Of course I have continued my crossing each year and naturally do not now require to use the old type. Since the introduction of that fine Australian variety, Yarrawa, in 1912, I have used it almost exclusively as my seed-bearing parent.

"When well-grown flowers of this new type will average two and one-half inches in diameter, while the stout flower stems run anywhere from eighteen to twenty-four inches in length, and this without any cutting out, or cordon system, the plants being allowed to grow naturally, it is little wonder that sweet peas are now such favorites with the American public.

"To meet the ever increasing demand for flowers, special sweet pea houses have been, and are being, built in great numbers. In fact, growers have been realizing such good prices that every inducement is being held out to them to augment their supply of flowers.

Outdoors in Warm Climates.

"Until a year ago I never dreamed of the winter-flowering varieties being of value except for greenhouse culture, but they have proved to be just what was wanted for subtropical, or at least almost frostless countries. In Florida, where the regular summer-flowering varieties, even when sown in the autumn, do not bloom until April, by sowing the early sorts in late September or early October, they begin to flower in late December and continue throughout spring, or indeed until the heat knocks them.

"On our seed ranch in California this season they came into flower in March, from November sowings, and bloomed continuously well into summer. In fact, all warm climates can now grow sweet peas to perfection if the seed is sown at the proper season and the true early varieties are used.

"This was apparently recognized in Australia with the advent of Yarrawa, with the result that hybridizers there have also been busy and Australian seed growers are offering quite a number of new early-flowering Spencers, some of which I hope to try out another year.

"Frank G. Cuthbertson has also been busy in the same direction and his firm is now offering a set of new early-flowering Spencers, while A. C. Zvolanek had apparently made a start when Countess Spencer was introduced in 1904 and has had a number of varieties on the market for the last two seasons."

HALBROOKS' SWEET PEAS.

The accompanying illustration shows a part of a house of sweet peas grown by N. O. Halbrooks, at the establishment of William Halbrooks, Evansville, Ind. The peas were planted September 1 and were in full crop January 10.

SWEET PEAS DROPPING BUDS.

We are having trouble with our sweet peas. The buds dry up and drop off. Could this be caused by a drop in the night temperature to 40 or 45 degrees, which has occurred several times lately, or would the use of water at a temperature of 35 to 40 degrees be the cause? We aim to keep the temperature for both sweet peas and carnations at 50 to 52 degrees at night, watering sparingly and fumigating with nicotine lightly every two weeks.

For the last few weeks we have also had trouble with some of our carnation blooms. On a majority of the blooms the ends of the petals curl inward tightly and the flowers do not open at all. Those that do open look sleepy. The varieties affected are Enchantress, White Enchantress, Dorothy Gordon and White Wonder. We are growing Ward, Beacon and Herald in the same house, but these varieties do not seem to be affected. J. M. K.—Ia.

Bud dropping is the bane of the sweet pea grower. Some of us think we have a pretty good idea of what causes it, but inasmuch as we cannot eliminate the cause, we are unable to prevent the dropping. Dark, cloudy weather, apparently, is what brings on bud dropping and as long as we are unable to substitute sunlight we shall have to put up with the bud dropping. High feeding and excessive moisture may aggravate it, but we are not sure about that. Some day we may have varieties that will be free from this trouble, but they have not been offered to the trade as yet.

I cannot tell, from your letter, what might be the cause of your carnations behaving as they do. If you will send me a plant showing the trouble, I may be able to help you. Pack it so that it will reach me in a fresh condition.

CROPS FOR ROSE TEMPERATURE.

Please suggest some blooming plants which can be grown in a rose house temperature and which are suitable for funeral work and cut flowers. We are growing callas, but have more room, as our demand for roses is small.

G. F. C.—Tenn.

In addition to callas, of which Godfrey is by far the best variety, you could grow lilies, such as giganteum, Formosa, Harrisii and speciosum album; bulbous flowers, such as narcissi, tulips and hyacinths, in winter; lilacs and other shrubs. For stocks, candytuft, feverfew, sweet peas, snapdragons, gladioli, Spanish irises, etc., a rose house temperature is a few degrees too warm.

HOW TO START CANNAS.

What is the best method of starting dormant canna rhizomes, and when should they be started? Our method has been to clean, cut them and place them in flats of sand. We place the flats on hot water pipes until the rhizomes start, after which they are shifted to 4-inch pots. W. F.—N. Y.

Your plan should answer well. A good plan is to place the tubers on a bench on which a layer of moss has been laid and to scatter a little broken moss over them. The bench should be above heating pipes, in a warm house. Sprinkle the plants moderately and pot them before the roots become too long. Flats of sand or moss should also answer well. Be careful to water the plants sparingly at first, or there is danger of rotting the tubers. C. W.

LANCASTER, PA.

The Club Trip.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club visited the Manheim florists February 15.

At E. P. Hostetter's place, where formerly carnations held sway, it was found that the sweet pea is gradually superseding the divine flower. The varieties are Rose Queen, Mrs. Skach, Christmas Pink and one or two others of equal merit. They have been blooming since Christmas and the vines are in perfect health and promise to produce high-quality blooms until the outdoor varieties arrive in June. Much space is devoted to yellow daisies, which have been and are producing long-stemmed, mammoth blooms. Several houses of them have been carried over for years and are veritable forests of bloom. Where the early mums were yellow snapdragons now are blooming. They are of superb quality. Primula Forbesii, of which there are 50,000 plants in bloom, are grown exclusively for cut flowers. Three new colors have originated with Mr. Hostetter, of each of which a considerable quantity is grown. Freesias and Golden Spur daffodils, as grown here, are profitable lines. In carnations Matchless and Supreme are principally grown. Houses of mignonette and asparagus were also noticed.

The Monroe Hostetter establishment was then visited. Carnations, sweet peas, asparagus, calendulas and freesias are grown here, all in good order. Spring vegetables, including lettuce and radishes, are sold locally.

At Phares S. Hostetter's sweet peas are grown extensively and of fine quality. Several houses are planted to calla plants, which, Mr. Hostetter informed us, have been producing blooms abundantly.

The Business Meeting.

At 7:30 President Schroyer called the club meeting to order, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Albert M. Herr read a paper on "Winter-blooming Sweet Peas," prepared by an expert, the discussion of which brought out much valuable information. On the exhibition table were some vases of fine peas. Among the best bunches noticed were P. S. Hostetter's Rose Queen, and an exhibit by B. F. Barr & Co., of Yarrawa and Mrs. Skach.

A motion was carried that the club line up with others in Pennsylvania, and demand better service from the express companies.

Many of the members expect to attend the National Rose Festival to be held in the First Regiment armory, Philadelphia, March 20 to 23.

The next meeting will be held March 15 and will be preceded by a visiting trip along the Philadelphia pike, beginning at the Ira H. Landis range and finishing at Maurice J. Brinton's, Christiana. H. K. R.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was characteristic of New York's climatic vagaries, from zero on Monday through rain and snow to sunshine and the temperature of the early spring. The cut flower market had two incentives for activity, the Lincoln holiday, with numerous banquets, and St. Valentine's day, with its unique and sentimental floral conceptions. The latter proved, in many of the retail stores, a decided success and the general opinion is that the day was celebrated more widely than ever before. Many think that with proper publicity and enterprising effort it can be made as important and valuable an asset as either Christmas or Easter.

Now comes Lent and the inevitable surplus in many lines, especially bulbous stock. Roses and carnations will show a large increase in production and a corresponding break in values. In fact, this is already evident in carnations, the best being offered at $3 per hundred February 17. There were a good many sleepy ones remaining when the evening shadows fell, for which wholesalers sought vainly an offer of $10 per thousand.

The growers of first quality American Beauties would be making a fortune if they could only cut enough of them. The best flowers often have brought $1 each. The lower grades were more abundant and prices normal. All the other twenty-seven varieties of roses were fairly firm at about last week's quotations, but a heaviness was discernible as the week closed and shipments are increasing.

The orchid and gardenia supply is abundant. Longiflorum lilies are in nearly every wholesale window. The top price for valley seems to be $4 per hundred and 40 cents per hundred for select violets. For sweet peas apart from the Spencers there is no store demand. Calla scarcity is no longer mentioned. The demand for tulips is much less than the supply; nobody wants the short ones. Freesia seems to have been overdone this season; at any rate just now there is too much of it. A few narcissi remain, and any quantity of daffodils of superior quality. Acacia enlivens many a retail window. Lilac is increasing, as is iris, and there are plenty of all the other seasonable flowers.

The season to date has been remarkable for its steadiness and the excellent average values mantained since Christmas. It may safely be affirmed that roses have been the foundation of this stability. Apart from the higher prices for coal, growers have little reason for complaint.

Various Notes.

Many notable weddings took place last week and several of the leading retail florists have had decorations in February equal to any in their long records.

Philip Breitmeyer and wife, of Detroit, were among recent visitors, on their way home from a month's rest in Florida.

W. A. Manda, who has been taking the sulphur baths at Mt. Clemens, Mich., has returned to Orange, in perfect health.

Fred Smythe, of Wadley & Smythe, proprietors of the Yonkers Nursery Co., had progressed as far as Chicago on his pleasure trip to California when he received a telegram that his barn, garage, storage buildings and greenhouses had been destroyed by fire, February 14. He returned at once.

Adam Trepel, buyer for C. C. Trepel's chain of stores, has been on the shelf for ten days because of a severe accident to his foot.

Robert Woodrow is back from his country home in the mountains, for a two weeks' stay at 37 West Twenty-eighth street, while his brother, Samuel, is recuperating. The firm lost nearly $400 worth of palms during the zero wave, by freezing.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to James Slattery, of Thorley's, in the death of his wife February 16. The funeral Sunday was largely attended and the floral tokens were many and beautiful.

Geo. W. Crawbuck has been suffering from a severe cold, the prevailing malady.

The seven Ryan greenhouses at Chatham were burned last week, also those of Arthur Ayers, of Mountain Side Borough. The latter was the old Badgley homestead plant of three houses. Both were rose growers. Mayor Badgley says the loss was total.

Max Schling's specialty for St. Valentine's day was a floral heart with green background, made to sell at $10 each, and seventy-five of them were disposed of. Mr. Schling said the day was one of the best in his experience.

White & Mullin, 162 Livingston street, Brooklyn, have retired.

February 12 Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schenck celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding. Many of their florist friends joined in the festivities.

J. Austin Shaw.

Albert Koehler and Samuel Seligman are Indefatigable.

S. B. Wertheimer and his family are at Atlantic City.

Bowling.

The following are the scores made February 15:

Player	1st	2d	3d
Donaldson	154	180	163
Fenrich	136	169	203
Valentine	177	154	150
Miesem	180	168	164

Jacobson	179	148	173
Kakuda	136	145	125

Fort Smith, Ark.—A combination peanut-bean-sorghum seed thresher, the first ever brought into this part of Arkansas, has been introduced here, by the Best-Clymer Co., and is threshing 7,000 bushels of sorghum seed. The new machine will be taken into various parts of the county, where beans and peanuts will be threshed for farmers on a percentage basis.

BALTIMORE.

Pleased to Meet You!

With a deep sense of gratitude to the Editor of The Review for the opportunity to serve in a small way the interests of Baltimore through the medium of his journal, the newly appointed correspondent extends his greetings to its readers. As a source of information bearing exclusively on trade matters, The Review has for years occupied a unique position in this community, and has enjoyed a large measure of confidence and esteem. In taking up this new duty, it is the hope of the writer that this happy condition will continue unimpaired—nay, that it may be the foundation for the building of a more perfect understanding between the Editor and the trade in this city.

Now, let our first letter not deal so much with trade matters, but let us see if we really want a journal to take notice of what the florists' business is doing in our city. Since the great fire in 1904, Baltimore has become a new and modern city; in fact, the great trouble at the present time is for its citizens to keep abreast with its progress. It enjoys one of the best geographical positions on the Atlantic coast. It has new and modern docks, with thirty-five feet of water in the harbor, so that the largest ships afloat have no trouble in docking. The railroad facilities are second to none in the country.

These features are attracting to our city manufacturing of all kinds. I might remind you here that the president of the United States Steel Co. thought so well of the prospects at Baltimore that he purchased for his company Sparrows Point, a suburb, and work is now under way on improvements to cost $50,000,000. This is the largest new enterprise, but only one of many. Our city administration is wide-awake to our advantages and has spent about the same amount of money in betterments, such as better streets, a new sewerage system, new docks, etc. The population of the city proper is 650,000, with about 250,000 in the suburbs. Unlike most cities of this size, Baltimore is a city of homes; a large majority of the people own their own homes.

Now all this at first sight does not seem to have any bearing on the florists' trade; but let us analyze it just a little. What I mean is, that when a town is growing and is as prosperous as Baltimore now is—and we remember that our stock in trade is a luxury, a thing that can well be done without when times are hard and money is tight—everyone in the business reaps some benefit. Everyone reaps some benefit, from Feast & Sons, Halliday, Cook and Mary Johnson, with their large society clienteles, down to James Glass, Conrad Hess and M. Richmond in the markets. Every one of them is feeling the wave of prosperity that is sweeping over the city. Now, the point is just this: Every other line is taking advantage of it; shall the florists be laggards? The Editor of The Review has offered us one column of his journal each week for good, live trade news; shall we take advantage of it? Yes! Anything that you may have in the way of trade news, if you will call Mount Vernon 121, I will be glad to investigate and see that it gets into the Baltimore column of The Review.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds, while none too plentiful, that is, for the finer qualities, has been equal to the demand. Hoffman is sending in fine jonquils, Golden Spurs—all bulbous stock has been in good shape, especially freesias.

Roses have held their own. Stevenson Bros.' Killarneys are fine; Radiance is off crop, but Red Radiance is coming in splendidly, with good stems and clean foliage. Beauties are scarce, and, with the price at $9 and $10 per dozen, are not in much demand. Ward and baby roses seem to be standbys for corsage work. Sunburst still holds its own.

Various Notes.

James Glass has been in the hospital for the last three weeks, but at last reports his friends were glad to hear that he is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Johnston February 8 celebrated the twenty-fourth anniversary of their marriage, with a family dinner and reunion. Unlike the shoemaker whose boys went barefoot, special attention was paid to the decorations. The color scheme was yellow, with a centerpiece of Golden Spur jonquils. The entire affair was most enjoyable.

I am afraid I am taking more than my column in this, my first letter, and, as I have heard a lot about the editor's blue pencil, I think I had better stop. But let's get together and boost the trade in Baltimore! Tate.

Eutaw, Ala.—Miss Kate Alexander has opened a florists' agency here.

Bessemer, Ala.—Mrs. W. D. Brown, proprietor of the Colonial Greenhouses, says the first fortnight of February was the worst this part of the south has experienced in years. She even lost her pansies, which were just coming into bloom, and tea roses in the open were badly damaged by the frost. Trade is excellent and the principal difficulty is in the supply of stock.

Newton, N. C.—The season for shipping nursery stock from the several Catawba nurseries is nearing a close, though stock will be shipped in small quantities for several weeks to come. This business has swelled to large proportions in Catawba, and many thousands of dollars annually are brought to the country in return for young fruit trees, shrubbery and ornamental plants and shade trees, as well as a few berry plants. One firm sells more than $20,000 worth each year, shipments going into a number of other states as well as to North Carolina buyers. A section of country west and southwest of Newton seems peculiarly well adapted to this business, and all the concerns handling trees are located there.

New Orleans, La.—Flowers and plants in New Orleans suffered more during the freeze of a fortnight ago than they have since 1899, and most of the early spring flowers and plants have been killed. This statement was made at the recent meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society. It was said that the warm weather during January was responsible for the killing of the plants. Most of the florists had planted their spring flowers. Then came the heavy rain and the freezing weather. It will be necessary for local florists to send away for plants and flowers to replace those lost. P. A. Chopin, Otto Abele, E. Farley, Henry Kraak and C. W. Eichling have been appointed a committee to arrange for the fall flower show.

New Orleans, La.—Peter Ackerman, formerly a member of F. J. Reyes & Co., has opened a store at 141 Bourbon street.

De Land, Fla.—Wm. B. Currey has built up an excellent retail trade and is now engaged in putting up a store and showroom conservatory, which, according to plans, will be up-to-date and enable him to carry a stock of supplies and accessories he could not handle before.

Greenville, S. C.—Damages amounting to approximately $2,000 were suffered last week by the Greenville Floral Co., when a boiler in one of the greenhouses burst as the result of a fire having been kindled while the pipes were frozen. The boiler was demolished and considerable injury was done to the house and stock.

Brunswick, Ga.—Dr. David Griffith, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who recently made a trip through this section, is quoted as saying: "Glynn county's land equals that of France for raising narcissus bulbs and you are missing the greatest opportunity by neglecting to utilize your soil for this purpose. French bulbs seem to grow to perfection in Glynn county and you should grow narcissi by the millions, competing with the French growers who export large quantities of these bulbs to the United States every year. Your climate in many respects surpasses that of France in the region where these bulbs are grown. With the European war on, there is a scarcity in the north of these flowers, and the opportunity is the greatest at the present time. I have visited regions in California where thousands of narcissus bulbs are raised, but without exaggeration your climate is more adapted for the purpose than is that of the Golden State. On this tour of inspection I have visited Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S. C., where I have found excellent facilities as well as good soil, but Glynn county is superior in every respect to the other sections."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week opened with brisk business and trade for St. Valentine's day was exceptionally good. Extensive advertising was done well in advance of the day, and with the help of unusual and artistic window decorations the results were most satisfactory. Social functions have been in full swing. The demand for corsages St. Valentine's day was larger than that for any other holiday, outside of Easter. Flowers were plentiful, but deliveries were greatly hampered by the delay of trains, in many cases from five to six hours late. Local-grown Asparagus plumosus has been drawn on heavily and shipments from Florida have arrived in a frozen condition, so that the stores have been hard pressed for greens. Fortunately, smilax is fairly plentiful.

The daily shipments of roses continue good, but the trade suffers considerably from the shortage of short-stemmed stock, for which there is a large demand. The long-stemmed roses include Russell, Sunburst, Killarney, Ward and Maryland, which sell well. Easter lilies and callas are not arriving in any large quantity. Violets have cleared wonderfully well this week. The supply of carnations is not too large and the demand is good. Some excellent reds were seen this week.

Gardenias move easily; the shipments of orchids have been stopped because many arrive in frozen condition. The trade is well supplied with cut bulbous stock, which is extremely good. Extra fine daffodils, jonquils, poeticus, tulips and Paper Whites are in the market. Among the blooming plants are azaleas, lilacs, primulas, rhododendrons and Dutch hyacinths. Palms and ferns receive a steady call and a fair business is done in that line. Funeral work has been heavy this week.

Various Notes.

The Lord & Burnham Co. building operations extended farther into the winter months last year than ever before. The progress made on the masonry work and garage for the Rochester park department has been good, considering the extremely cold weather.

George Darling, of Interlaken, N. Y., called on the trade this week. He is planning to grow asters and sweet peas extensively this year.

A novel window display was seen at H. E. Wilson's for the week end. A wax figure of a girl in a Dutch costume was the central figure, around which was a large mound of daffodils, tulips and hyacinths, as well as baskets of bulb stock.

George Husmann, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, had a large display of novelties at the Hotel Seneca this week.

H. B. Stringer, president of the Florists' Association, Ambrose H. Secker and George Arnold were delegates to the floricultural meeting held at Utica February 14 and 15. There was a splendid display of roses, baskets of roses, and table decorations. The F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, put up a good display. John Dunlop, of Toronto, had Shawyer and Hadley roses with stems four feet long.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Rochester Florists' Association held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Oviatt, Monroe avenue, February 14. There was a good attendance. The auxiliary presented to Mrs. Fred W. Vick, the retiring president, a brooch of pearls and sapphires. Refreshments were provided by the hostess.

The flower show to be held in connection with the Rochester exposition will be more elaborate than the previous one. The flower show committee, of which Charles H. Vick is chairman, is working on the premium list.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at Musicians' Headquarters, February 12. There was an enthusiastic attendance numbering nearly fifty. H. B. Stringer presided. Several topics of interest were discussed, among them the matter of renting palms. Letters on the subject received from a large number of florists were read, dealing with the prices, or rentals, received. Further action will be taken on this matter at the next meeting. It was proposed to hold a peony show and a committee of the following was named: John Dunbar, president; Charles H. Vick, Colin B. Ogston, N. R. Graves, J. Charlton, George B. Hart, E. P. Wilson. "Credit Coöperation," a resume by H. V. Tanner, was given. He said that many trade associations failed because of lack of coöperation among its members. After the business meeting the members were invited by George B. Hart to a pig roast, which was in every way a big success. H. J. H.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was a great success with the local florists. All the staple flowers sold well and there was a good call for novelties. Violets, of course, were the favorites, but freesias, tulips and daffodils also sold well. Sweet peas were plentiful and had a good call.

Several large affairs on the evening of St. Valentine's day called for a great many corsage bouquets, as did the Elks' ball in the state armory February 15.

Various Notes.

Ernest Chamberlain had the best Valentine's day business since he started business. He also had a big demand for flowers for the Elks' ball.

William P. Pierce is cutting fine Double Von Sions. He says violets do not sell well with him.

A recent visit by the writer to E. H. Hunt's place, at Providence, R. I., found everything in fine condition. Mr. Hunt is cutting good blooms of Snapdragon Keystone. Frank L. Gray, formerly with the Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, now is foreman at the Hunt place.

Edward M. Pierce is cutting some fine sweet peas. Violets also are in good crop. Mr. Pierce reports business good.

S. E. Shaw is marketing some good sweet peas and freesias. He has an abundance of violets, most of which he ships out of town. W. M. P.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Glen Cove February 14, with President James McCarthy in the chair.

A letter was read from the Davey Tree Expert Co., of Kent O., inviting a representative of the society to attend the company's annual convention, to be held March 5 to 10; James Holloway was appointed representative and if he is unable to attend John F. Johnson was named as alternative. Adam Brezneck was elected an active member and two petitions were received.

The president appointed George Ashworth, James MacDonald and Joseph Adler as judges of the exhibits. Their awards were as follows: John F. Johnson, first for cyclamens; Harry Goodband, first for tomatoes; Frank Watson, first for roses; honorable mention to Robert Jones, for sweet peas. An interesting and instructive essay was read by Robert Jones, entitled "What Science Has Done and Will Do for Floriculture," by Prof. E. A. White, of New York. A vote of thanks was ordered sent to the author.

P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, offered a special prize of $5 for the most meritorious exhibit at the next meeting. Robt. Jones offered a prize of $10, to be competed for at the annual tulip show, which will be held sometime in May. Exhibits for the next meeting, March 14, are twelve white, twelve pink and twelve mixed carnations.

Harry Goodband, Cor. Sec'y.

GREENWICH, CONN.

The regular meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held at Greenwich February 9. President Whitton presided over a large attendance.

There was a fine display of flowers and vegetables, the judges making the following awards: Cultural certificate to James Stuart, for cyclamens; to Thomas Atchison, seedling amaryllises; to John Forbes, Hoosier Beauty roses; to William Whitton, antirrhinums. High commendation to William Graham, for carnations, mignonette, violets and sweet peas; to Robert Grunert, cinerarias, sweet peas, carnations and primulas; to P. W. Popp, narcissi; to James Linane, primulas; to John Andrews, vegetables; to John Forbes, Ophelia roses; to William Whitton, primulas. Mr. Whitton was also awarded honorable mention for Darwin tulips.

The thanks of the society were accorded to P. W. Popp for his exhibit of hybrid freesias and to Robert Williamson for the new rose, Los Angeles. The prize for the most meritorious exhibit was awarded to James Stuart. Thomas Atchison secured second prize and William Whitton third.

A smoker and social session was held after the business routine. Henry Wild was elected toastmaster and filled that office to perfection. Messrs. Mitchell, Maynard, Collins, Forbes, Paton and Clarkson entertained with songs. Mr. Scott, of Elmsford, N. Y.; H. C. Neubrand, of Cromwell, Conn., and J. H. Troy, of New Rochelle, N. Y., each said a few words. Among the visitors were W. J. Collins, of Boston; Eber Holmes, with W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; J. Walthers, with Burnett Bros., New York. A. Clarkson, Sec'y.

Albion, Mich.—A. H. Dew has purchased the four houses, 16x100, of J. M. De Walter, of Battle Creek, and will remove them to Albion. He also will build two new houses, 36x150 each, in addition to his place.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Hannah Allen.

Mrs. Hannah Allen, well-known florist at Bangor, Me., died February 8. She was born April 7, 1828, in Coachford, County Cork, Ireland, the daughter of Dennis Crowley, who was a famous tavern keeper. In 1846 she removed to Bangor and has since resided there. May 17, 1849, she was married to Thomas Allen. Eleven children were born of the union, of whom six are living. Mr. Allen died in 1888, and Mrs. Allen then began in business as a florist, which she afterwards carried on with the coöperation of her daughters and her son, Edward, building up a large and prosperous business with greenhouses on Court street and a downtown store on State street. The business will go on under the management of the family.

Mrs. Allen was a woman of wonderful executive ability and although always at work and in the strain of business possessed such wonderful vigor of constitution that at 88 years of age she was in close touch with all its details and up to her last illness was to be found with her plants and flowers.

Archibald Darling.

Archibald Darling, who claimed to be the first florist in Rhode Island, died February 15 at the Rhode Island hospital, Providence, of pneumonia. He was 92 years old and was a familiar figure about the streets. He was born in Pawtucket, R. I., December 10, 1824. While many doubt his claim to being the first florist in Rhode Island, there is no doubt that he was one of the pioneers, for many years ago he sold flowers up and down Westminster street and also used to carry his stock on board the bay steamers and peddle it there. His fondness for flowers never left him, and it was one of his whims during his last years to wear a carnation in his buttonhole, which made a sharp contrast to his long, unkempt beard and wrinkled face, and his lean, bent figure in dirty brown overcoat with heavy rope knotted about his waist. W. H. M.

George V. Gooding.

George V. Gooding died in the hospital at Hartford, Conn., February 7. He had been failing in health for about two years, but his death came suddenly. For forty years he was employed as head gardener and florist on the estate of J. S. Elton, Waterbury, Conn. He was twice a widower but is survived by several daughters.

Terre Haute, Ind.—"St. Valentine's day business certainly was a clean-out—every available flower was used, more plants than ever before were sold," report J. G. Heinl & Son.

Lincoln, Neb.—C. H. Frey has announced that February 10 he purchased all the interests in the business heretofore conducted under the name of C. H. Frey Co., the business to be continued under his individual name. The greenhouses have been under Mr. Frey's personal direction since their erection in 1895, to which he now adds the management of the store, which previously has been in the hands of those whose interests he has just acquired.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

W. W. Horlacher, of Dayton, O., in commenting on holiday shipments, said in two instances he found extra fine cyclamens that had the appearance of being too heavily fed and forced; also a lot of Erica melanthera plants grown in pots too small to allow for any moisture. Such stock cannot stand shipping. Bulbous stock from now until Easter will be the greatest proposition the trade ever experienced, is the opinion of Mr. Horlacher; owing to the many unusual factors entering into it. Some well grown plants of Vanda cærulea and Sanderiana were noted in a collection of orchids. More attention is being paid to orchids—every bloom sells at a good figure.

"Gentle love, how all thy fields of roses Bounded close by thorny plants do lie!"

Thus quoted Manager J. W. Rodgers, of the Miami Floral Co., of Dayton, while going over the holiday sales with the writer, who noted Killarneys at $16 per hundred wholesale. "We are not ready to discard Killarney," observed Mr. Rodgers, "when we get such returns. Our crop produced for plants once pinched, $1.50; twice pinched, $2.50; thrice pinched, $3.50, and so on. Russell, Ophelia, Ward and Shawyer are good. The last-named we believe will be grown more extensively when its habits are better understood. It certainly is a grand rose."

At Springfield, O., every member of the trade who does a mailing business is either rushing out catalogues or getting stock in shape for early spring shipment. As G. Botley, of the Schmidt & Botley Co., expressed it: "The days are lengthening and, although the coal pile gives us many anxious moments, Old Sol cheers us up and makes us feel optimistic." Stocks generally, roses and ferns particularly, are in tiptop condition with all growers.

Gustav Schneider, of Springfield, says retail trade was never better, and since his store has been remodeled and enlarged the force is able to wait on patrons more satisfactorily. Mr. Schneider contemplates removing the old range of houses to the newer block, to facilitate the growing end and to concentrate with the nursery.

John Boehner, of Dayton, is so pleased with the new house recently erected that, if the business keeps up as well as at present, another house will be erected this summer to take the place of two old ones.

"We cut 10,000 roses during holiday week," commented Manager Aaron Shives, of the Flick Floral Co., of Fort Wayne, "and I think it was pretty good for the amount of glass we devote to roses. I'll tell you one thing, you cannot get 10 cents or 12 cents for Killarney right along, as we are getting for Shawyer. During the entire summer we received 6 cents from our commission house for Shawyer. Our plants are not affected with mildew. Note those strong leads; there is one with three blooming shoots, each three feet long, on one stem. To my mind, Shawyer will entirely supersede Killarney," concluded Mr. Shives. Richmond is good yet. Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward and Killarney complete the list. "Yes, we were stung on our imported plant shipments, little being of any use," said the manager. W. M.

Amherst, Mass.—During Farmers' Week, March 27 and 28, the department of floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College will have an exhibition of spring bulbous plants and has prepared a series of public lectures on floricultural topics by Prof. F. A. Waugh, Prof. A. H. Nehrling, Prof. F. W. Morse, Prof. C. H. Thompson, Prof. A. K. Harrison and Prof. A. C. Beal, the latter of Cornell.

Woburn, Mass.—Early in the morning of February 18 the boiler shed of Alexander Porter, a prominent florist and market gardener, caught fire. In two houses each 40x300 were crops of lettuce nearly ready for market, while a third house, 50x475, had cucumbers in the early fruiting stage. Good work by the fire department confined the flames to the boiler house, which contained four large steam boilers, although at one time it seemed as though the wagon sheds and residence would go with the rest. Fortunately February 18 was mild and the houses were closed up without serious damage to the crops. The loss is estimated at $2,000.

Augusta, Me.—House Bill No. 110, recently introduced in the legislature here by Representative Wilson, of Portland, is entitled "An act for the protection of life and property in cities of over 40,000 population, against loss or damage from steam machinery operated by incompetent persons." Section 1 of this bill provides that "it shall be the duty of the municipal officers annually in the month of April * * *, to appoint an examiner of steam engineers and firemen * * *," while Section 2 will make it "unlawful for any person or persons to operate a steam plant where the services of an engineer or fireman are required, excepting those plants in dwelling houses and apartment houses, without first obtaining a certificate of competency from said examiner." If this bill should pass, apparently it would mean that every florist would have to employ a licensed fireman to run his boiler.

BEFORE the trade lies the busiest three months ever experienced.

THE coal towns, east and west, are the equal of the munitions centers in the matter of having plenty of money for flowers.

THERE has been a tendency to start planting roses earlier this year, with a consequent brisk demand for rose plants for February delivery, before they were ready.

THE price of glass is considerably higher than usual, but the greatest percentage of increase in the cost of building a greenhouse this season will be found in the pipe.

IN many lines of business the man who has made no effort to meet existing conditions by obtaining better prices is looked upon as a doubtful credit risk, as a man unsafe to deal with.

IT is well to remember that it will be a long time before prices will be back where they were before the war. For instance, how long will it be before any grower can get coal at the old prices?

THE man who happens to have a house of asparagus for cutting for bunches is to be congratulated, as the California crop is at the lowest ebb at the time the Floridans have lost out from frost.

LENT began February 21. In recent years it has had little effect on the flower business, bringing a lull for a few days but losing practically all its apparent influence before the first week had passed.

IN spite of the British blockade, lily of the valley is not the scarce article it was a few months ago. Apparently many retailers stopped using it when the price, in certain places, went to $8 per hundred.

YOUNG women are rapidly displacing men as sales persons in all except the retail stores that cater to the wealthiest trade. And a girl bright enough to sell flowers usually soon learns to make them up.

AMERICAN growers soon will be independent of a European supply of cyclamen seeds. There are hundreds who have set aside some of their best plants this season with the idea of making a trial of saving their own seeds.

TISSUE for wrapping flowers and lining boxes soon will be prohibitive in price if the rise continues. Retail stores that paid $4.50 under normal conditions recently have paid $16 per bundle and are told $17.50 will be the price next time.

SECRETARY YOUNG last week sent to members of the S. A. F. the annual volume of Proceedings. This year it is a book of 444 pages and contains, besides the stenographic report of the convention at Houston last August, similar reports of the meetings of some of the affiliated organizations, with the longest list of members thus far recorded by the society.

WE HAVE AN ALIBI.

The proposition to prohibit all imports of plants and bulbs for the purpose of preventing the introduction of other insect enemies and plant diseases is sure to provoke sharp discussion, but this trade should take issue whenever it is suggested that our imports are in any way responsible for any of the present troubles in that line. None of the devastating diseases, not one of the injurious insects, came to this country on stock imported by florists, nurserymen or seedsmen. We have a perfect alibi. Let us insist that the fact be recognized.

FULFILLING ITS FUNCTION.

The only item of expense which has not advanced in the publishing business is that of postage—and an effort is being made by Congress to at least double the rate periodicals pay. The theory of the present penny a pound rate was that publications are a benefit to the people. It may be true, as alleged, that some papers scarcely can be classed as performing a public service, but—

> Herewith find our check for $1.50 for another year of The Review. This is a paper we need as much as we need anything about our business.—Nussbaumer Floral Co., San Angelo, Tex., February 6, 1917.

Any publication standing so well with its readers naturally would be a profitable advertising medium and the advertising manager asserts that when you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you will find he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BIRDS AND BUSINESS.

In view of the rapid growth of interest in bird life in this country, the formation of innumerable bird clubs and the agitation for a "National Bird day," it is believed that the coming spring will witness a great impetus to the so-called "Bring Back the Birds" movement. The creed of the bird lovers and ornithological societies is that birds must be shielded from all agencies of extinction—31,000,000 birds are killed each year by cats alone—and provided with specially built houses for nesting purposes. This naturally involves the sale of bird houses, bird baths and bird foods, and as these articles are more or less related to gardens and flowers, it is fitting that florists pocket the profits from their sale. Last spring several wide-awake florists featured aviaries with success, and several florists undertook the manufacture of bird houses on a wholesale scale. Here is a side line for florists that a popular movement will help to sell.

Manufacturers and retailers have had many disastrous experiences in promoting the sale of goods required in following popular hobbies and fads, for fads come and go quickly. The bird idea, however, is resurrected each spring and seems to be more than a fad each year; the efforts of the bird lovers have taken the force and form of an almost national propaganda. It therefore would seem that the sale of bird houses, bird baths, etc., will not be subject to the whims of a short-lived fancy; the merchandise that remains unsold one year has a chance to sell the next year.

THE LORD HELPS THOSE Who Help Themselves.

The truth of the old saying was demonstrated again last week when the St. Valentine's day business made another substantial increase. It was another case of the trade building for its own benefit another special flower day, building it by the power of publicity, nothing else.

No one outside the trade can be given any credit for the steady and rapid increase in the use of flowers for valentines—florists are advertising the appropriateness of their merchandise for the purpose and thereby developing the business. It not only proves that "the Lord helps those who help themselves," but it shows that the public is quick to respond to any sane suggestion for the use of flowers and that the development of the flower business rests in the hands of the trade rather than with chance.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business last week, on the whole, was fairly satisfactory. The demand for roses and carnations, both for shipping and local trade, was brisk; in fact, it exceeded the supply, which still is below par, making it possible, in the great majority of cases, to fill orders only in part and clearing the market February 16. Bulbous stock, on the other hand, is in plentiful supply and is moving slowly, with some items dragging. Probably more bulbous stock was grown this season than in any previous year.

American Beauties, although not so scarce as a few weeks ago, still are in short supply and prices hold up consistently to quotation figures. Other varieties of roses all clear easily, shorter lengths going first and preference generally being given to red and yellow varieties. Prices hold up well. The supply of carnations has been just about sufficient to meet the demand, although February 17 there was something of a shortage. They moved well throughout the week and fair prices were obtained.

Easter lilies remain scarce and sell well at good prices. The supply of callas has increased until it is sufficient to meet the demand. Violets are arriving in good supply, but are not selling so well as they should, even at slightly reduced prices. Sweet peas are plentiful and are selling at a little lower figures. The new crop now coming in is of excellent quality, while the pick from plants which have been blooming all season is mostly short stems.

Calendulas are moving slowly, due to the large variety of other yellow stock on the market. Tulips are in oversupply and are dragging heavily. Jonquils are selling well, the supply being just about enough to meet the demand. Daffodils have sold well, but the appearance of some of the retail windows of the price-ticketed class indicates bargains have been obtainable. Freesias are selling considerably better than they were the week previous. Poeticus has made its appearance and is finding a ready market. Paper Whites are disappearing and, although some growers probably will bring them in until Easter, their season is practically over. They are now bringing about the best average price of the year. Stevia is practically out. Snapdragons are appearing in larger quantities. The variety of colors is as yet not large. Mignonette also is in increased supply.

Plumosus was in exceedingly short supply last week. The freeze in the south has cut off the Florida supply and little California stock is arriving. The quantity of indoor grown plumosus coming in is too small to relieve the situation. Other greens are accordingly in improved demand.

St. Valentine's Day.

There was an excellent increase in the St. Valentine's day business in this city, wholesale and retail. Nearly all the retailers made some sort of effort, either window decoration, the use of the Florists' Club's stickers, newspaper advertising, or all three, and they say they were well repaid; there is general confidence that the business of the day can be developed until it is one of the most important flower days in each year. The wholesalers who ship say the business increased nicely and that many shipping orders came from buyers who are only heard from at holiday times.

Kennicott's Will Move.

The principal news item of the week is that Kennicott Bros. Co. has leased the greater part of the store at 174 to 176 North Wabash avenue, formerly occupied by the E. C. Amling Co., which is almost directly across the street from their present location. Arrangements for the move are already under way and the company expects to get into its new location before April 1. The lease is for three years, dating from May 1, with a privilege of renewal at expiration. The new store will be used exclusively for the company's cut flower business, the space now occupied by the wire shop in the rear part of the present location being retained for this department.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is the oldest wholesale cut flower house in the city. The move was necessitated, according to President H. B. Kennicott, by the company's rapidly increasing business.

Wholesalers Organize.

Growing out of the efforts to secure for the trade a more efficient express service, a dinner was given at Hotel Sherman February 15, at which practically all the wholesale florists of Chicago were present or represented. It was a good-fellowship meeting, but out of it came the decision to form a permanent organization for the general betterment of conditions in the trade. The name chosen is Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association and a dinner will be held monthly for the development of the social side and the discussion of trade problems. There is, of

Keeping Time with Progress

In the news columns of this paper announcement is made of our moving into the former quarters of the E. C. Amling Company.

For years we have been crowded for some suitable available space for us to do business, and our new quarters meet our requirements most admirably.

For the making of this move, we owe to our growers our thanks for their loyalty and to them greatest credit is due. Our group of growers are as one in the co-operation with the management of this business.

To our Retailers: We have noted their continuous and added patronage that has brought about our marked increase in business.

To give complete satisfaction to the Growers and to the Retailers, we believe we have made a move in the Right Direction. With our new surroundings we will make a most complete showing of Cut Flowers.

The Personal Service of the Kennicott Bros. Co. is distinct from that of any other service in this market.

When we have moved and settled down—to growers and retailers—we say, "Come right in"—we are in business to serve you.

course, a great deal such an organization can do for the general good, aside from securing special express service for cut flower shipments and thereby avoiding such complications as came at Christmas; it can, for instance, work toward a standardization of grades of roses and can, perhaps, check the tendency to produce quantity at the expense of quality.

The officers of the new organization are: President, A. F. Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co.; vice-president, Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association; treasurer, P. C. Schupp, of J. A. Budlong; secretary, A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Amling Co. The officers were made a committee to draft by-laws for presentation at a special meeting in about two weeks.

Various Notes.

Prices for Beauties have been considerably higher, on the average, than in previous seasons, but the production of first quality blooms has been so small that a further reduction in the plantings is in prospect. Most of the Beauty growers in this locality have decided that it has become the least profitable rose on the list.

Wiltgen & Freres, wholesale florists, opened for business February 19, at their store at 169 to 175 North Wabash avenue, where they will handle a complete line of cut flowers. Their store, which is in the basement of the new Amling building, affords a floor space of 18 x 63 feet. M. Freres says that he is well satisfied with the way in which business started.

In the belief that a large business can be built up by a store without expensive frills, O. J. Friedman is moving his second floor venture in the Ohio building to the more conspicuous corner rooms. The name used is Ohio Floral Co., Thomas Fogarty being in charge.

Emil Reichling, superintendent of Peter Reinberg's greenhouses, expects to have an early cut of new roses this year. Four houses of Russells were planted last week.

C. J. Michelsen says the sales of the E. C. Amling Co. for February 17 and 18 made the largest total of any regular Saturday-Sunday in the history of the company.

There are reports that considerable quantities of canna roots shipped during the recent zero weather were badly frozen and John P. Degnan, of Winterson's Seed Store, says he looks for a shortage of many varieties, especially of King Humbert, and for advancing prices as the season progresses.

Mrs. W. J. Smyth has been able to return home after spending three weeks in St. Luke's hospital and is able to sit up for a short time each day.

Sam Seligman had planned to leave Chicago February 19 and sail from Seattle March 1, but advices received last week from Japan have caused him to postpone his trip.

After having spent the greater part of February planting trees on Festiva Ranch, Red Bluff, Cal., Fritz Bahr plans to start for home February 22.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., returned February 21 from a trip through the midde east, the trade in Cincinnati having occupied his attention the first two days of this week.

The Amling and Bruns party, sojourning at Orange, Cal., motored to Pasadena one day last week to call on E. B. Washburn and inspect the Pacific coast branch of Bassett & Washburn, several large houses devoted to growing palms. They send the report that they were much pleased with the appearance of his young stock, all started from seed, and with the substantial character of the houses.

John F. Croom & Bro., Magnolia, N. C., last week delivered large quantities of canna, caladium and tuberose bulbs in this city.

It has been a winter of much activity at E. F. Winterson's new property of seventeen acres at Highland Park. He has moved, lowered or straightened up thirty-five large trees, one moved a quarter of a mile having weighed, with its ball of soil, approximately fourteen tons. The work has attracted much attention in the vicinity as having been the largest undertaking of its kind in that neighborhood.

J. E. Pollworth, of Kennicott Bros. Co., returned from a western trip last week which he says proved successful. Mr. Pollworth has bought himself a Ford for business calls.

Bulbous stock in large quantities now is being marketed, in pots and boxes, by Frank Oechslin. His La Reine tulips have brighter color than any others seen.

Eric Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., paid a brief combined business and pleasure trip to Detroit last week.

A boiler at the G. C. Weiland range burned out February 12, but there was sufficient extra capacity to avoid damage to the stock and the next day the cold wave passed.

Zech & Mann, who enjoy a considerable trade in New Orleans, say the Mardi Gras has made an appreciable increase in the shipments to that city.

That there will be no further shortage of any kind of flowers this season is the opinion of A. T. Pyfer, who says that he can not recall a season in which there has been more than momentary scarcity after Washington's birthday.

H. B. Kennicott says his mother, Mrs. Flint Kennicott, writes from their place in the Tampa district that the recent freeze was the worst known in Florida in many years. Mr. Kennicott fears damage to his orange trees, as the weather before the cold wave had been unusually warm for the season.

Several large orders have been keeping the store fixture department of the A. L. Randall Co. working overtime, according to Frank J. Rioux, who says that he is well pleased with the manner in which his division is progressing.

The largest shipping business his concern ever has done, is what Henry Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, Inc., says of the St. Valentine's day trade of his house.

H. G. Knowlton has resigned his position with the A. L. Randall Co. to accept one with the Morgan Lithograph Co.

Mushroom growing will be the new hobby of Fred Klingel, who recently severed his connection with the firm of Erne & Klingel because of ill health. Mr. Klingel says that some years ago he did a little experimenting with the growing of mushrooms and that the results were more than satisfactory. He expects to take a cottage somewhere near Chicago, where he will be within easy reach of the flower market, where he spent so many years, but where he will be able to live the outdoor life so essential to him. During the summer months he also hopes to grow some outdoor flowers for market purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Block, of Milwaukee, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Adele, to Sidney Buchbinder, well known manufacturer of florists' refrigerators.

A. Henderson has returned from a short business trip to New York.

R. E. Schiller was married February 21, his bride being a Miss White. The young couple went to New York for a two weeks' honeymoon.

George Asmus is confined to his bed with a severe attack of rheumatism.

Visitors.

Julius C. Steinhauser, of Pittsburg, Kan., was in town several days last week, buying supplies for the new store he is about to open and getting ideas and estimates for another rose house soon to be added to his range a mile from the store. He says business never was better and he is providing a store equipment second to none for cities of its size.

A. E. Kunderd, of ruffled gladiolus fame, came up from Goshen, Ind., last week, preparatory to a trip east early in March.

The presence of the following visitors was noted last week: Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; R. J. Dill, of the Avon Floral Co., Decatur, Ill.; E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia.

The Market.

Roses, which are not any too plentiful, have been selling satisfactorily, at good prices. There has been a strong call for Russell, but the supply of this variety has been inadequate. Splendid blooms of Killarney and Ophelia experience a quick sale, with Ophelia, as usual, leading in quality and popularity. American Beauties are in robust demand, but it is difficult to find enough of them, even at stiff prices. Sweet peas of fine quality are shown in profusion, but a lively sale precludes any glut or surplus of these. Carnations are plentiful, but do not sell as easily as they might, though here and there a retailer says they are his best sellers. There is a flood of bulbous stock, including jonquils, freesias and daffodils, but the demand seems to take care of these, with the prices still good. Rainbow freesias have met with a quick sale.

Orchids are more plentiful now and were in the limelight St. Valentine's day. Valley, however, continues scarce and the price is steep. Good violets in liberal supply last week found a host of buyers. A heavy batch of funeral work has called for Easter lilies and callas, but the last-named have been hard to find. Daisies and pussy willows have been featured to good advantage. Plants, azaleas and bulbous stock, have had a good sale. Ferns and some of the greens have been excellent and plentiful. Adiantum of good length was scarce last week.

After noon St. Valentine's day orders came in thick and fast, particularly for corsages, baskets and plants. As the day was mild, deliveries were made without any hardships.

Various Notes.

Hans Rosacker has been attracting a good business with his fine supply of young plants.

In addition to a full line of potted bulbous stock and azaleas, Max Kaiser has been enjoying a good sale of some extra long Sprengeri. He is satisfied with the St. Valentine's day business done.

S. M. Rosenfeld, representative of a New York ribbon house, is here with a fine line of chiffons and novelties.

The Whitted Floral Co. did a brisk business at both its stores St. Valentine's day. Novelties, baskets and fancy boxes sold well.

One of the handsomest stores in town is that of Moore & Terwilleger, in which special pains have been taken to harmonize the fittings, woodwork, etc.

The Market.

Last week the market opened with stock as scarce as ever and the demand for St. Valentine's day was almost equal to that of Christmas or Easter. Shipping trade has been unusually good. The end of the week still found a steady demand, with stock well cleaned up.

Bulbous stock of all kinds is coming in and the better class of stock is bringing good prices. Snapdragons are at last coming into crop, having been off all winter. Sweet peas are in good supply and move readily. Valley is scarce. There has been a good cut of violets, but the heavy call has kept them on the move.

Various Notes.

St. Valentine's business this year was the best ever seen at the Parker Flower Shop. They had all they could handle.

Fred Lainson, of Council Bluffs, is sending to Omaha some of the finest carnations seen on the market. The keeping quality of his stock is hard to beat. He is busy these days, having just in-

The Market.

The severely cold weather, with little sunshine, has had a tendency to make flowers of all kinds scarce, roses particularly so. American Beauties are extremely scarce, as they have been for the last three or four weeks. Other varieties of roses are more plentiful, but the supply is not sufficient for the demand. Carnations have increased in supply somewhat, but there still are not enough of them. Ward is most popular because of its fine color and good keeping qualities. Daffodils, jonquils and

FOR YOUR PROTECTION, MR. FLORIST,

ACCEPT "SUPERIORA" MAGNOLIA LEAVES ONLY

For they are endorsed by the leading wholesale trade. REFUSE IMITATIONS

EXTRACTS FROM OUR ENDORSEMENTS

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are the best leaves that we have ever handled, and we have had no complaint from any of our customers who bought these leaves from us. We have stored these leaves under all conditions and found that they will not mould; it is a very satisfactory leaf indeed."

W. Q. Potter Co., successor to the McCallum Co., of Cleveland, O., states: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are of the highest obtainable quality and second to none, such as has never been on the market before, for they are all of a one uniform size, which is the main thing in the making of wreaths. Also your leaves are uniform in color, which gives the finished wreath a rich tone quality, and this gets the results for the florists. Up to now all imitators of your leaves have failed in producing a quality which is worth mentioning. Every wholesale florist who wants to protect his trade should sell only your product. We have found that you have kept up the quality always, and we hope that you will continue to do so. The florists are willing to pay a few cents more per case on your goods, which are really cheaper in comparison with any other brands which are flooding the markets from time to time."

Jos. G. Neidinger Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but find your leaves to be far superior to all others, etc., etc."

The Barteldes Seed Store, of Denver, Colo., writes: "In regard to the quality of the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, we take pleasure in advising that we have found all of these leaves which we received from you to be of an even size and medium length. Both the size and the length being extremely uniform. They have also reached us in pliable condition, and altogether we have been quite well satisfied with them."

The Kervan Co., of New York City, writes: "We have handled your Magnolia leaves for several years and we take pleasure in announcing that our already long list of satisfied customers continues to grow. Since we have handled your leaves we have never had a complaint, but before that there was dissatisfaction."

The Montreal Floral Exchange, Montreal, Canada, writes: "Our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, which is a good recommendation in itself that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf. We appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us."

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., says: "We have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves for the past six years and find in all this time that we have had no complaints but many compliments on these goods., etc., etc."

Jos. E. Koppelman, of Providence, R. I., writes: "We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere, etc., etc."

McAlpine & McDonald, of Boston, Mass., write: "In answer to your letter of January 5th, requesting our endorsement on 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, would say that you might put us down as saying that we have found them a most satisfactory leaf in every respect, our trade being well pleased with them. We also wish to say that our business dealings with the Dr. H. Dux Co. have been the finest ever."

New England Florist Supply Co., of Boston, Mass., writes: "Have found 'Superiora' Magnolias the best leaves on the market. The sales on this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business."

Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Have always found that the 'Superiora' brand gives our customers entire satisfaction; in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years."

Russin & Hanfling, of New York City, write: "In response to your letter of recent date, it gives us great pleasure to state that we have been very much satisfied with the quality of your 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves. We have tried the Magnolias of several other manufacturers, but in consequence we find your leaves to be pre-eminent to all others placed upon the market, particularly with the view that your leaves are all of one uniform color, as well as being pliable and non-moulding."

Henry M. Robinson & Co., of Boston, Mass., write: "We are pleased to state that the quality of your leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale, etc."

Reed & Keller, of New York City, say: ". . . and we beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way. We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory; colors vary and leaves mould quickly, etc."

tulips are more abundant than any other items on the market and sell readily. Narcissi and marigolds are included in the collection.

Easter lilies have been hard to find. Sweet peas, violets and orchids realized an old-time demand St. Valentine's day. Flowering plants, too, were in heavy demand, especially hyacinths and tulips. There could be no better proof than this year's St. Valentine's day business as to the results of good advertising. There is little doubt that each of the florists had a better St. Valentine's day business this year than last year—and it was 10 degrees below zero at 7 o'clock in the morning of that day.

Various Notes.

Jerry Brookins has had his share of difficulties this winter. Just now he is worrying over the lack of coal. He can procure fuel only in small quantities now and then. He is shipping some extra fine sweet peas.

W. B. Leipzig, of A. Leipzig, Inc., New York, and P. M. Phillips, with S. A. Weller, Boston, were recent visitors to the local market. Harold Taylor, with Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, also was a visitor.

L. H. Neubeck reports a substantial increase in his St. Valentine's day's business.

Miss Ruth Barry, of Palmer's branch store, who has been on the sick list, has resumed her duties.

A most realistic St. Valentine's window display was to be seen at S. A. Anderson's. The force reports an extra fine business for the day.

It is with regrets that we record the passing of Thomas A. Webb, who at one time had greenhouses at Corfu, N. Y. He died February 13 at the home of his daughter, at a ripe old age. He was taken to Corfu for burial.

"The best ever," was the answer of Benson Stafford when questioned as to his St. Valentine's day business.

While waiting for a car on the morning of February 12, at Main and South Division streets, Mr. Weber had his right hand frozen. This was one of the extremely cold days, the thermometer registering 10 degrees below zero. He was taken to the Emergency hospital and is now rapidly recovering. Mr. Weber used to be associated with Scott, the Florist, having charge of the cemetery work. A. E.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Everybody who grows daffodils forces them into flower for St. Valentine's day, with the result that everybody has a hand in smashing the market. Daffodils, Golden Spur, went down, down, down, until immediately after Valentine's day they sold at prices quite pleasing to the bears. The pre-Lenten season has closed with all the flowers on the list strong, except Golden Spurs. The supply of Spurs is still so heavy that these can be bought cheaply. Roses, particularly Killarney, are a little more plentiful. White roses are in active demand. They bring surprisingly high prices. Beauties are quite scarce; the crop is now at its lowest ebb.

The Spencer type of sweet peas are extremely fine. Most of the flowers are pink, the popular color, with the other colors in smaller supply. The old grandiflora, or early-flowering type of sweet peas have absolutely no chance in the market against the Spencers, no matter how well grown they may be. Violets did moderately well for Valentine's day, but even then the supply was more than sufficient. There are quite a number of good orchids and valley, but both are selling well. The other flowers show no especial change. The market for them continues excellent.

The Rotary Club.

Not every florist knows about the Rotary Club, its aims and ambition. The Rotary Club is formed of representative men from each branch of active business. The idea is to limit the club membership to just one man from each business. The aim of the club is to benefit all its members by association with each other. The club motto, I do not recall the exact words, is the broad idea that each must give freely of his best thoughts before he can hope to learn from his neighbor. There are weekly meetings, and an annual meeting to which ladies, the wives or daughters of the members, are invited.

You will want to know something about the personnel of the Rotary Club. E. J. Berlette, who spoke so well before the club, is, of course, the representative of jewelry. Then of course there is Bartley J. Doyle, of the Keystone Publishing Co. But what of flowers? The retail florists are represented by —Guess who; one, two, three—Why, by Charles Henry Fox! Seeds are represented by Paul F. Richter, with Frederick J. Michell as an associate member. Greenhouse construction is represented by Fred Cowperthwaite; wholesale florists by Charles E. Meehan.

The Coal Situation.

It is a most curious fact, possibly an unprecedented occurrence, that the price of hard coal, in the florists' sizes, pea and buckwheat, is higher today in the wholesale market when purchased in carload lots than in the retail market when purchased a ton or two at a time. This is explained by the retail coal merchants being protected by contracts which enable them to sell coal at a profit below the sky-high prices quoted at the mines, plus freight and delivery.

Florists who are obliged to buy hard coal now will do well to look carefully into this matter before ordering even a small quantity of coal.

The Second Assembly.

Edward N. Habermehl said, with quiet conviction in his tone, that the decorations for the Second Assembly ball, held in the Bellevue-Stratford Friday evening, February 16, were the handsomest that his firm had ever arranged. This view was shared by his staff of decorators, who assisted in the work and who, to a man, voiced the same idea.

This result was the more gratifying because of the obstacles to be overcome. Usually two days are allowed for this elaborate decoration. This time, however, owing to a party in the ballroom the night before, work could not commence until 7 o'clock on the morning of the day of the ball. Then some of the material that was depended upon failed to arrive, making it necessary to secure other material at the last moment. Despite these drawbacks, everything was ready on time without apparent hurry or fuss. This is high praise for the executive management.

The decorations for the Second Assembly ball differed as widely from those arranged for the First Assembly as spring does from winter. The heaviness of the spruce and hemlock used in the January decoration was replaced by a lightness, a grace and airiness suggestive of early springtime. The appearance of the ballroom was a beautiful scene of garden, of lawn promenade and of vistas of graceful foliage. The lightness was carried out overhead by the free use of greenhouse-grown smilax on chandeliers, softening the already subdued colored lights. The garden scene on the stage was carried out with consummate ability, the free use of pink and, occasionally, white azaleas materially aiding the effect. Baskets of tiger lilies, Lilium rubrum and of deep pink Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward, were among the balcony ornaments.

The Clover room was arranged to represent a garden with a summer house, benches, fountain of colored lights and many groups of handsome plants. Wild smilax was used overhead as in an arbor. Two kinds of exquisite yellow flowers, Acacia pubescens and Bignonia venusta, lent their charm to this canopy.

The most noticeable feature of the whole decoration was its grace. There was absolutely no stiffness, no heaviness, no crowding. All the plants appeared to advantage. Each one gave the impression of having grown for a long time just where it was placed, and of enjoying its surroundings.

A trellised grassy walk led to the supper room, where the little tables were adorned with high or low vases, now and then baskets, of flowers. There were American Beauties, scarce as they are, on the patronesses' table, and tall Easter lilies, low baskets of the rich deep pink Mrs. Ward carnations, and so on. Most of the flowers were in low bowls or baskets—just enough tall vases of flowers to enhance the effect for the supper room.

The patronesses' bouquets were a marvel of loveliness. They were made in the half-round style that suggests an apple sliced down the middle; a sensible sort of bouquet because it can be displayed without danger of spoiling gown or flowers. Each bouquet, they were all different, was formed of a variety of flowers, perfect specimens, in light harmonious shades of color. An orchid, a gardenia, or maybe two, a Sunburst rose, a spray of snapdragon, a Double White Killarney and so on, edged with that loveliest of ferns, Adiantum Farleyense. The bouquets were all of good size, tied with dainty ribbon in two colors or shades of color.

A Golden Window.

The neighborhood of Germantown and Chelton avenues, where those two thoroughfares intersect, is rapidly becoming a business center of first importance. On the southern side of Chelton avenue, just west of its historic neighboring street, is a florist's window that attracts the passer-by this week. It is a golden window arranged with taste, aimed to produce an impression as a whole. Each basket, perfect in itself, forms part of the general effect.

Golden was the predominating color. Golden Spur daffodils, Yellow Prince tulips and Calendula Prince of Orange in several shades, with bows of golden ribbon, gave this coloring. The effect was softened by the pure white of Easter lilies, lilacs and narcissi, and contrasted by moderate use of violets, baby primroses, scarlet tulips and—may I say?—mignonette. The flowers were well arranged in baskets, with a striking black and yellow vase in the center, placed on a green velvet cloth. The baskets, white handles and birch bark, were further graced by pussy willows and ivy. Ferns were used in the background.

This pretty window was arranged by Frank R. Hastings, personally.

Various Notes.

The February meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall Monday afternoon, February 19. Prof. Sanders, the economic zoölogist of the Pennsylvania department of agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa., spoke on "Control of Insects That Are Injurious to Plant Life."

Alphonse Pericat, of Collingdale, is flowering some of the beautiful Rainbow freesias that come in the tender shades.

Robert F. Welsh spoke before the Germantown Horticultural Society in the library of Vernon Park Monday evening, February 19. His subject was "Mt. Katahdin, in Maine."

Sentiment is so strongly in favor of a twenty-five per cent advance in the price of spring-flowering plants that it seems almost certain the meeting held in the Florists' Club as this paper goes to press will take action toward this end.

The regular meeting of the committee in charge of the rose show to be held next month took place on the afternoon of February 15, in the Bellevue-Stratford. The publicity campaign will commence at once. The retail florists will give the exhibition their hearty, practical support. The trade tickets are now ready. The price is $25 per hundred. Write for them to Edwin J. Fancourt, 1614 Ludlow street, Philadelphia.

Edward Reid is receiving superb Spencer sweet peas, extra fine orchids and wonderfully grown valley.

Mark P. Mills is enthusiastic about the coming rose festival. Phil.

the supply insufficient for the demands. Transient trade at the retail stores never was better, the bright, mild weather bringing out shoppers in full force. The clear, cool weather that preceded was just the kind to bring out a big crop of violets, for which the demand was greater this year than ever before. The top price for violets was 75 cents per hundred. One wholesale house disposed of 52,000 violets for St. Valentine's day. Roses were extremely scarce. It seems that all local growers are off crop at this time. This, of course, made the demand for roses seem extra large. Extra fine Ophelias and Russells cleaned up daily at top prices. Beauties, too, were scarce, and any kind of red roses sold on sight.

The supply of carnations has been quite large, but the scarcity of roses caused a big demand for the carnations and extra choice stock brought $4 per hundred. Clean-up sales were reported throughout the week. The Enchantress varieties were in the majority, following which were Ward, Matchless and Beacon. Some extra fine cattleyas and cypripediums are in the market. The cattleyas bring $7.50 per dozen. Bulbous stock is coming in finely. Callas and Easter lilies had a big demand. Tulips and jonquils sold well at $3 to $4 per hundred. Valley is extremely scarce in this market. Fancy Spencer sweet peas clean up well, but the common varieties drag. Asparagus is becoming scarce. Smilax, galax and flat ferns are in good demand at the usual prices.

Various Notes.

St. Louis was visited by a freak hail storm February 19. One and one-quarter inches of hail fell, and the pellets were quite large in some sections. From what I can learn this early, the Kirkwood growers escaped damage, as the stones were too small in that section to do any harm. John Bentzen is said to have lost 1,000 panes of glass; the Young Bros. Floral Co., 150 lights; John Nyflot, 500, and John Shields, 300. The weather bureau said the storm was unusual for February. Light hail storms are not uncommon during the winter months, but the heavy fall February 19 was remarkable.

The St. Louis Aquarium Society held a meeting last week and accepted the invitation to exhibit fishes in connection with the spring flower show at the First Regiment armory, March 15 to 18. George H. Pring, orchid expert at the Missouri Botanical Garden, was present and lectured on "Native Aquatic Plants." John P Woods, state fish commissioner, spoke on the "Food Value of Fish."

Grimm & Gorly furnished the decorations for the biggest wedding of the season. Several thousand Ophelia roses and white lilacs were used.

The Missouri State Horticultural Society has named the crab apple blossom as the state flower. H. C. Irish, president of the society, says a bill was introduced in the Missouri assembly naming this blossom as the state flower.

Arthur Endicott, 20 years of age, an employee in the greenhouses of the Missouri Botanical Garden, was killed recently by an automobile. Young Endicott had his overcoat collar over his ears to keep out the wind and failed to hear the auto's warning. He was well known to many in the trade.

Charles Beyer is showing some extra fine, well flowered bulbous stock in pans in his big show house on Grand avenue. An exceptionally fine St. Valentine's day business was done by Mr. Beyer.

Mrs. McNiel and Miss Betty Carlston have formed a partnership and will open a first-class store on Delmar avenue, near Kings Highway. Mrs. McNiel at present is visiting relatives in the south,

FOR YOUR PROTECTION, MR. FLORIST,

ACCEPT "SUPERIORA" MAGNOLIA LEAVES ONLY

EXTRACTS FROM OUR ENDORSEMENTS

The Wm. Murphy Co., of Cincinnati, O., writes: "We find your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves the best product of the kind we have ever sold, and we take pleasure in congratulating you on same and recommending them to all in need of a first-class satisfactory leaf."

B. E. & J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Pa., write: "We have always considered your Magnolia Leaves to be a standard for quality, etc."

The Baltimore Wholesale Florist and Supply Co., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "We are confident that any other manufactured Magnolia Leaves could not compete with yours, as other brands have been offered us, which, after we tried them, we refused to carry in stock."

N. F. McCarthy & Co., of Boston, Mass., write: ". . . It is the opinion of McCarthy & Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents."

Jos. Ziska & Sons, of Chicago, Ill., write: "We feel that you are entitled to a compliment on the good quality of your 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves. We have handled these goods for a long time—in fact, we believe that we are one of the first handlers of your goods here in Chicago, and must say that we have as yet to get a return of your merchandise. Even buyers that were always accustomed to buying the foreign brands realize and admit that your leaves are far superior."

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange, Cleveland, O., says: ". . . never as yet have we had a complaint on the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, nor a carton returned."

Smith & Young Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "We will continue to use 'Superiora' exclusively as we consider it superior to any other leaf in the market. Since we handle 'Superiora' we have not had one single complaint, etc., etc."

The Leo Niessen Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "To the best of our knowledge your leaves are of the best quality and as good as we can get in the market."

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, writes: ". . . that we have been sending you orders for 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves for several years should prove that we like your goods . . ."

The Dale Estate, of Brampton, Ont., writes: "We are glad to state that any 'Superiora' leaves that we have had in the past were always as reported and gave satisfaction in our business."

Geo. H. Angermueller, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "It pleases me to say that I have worked up a splendid business on your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, and I credit my success to the fact that the quality of your leaves has always been entirely satisfactory to my customers, etc."

Oscar Leistner, of Chicago, Ill., writes: ". . . As you know, before you gave us the sole agency for the Western country, we were handling a different leaf, but these leaves gave us no end of trouble and our customers were very much disappointed with the quality. Since we have been handling your leaves we find that the complaints from our customers have entirely disappeared, and the trade seems anxious to buy your leaves exclusively. Only today one of our customers told us that he had bought 100 cartons of Magnolias from one of your competitors, but that he has been compelled to return them, as his customers absolutely refused to accept them, due to the fact that the leaves are 'off-color' as well as mouldy, etc."

New York Florists' Supply Co., of New York City, writes: "Since we have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves we have had no complaints about the quality, and can assure you that in our judgment they are fully up to the standard of the best imported."

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "My customers insist on having the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolias, as they claim these are the best, and that they do not dry out or become mouldy, and that every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest, besides being the best."

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Other Magnolia preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods 'just as good as Dux's' at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us, and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business and will not take a chance of losing it; in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as 'Magnolia Kings.'"

L. Baumann & Co., of Chicago, Ill., write: "We regard your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves as being unequaled and certainly would not want to have anything else. Your leaves need no recommendation—they speak for themselves."

thirty-seventh birthday February 15 by visiting the St. Louis county growers in company with his friends, J. J. Karins, of Philadelphia, and Robert Newcomb, of Chicago.

All of the seed houses were busy last week. The fine, spring-like weather caused quite a rush. The St. Louis Seed Co., which recently suffered a heavy loss from fire, now is in shape to handle all business.

Oliver K. Sanders, head of the retail department of the Sanders Nursery Co., on Clara avenue, says the company had a good run of society work last week. A great St. Valentine's day business was done. C. C. Sanders, head of the nursery department, reports plenty of orders to work on as soon as the weather permits.

Martin Seeger, head of the Mullanphy Florists, says they never were so busy St. Valentine's day as they were this year. The day is fast becoming one of the best flower holidays of the year.

Fred H. Weber will open one of the finest retail establishments in the west end March 1. He will locate at the corner of Olive and Taylor avenues. A large conservatory will face Taylor avenue. The old stand at Boyle and Maryland avenues will be continued.

Robert Newcomb, of the American Bulb Co., of Chicago, called on the trade last week. R. A. McPheron and daughter, of the Cottage Greenhouses, Litchfield, Ill., spent the day here February 18.

There are only twenty-one days before the spring flower show. This will be one of the largest undertakings, in the way of a flower show, ever attempted in

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Business last week was exceptionally good, there having been much decorative and funeral work. The telegraph business showed an increase over that of previous weeks, in both incoming and outgoing orders. Prices on all flowers remain about the same as quoted last week. Azaleas are coming in more plentifully and are in good demand. Lilac is good and sells well both in pots and as cut flowers. Toledoans seem to be going in more for spring flowers this year than ever before, and centerpieces made of lavender and white sweet peas, with forsythias, pussy willows, daffodils, tulips, etc., not only sell readily but also bring good prices. Daffodils are more plentiful at the present writing and bring $3 per hundred. Tulips and narcissi are not so plentiful at present. Potted bulbous plants are coming in well, but at no time has there been a glut, as there has been a constant demand for spring flowers, especially for hospitals. Carnations are more plentiful, but the prices remain the same. All varieties of roses are somewhat scarce and prices continue good. A few inferior grades bring $6 per hundred, while the better grades average $8, $10, $12 and some as much as $20 per hundred.

St. Valentine's Day Business.

Never before in the history of this city's trade did St. Valentine's day business come up to the notch that rewarded the florists for their efforts this year in boosting and advertising St. Valentine's day as a flower day. Business completely swamped the live-wire florists of the city and almost completely exhausted the tremendous supply of cut flowers for the day. Roses sold by the hundreds, as also did carnations and bulbous flowers, but most astounding of all was the great sale of violets. Florists in this city were completely sold out of violets a little after noon on St. Valentine's day, and then orders had to be booked for peas and the novelties. Baskets artistically arranged with assorted flowers and heart-shaped boxes containing corsage bouquets of various styles predominated, next to clusters of violets and roses. The quantity of potted plants sold was remarkable.

This again encourages florists not to be backward in making flower days more prominent, and not to hesitate to spend a little money on newspaper advertising and the like. The great amount of business transacted February 14 stands out conspicuously and shows what can be done when we work more systematically. Let us remember this again next year and not slip back into the old rut and allow this day to sink into oblivion, which surely will be the case if we drop our earnest activity and forget to "beat yesterday."

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery also was a big factor in advancing the sales on this day, and it is plain to be seen how florists and the public at large are beginning to realize the benefits of this means of sending flowers to friends in distant cities.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman reports that business surpassed all previous records of former St. Valentine's days and that half again as many orders could have been filled at her store had it not been for a shortage of flowers.

Miss Helen Patten said that never since the inception of her flower store has she taken care of so many orders. The orders ranged in price from $3 to $5 and upward on the big day.

Schramm Bros. had an unusual quantity of orders for table decorations for this day and, together with the sales of violets and tastefully arranged baskets, report the best business ever. The overwhelming increase of sales of this year over last year for this day was due mostly to the newspaper advertising done by this firm. Several half-page ads in the local newspaper of February 12 and 13 brought in the results and showed what an increase in sales can be effected when gone after in the correct way and time.

Increase Your Profits

Stop the losses from withered flowers due to lack of preservation. If you could sell all the blossoms that now wither in stock and are thrown away, think how much you could increase your profits.

You can do just that with

McCRAY Florist Refrigerators

The McCray patented system of refrigeration maintains a cool, even temperature, and keeps your flowers always fresh and salable. Your losses from withered stock are done away with.

The McCray is handsome, too. And its plate glass doors and sides display your flowers in the most attractive way. The different compartments vary in size to accommodate different lengths of stems.

The woodwork may be had in any finish to match your store's interior decoration. The linings may be either heavy plate mirror or white enamel, as you desire. Both are handsome and easy to keep clean.

NOTICE.

On February 10th, 1917, I purchased all the interest in the firm known heretofore as C. H. Frey Co., and will collect all bills and pay all debts of said firm.

The business hereafter will be conducted by myself at 1133 O St., the location I have had for 20 years past, and will be known as C. H. Frey, Florist.

The greenhouses at 35th St., four blocks south of South St., have been under my personal charge since their erection in 1895, so that in taking over the whole business there is no change except in the store management, which falls to me, but having able lieutenants at both greenhouse and store, I shall be able to look after both ends satisfactorily to customers and myself.

My endeavor shall be in the future as in the past, "my customers' interest," and I ask their continued valued patronage. Respectfully,

C. H. FREY.

Lincoln, Neb., February 13th, 1917.

The Market.

Business, as usual, has been running at high tide during the last week and, thanks to a few days of sunshine, stock has increased to meet the heavy demands. Funeral work and flowers for the sick have provided the florists with many generous orders. The excellent St. Valentine's day business cleaned up every sweet pea, violet and valley in the city and went deeply into the supply of roses and spring flowers. We think Valentine's day can be made just as great a flower day as Christmas or Easter, with the aid of judicious advertising to educate the public.

All of the growers now are supplying large quantities of sweet peas of excellent quality, which are quickly sold. Calendulas and ten weeks' stocks are being shown, as well as some extra fine Keystone snapdragons. A vase of Rainbow freesias in a Fourth avenue window caused many to stop and admire. White lilac is coming in and is of high quality. There also is a plentiful supply of Paper White narcissi, at 75 cents per dozen. Lilium giganteum is still extremely scarce. There seems to be an opening for some wide-awake grower who will specialize in this flower.

Various Notes.

While this column is conducted for the Louisville florists, we feel we are not getting as much of their coöperation as we should. When we call and ask for news, some are not as talkative as they might be. Any items in this column are dug up with great difficulty. Helping the writer will be helping yourself, Mr. Florist.

The death of two of Louisville's prominent men brought the florists some good orders. Mrs. M. D. Reimers handled the family order of C. P. Moorman.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson furnished flowers for an elaborate double wedding St. Valentine's day, which taxed the capacity of the Thompson store. This was in addition to the other rush for this day.

The roses at the Rasmussen greenhouses are coming into heavy crop, having been helped by the bright weather.

The concern is furnishing a heavy supply locally and is shipping many to other centers.

The auto show has come and gone, but the memories of gold cars, limousines, roadsters and "flivvers" still remain. The Armory was artistically decorated for this occasion, the work being done by the E. G. Reimers & Son Co., which furnished several hundred palms, ferns and other plants. Large quantities of southern smilax were also used.

At the New Albany department of F. Walker & Co., a fine bench of Paper White narcissi was noted. Work is progressing on the Easter stock and bedding plants are receiving much attention.

At the vegetable houses of L. A. Plice a crop of extremely fine Grand Rapids lettuce had just been cut, and the beds were being put into shape for another crop. Some fine radishes were almost ready for market. Beets and cauliflower are started under glass here and later transplanted to the field.

G. F. Guthrie was cutting some fine Spencer peas when the writer called. The variety Mrs. A. A. Skach is well thought of here. Mr. Guthrie is said to be the pioneer in growing winter-flowering peas in this section, discovering their value as an indoor crop by accident.

John Werneke also specializes in sweet peas and some fine blooms on 18-inch stems were being cut. The vines are extremely thrifty at present, being about twelve feet in height.

According to J. E. Marret, great quantities of stock are being disposed of, but profits do not compare well with the business done. We think other florists would find the same true if an accurate cost record were kept. There is only one remedy for this, and that is to raise the prices of flowers. It has been done in every other line of business and must be done in this, if we are to stay in business. We must come to it sometime, so why not now?

George Schulz has issued a handsome booklet describing his prize-winning strain of white Leghorn chickens. In addition to being one of the most progressive florists in town, he has developed a breed of chickens that has won over the best stock in the country.

W. C. Leeming, who for many years supplied Louisville florists with choice sweet peas, chrysanthemums and other flowers, has been gradually going into the nursery business and landscape work. Although he still conducts his greenhouses, the growing and selling of ornamental nursery stock has become his specialty. At present he has the largest and most complete line of ornamental shrubs and evergreens to be found in the state. Last fall he planted many of the large country estates along the river road. He expects this spring to be the best in the history of the business for this kind of work.

Business continued fairly good last week in spite of severely cold weather. Trade for St. Valentine's day was good, but would have been better with warmer weather, temperatures being 8 to 15 degrees below zero in this vicinity on the morning of February 14. Violets and roses sold well, while there was a more moderate call for valley, sweet peas, orchids and gardenias. Forget-me-nots, as usual, sold well. There is not as yet any great rose surplus, although the milder weather now prevailing is sending along the spring crop. American Beauties are just about equal to the demand, with little change in prices. Hybrid tea roses sell mostly at from $2 to $12.50 per hundred, some fancy stock going higher, but it is getting more difficult to obtain fancy prices owing to the abundance of other flowers.

Carnations are a little weaker. Some fancies make $4, but the general run goes at $2.50 to $3. The quality is of the highest. Violets, which averaged $1 for St. Valentine's day, are coming in much more freely and are lower in price. Sweet peas are of splendid quality, with a wide price range from 50 cents to $2. Practically all varieties of tulips and narcissi are obtainable, Darwin tulips included. Prices on these are about the same as a week ago, but a few mild days will cause a decline.

Such flowers as marguerites, snapdragons, wallflowers, forget-me-nots, pansies, double English daisies, English primroses, mignonette and anemones are coming in much more freely. The only iris as yet seen on the market is I. Tingitana, an Algiers variety. No Spanish iris will appear for some time yet. Gardenias are abundant and selling slowly; the same is true of cattleyas. There is a good supply of cypripediums, lælias, phalænopsis, dendrobes and other orchids. Green stock moves well.

Pot plant trade is good. Forced shrubs in variety, cyclamens, cinerarias, Darwin tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, azaleas, schizanthus, genistas and a few rambler roses are among the varieties seen.

Club Meeting.

Carnation night, February 20, attracted, as usual, a large number of members, the lecture room of Horticultural hall being well filled. The banquet committee made a financial report showing a profit from the banquet and advertising matter in the booklet of about $250. An interesting address was made by C. S. Strout, vice-president of the A. C. S., on the growing of young stock. He also spoke of the varieties he grows at Biddeford and compared their values. He hoped Boston in 1918 will give the finest exhibition the American Carnation Society has yet held.

S. J. Goddard spoke of varieties seen at the convention; also at Indianapolis, La Fayette and other establishments visited.

The coming big spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was boomed and everyone urged to support it. The lecturer for the meeting in March, it was announced, would be Leonard Barron, editor of the Garden

The exhibits were numerous and of high quality, as is usual at the February meetings. They were:

Benora, Alice Coombs and Mrs. Ward carnations were staged by the Halifax Gardens Co. and were fine.

Magnificent cyclamens came from H. J. Borowski & Sons.

Strout's, Biddeford, Me., showed No. 1409, a fine white seedling carnation, also Matchless, Pink Delight and Nancy, in such good shape as to receive a report of merit, and a new crimson seedling.

W. W. Edgar showed Darwin tulips.

Andrew Rogers made an exhibit of excellent freesias.

The seedling cymbidium shown by J. Findlayson received a report of merit.

Paul F. Brigham showed Carnation Benora and a vase of seedlings.

S. J. Goddard showed Rosalia in fine form and received a report of superior merit for Laddie, Nancy and Doris carnations.

W. D. Howard received a report of merit for Carnation Bernice.

Littlefield & Wyman showed Miss Theo, Beauty, White Wonder and Benora carnations.

John A. Nelson staged a vase of mixed carnations.

The Cottage Gardens Co. received a report of superior merit for Cottage Maid, and also staged a fine vase of Crystal White.

E. A. Richards showed Carnation Greenfield.

Among the speakers were David Ward, of Queens, who said the carnation display was the finest seen at any florists' club in the country. Many others took part in the discussion, including W. E. Lenk, J. A. Nelson, W. D. Howard, James Wheeler, Edward Winkler, F. E. Palmer, W. C. Stickel.

Delegates chosen for the Davey convention were W. H. Judd and J. G. Duguid, the alternates being A. E. Sawyer and James Donald.

Various Notes.

At Carbone's store, on Boylston street, there always are some new and unique plants and flowers to be seen and these are always displayed in a most æsthetic manner, quite different from the average retail store. Among cut flowers, colored freesias, anemones, crinums, phalænopsis, hybrid amaryllis, clivias and irises were noted. A large assortment of forced deciduous shrubs, schizanthus, Darwin tulips, ericas, acacias, Cineraria stellata, camellias and other flowering plants were to be seen. St. Valentine's day trade was the heaviest on record. Mr. Carbone, in spite of war conditions, again is in Europe purchasing supplies, and expects to be away for several months.

Prof. A. H. Nehrling, with a class of floricultural students from Amherst, spent February 14 to 16 visiting various establishments, stores and markets in and about Boston. Calls were made on S. J. Goddard, J. T. Butterworth, William Nicholson, William Sim, Thomas Roland, Faulkner Farm, Weld Garden, the wholesale flower markets and the retail stores of Penn, Galvin and Carbone. Prof. Nehrling leaves Amherst March 25, having bought a florist's establishment at Crawfordsville, Ind. He has done a splendid work at Amherst and expressions of regret at his leaving are heard on all sides.

Robert T. McGorum, of Natick, is sending in as fine a lot of roses as any grower for the Boston market. His leading varieties are Ophelia, Hadley, Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney. He is growing carnations this season and has a splendid lot of Matchless, Benora and Pink Delight. Calendulas are also well grown by him.

Arnold & Fisher are one of the newest local firms. Their specialty this season is sweet peas. They have two houses, 40x300, and will add more glass the coming season. Gordon Fisher, one of the firm, is a son of the late David Fisher, of Montvale, Mass., and a nephew of Peter Fisher, of Ellis.

Wadley & Smythe, New York and Newport, had the decorations for the Draper-Taft wedding February 10, which were most elaborate. Welch Bros. Co. supplied the decorators with practically all the flowers used. Welch Bros. Co. also supplied all the flowers used at the Portland, Me., auto show. Mr. Reynolds, one of the firm, recently returned from a business trip through Maine and New Brunswick and was surprised at the growth of the industry in New Brunswick since his previous visit.

William Downs spent a few days visiting friends in town last week and is much improved in health. He is living quietly at Belfast, Me., but hopes to be sufficiently recovered by April to resume some of his horticultural activities.

Judging from the way entries are coming in for the big spring show March 21 to 25, Horticultural hall will be severely taxed to accommodate everything. A large part of the available space is already spoken for. Everything indicates that this will be the finest spring show Boston ever has held.

The prohibition of imports of all nursery stock meets with little favor locally. All our serious pests have not been introduced on nursery stock. The gypsy moth, our most serious local pest, was brought over for experimental purposes

From the Waban Rose Conservatories splendid cuts of Ophelia, Hadley, Stanley, Killarney Brilliant and Russell roses are coming in. Their plants will be in heavy crop for the spring exhibitions.

At Penn's the volume of St. Valentine's day business easily broke all previous records in spite of the severe cold. Violets were the favorite flowers, being heavily advertised, but roses, valley, orchids, gardenias and other choice flowers all sold well.

Paul F. Brigham, of Westboro, is cutting a splendid lot of snapdragons and freesias. His favorite trio of carnations are Matchless, Pink Delight and Benora.

prices of flowers dropped. Lent is not expected to make much difference to sales.

William Hannan & Sons, of Dorchester, are sending in an average of 5,000 Golden Spurs daily. They will start cutting lilies in quantity this week. George Hannan is confined to the hospital and continues seriously ill.

A. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, has had a most successful season with carnations. He grows Matchless, Pink Delight, Good Cheer, Benora and Fenn.

The W. W. Edgar Co. has a splendid lot of lilacs in flower, also azaleas in quantity. Among this concern's bulbous plants, pans of Darwin tulips are fine and in big demand, and the stock of Easter lilies never looked better.

Robert Montgomery is much improved in health. I was pleased to see him in the wholesale market February 17.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, likes Carnation Alice and finds it a wonderful producer. He also grows White Wonder, Matchless, Benora and Pink Delight.

Seymour Grose, buyer for Carbone's, lost his father, Edgar Grose, February 13, aged 68 years. Burial was at Ipswich February 15. The wholesale flower markets and stores sent a beautiful lot of floral tributes.

Germain Plant & Seed Co.
Los Angeles, California. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

R. RICHARDS, of Bristol, England, a nurseryman of the old school, passed away January 20, aged 79 years. He was the father of H. R. Richards, correspondent for The Review at Los Angeles.

GRALLERT'S CYCLAMEN.

Paul W. A. Grallert, of Oakland, Cal., had the best Christmas business in his history this season, largely because of his success with cyclamens. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made December 1, 1916. These are two King houses; that is, they are truss houses erected with material supplied by the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y. The plants in the foreground are in 10-inch fern pans. In view of the small supply and the fact that many good growers did not have as fine stock as usual, Mr. Grallert feels especially well pleased with his success, which was readily convertible into dollars.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day this year was more generally observed in a floral way than that of any other year, resulting in considerably more business for the florists. One contributing reason, of course, was the heavier advertising done in the local papers, as consistently advocated in The Review. Business, apart from this occasion, has not been particularly brisk. For one thing, the weather, though mild, has not been bright, and the public does not seem to buy flowers so frequently when there is no sunshine. Stock of most of the staple flowers is now fairly abundant, but there is far from a glut in any item. Carnations are arriving in larger quantities than at any time this winter and, though there is no superabundance, the quality is much improved and good prices are maintained. Roses mostly come from southern points and are of good quality. The demand for them is excellent.

Daffodils and tulips are plentiful and there has been some unreasonable cutting of prices, leaving no profit to grower or retailer. Of course the retailer is the guilty party in these transactions, but usually in these cases the retailer and grower are the same person. The trade always suffers thereby. A few local violets are coming in, but not nearly enough to satisfy the demand. Imported ones are abundant. Cinerarias and cyclamens now occupy prominent positions among the potted plants, and hyacinths and tulips sell well.

Various Notes.

The Seattle Landscape Gardeners' Association is giving a demonstration of rose pruning in one of the city parks. This is of much interest to rose lovers, of whom there are a large number in this city.

F. J. Cole and Frank Quillin are happy men these days, both of them having become fathers of fine girls.

Carl Melby reports a fine Valentine business. F. W. Winters now is first assistant in the Pike street store. A large number of Easter lilies are being grown at the Madison street greenhouse.

Judging by appearances at the Orpheum Floral Store, the Valentine business must have been phenomenal. There was hardly anything left for next day.

The Aabling-Boyce Seed Co. has published its spring catalogue, which is much more comprehensive than most

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

During the last week carnations have become more plentiful; indeed, on some days there have been more carnations than could be handled, as well as violets, while on other days they have cleaned up well. Other stock, with the exception of a few small flowers, is still on the short side and apparently will be for some time, if business keeps up at its present clip. Indoor roses are a little cheaper, but the demand keeps up well, and for large decorations or special jobs there is usually some difficulty in obtaining enough stock. Daffodils, freesias and other bulbous flowers still come slowly, owing to the cold nights, and some days there are not nearly enough to go around.

Orchids are on the scarce list; so are Cecile Brunner roses. Gladioli continue to come in small quantities, but there are enough for the demand. Callas are becoming more plentiful as the season advances and, though there is a small local demand, quite a number are shipped out of town, especially to the desert sections. Good cornflowers are scarce, but other small stock of this nature is more plentiful.

There is a great difference in the quality of the Easter lilies now coming into the market. Some of them open freely and make a fine display; others persist in going "sleepy," probably on account of lack of vigor in the stems. Pussy willows, fruit and shrub branches, acacias and similar stock continue to be used in window displays and as fillers for large decorations for weddings. There is a little valley coming in, but not nearly enough for the demand, though the demand is smaller than formerly on account of the absence of valley from the market for so long. Asparagus plumosus is still scarce and much of it is poor and short. Other greens are about equal to the demand. In pot plants a few hyacinths are about the best offering outside of azaleas. Of the latter A. mollis is more plentiful than A. Indica.

The death of several prominent citizens last week made funeral work plentiful and this was followed by heavy demand for medium-priced flowers.

Fred Dostal, for many years associated with J. W. Wolters, first at the store on Fourth street and since then on Hill street, has resigned his position and for the present is helping out with the rush at F. Lichtenberg's store.

A. M. Pooley and the Pomona Floral Co. report business good at that flourishing little town, Pomona.

Mrs. A. L. Hurtt, of San Bernardino, is showing magnificent Spencer sweet peas, which were grown at the nursery. Mrs. Hurtt annually buys the best novelties, but saves her own seed for the bulk of the crop.

S. Murata & Co. has been handling a good grade of valley. Plant shipments are picking up now; also supplies and seeds, particularly grasses, clover and alfalfa.

Among the stock being shipped from the L. A. Floral Co. store are some extra good rose-pink carnations and outdoor sweet peas. Manager Fred Sperry says that the shipping business is keeping up well.

The Broadway Florist is rapidly coming to the front, the excellent location no doubt having a good deal to do with this, as well as the attractive store.

entine's day business. He says that it was more like Christmas. This valentine business certainly is worth cultivating.

The Market.

The local trade is well pleased over St. Valentine's day sales, as more people than in former years responded to the suggestion, "Let your valentine be flowers." The large volume of business done on that day was the direct result of extra effort by the florists in providing attractive novelties and placing them before the public in an advantageous manner. Several members of the trade here are of the opinion that the valentine business has been more or less neglected in the past, and the results of this year's increased advertising probably will lead to greater things another year.

Flowers were not overplentiful, so the increased demand resulted in a close clean-up. The supply of violets was much better than was anticipated earlier in the month, and the quality this week is better than at any other time during the season. When the flowers were not up to the standard some were shipped to eastern points, and that has had a tendency to hurt out-of-town business. More roses could have been used Valentine's day, and it required considerable ingenuity on the part of the salesmen to switch orders to other flowers to avert a real shortage of roses. The receipts of American Beauties are light; in fact, these roses have been scarce during the entire winter. Selected blooms bring top prices. Few white roses are offered, many of the growers having become discouraged at the spasmodic demand for such stock and turned their attention to other varieties. Hadley is the best of the reds. Complaints regarding Russell, Ophelia, Shawyer and Sunburst are as to quantity, not quality. The scarcity of roses applies to the general market, some houses with private sources of supply reporting enough roses for their requirements.

Daffodils are abundant and cheaper, but clear wonderfully well. For local use much stock can be had at 50 and 75 cents per hundred. Other bulbous flowers also are offered more freely. Tulips and hyacinths are coming in nicely and are meeting with great popularity. Freesias are still plentiful; so are Paper Whites and Romans. There now seems to be an abundance of valley, but no recession in prices is noted as yet, although lower quotations seem inevitable if the heavy cut continues long. Cattleyas are rather scarce, but many varieties of spray orchids are available. The supply of carnations is about equal to the demand. Asparagus and adiantum are still on the short side of the market. Almond blossoms are having a good call.

Various Notes.

The Sunkist Floral Co. has opened for business in a building just completed at the corner of Post and Leavenworth streets. Its number is 808 Post street. The place is nicely fitted up and is in a splendid location to cater to apartment house trade, there being large apartment buildings on all three opposite corners and for some distance in all directions. The store was leased before the building was completed, and was finished especially to suit the needs of the flower business, so the arrangement and equipment leave nothing to be desired.

In Any Quantity BABY RAMBLERS At Any Time

This new class of miniature roses is gaining wonderfully in popularity, and most deservedly so. Their exceeding freedom and continuity of bloom is unsurpassed in any other bedding or border plant. Their possibilities are worth your attention and consideration.

A Few of the Best:

Echo	Orleans	Mrs. Taft
Phyllis	Ellen Poulsen	Jeanne d'Arc
Erna Teschendorff	Baby Dorothy	Maman Turbat
Jessie	Baby Elegance	Geo. Elger

BABY DOLL

The most rapturously and strikingly beautiful little rose ever introduced. The color is absolutely new and startling in its brilliancy—golden yellow, tipped with clear cerise. The little buds and open flowers are elegantly finished and of most perfect form. Habit of the very best, strong and compact; freedom of bloom is remarkable and continuous throughout the entire season. We have given it a fair and thorough trial and have no hesitancy in offering it as the one best selling rose you ever handled. It is a money-maker.

Also special prices on all commerial varieties of Hybrid Teas.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. made a strong bid for St. Valentine's day business, and sales were well up to expectations, according to Frank Pelicano.

Valentine novelties were featured prominently at B. M. Joseph's store on Grant avenue, and a splendid business was reported by Manager F. J. Bertrand.

The Francis Floral Co. brought out a special line of gold heart-shaped baskets for St. Valentine's day, which met with popular favor.

An attractive and suggestive window display at the retail store of Mrs. R. E. Darbee, on Hyde street, caused many passers-by to step in and place orders for flower valentines.

Domoto Bros. brought in a large cut of valley for St. Valentine's day.

Ferrari Bros. continue to bring in quantities of spray orchids from their place at 202 University avenue. They have a nice cut of valley.

The California Floral Co., the new concern which opened for business early in the month, on California street, near Hyde street, is now comfortably settled and has no complaints to make about initial business. The store has a big window, which is used to good advantage. The interior presents a most attractive appearance, the steel-gray woodwork and mirror paneling providing an excellent background for the display of stock.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has been bringing in a fine cut of orchid-flowering sweet peas. These are greenhouse-grown and J. A. Axell says the demand has taken care of the supply nicely.

It is understood that the Clarke Bros. nursery at Oakland has been leased by Y. Oshima, who will operate it in conjunction with his place at Stege, in Contra Costa county.

The firm of Leopold & Pollard, of Santa Rosa, has been dissolved. The business is being continued by C. M. Leopold.

D. Raymond, manager of the Garden City Pottery Co., which manufactures flower pots at San Jose, Cal., has no complaints to make about business.

Miss Bertha Cohn, of the Bellevue Florists, says the force has been busy with table decorations and funeral work.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

There has been little change in market conditions. Stock is plentiful, generally of good quality, and has a fair market. Everyone connected with the flower business is wearing a smile and trying to look prosperous, regardless of the condition of his bank account.

Funeral and decorative work is using up much stock. St. Valentine's day business was good, according to all who have been interviewed, some saying that they had increases over last year as high as fifty per cent, while others say that from twenty to twenty-five per cent would be a fair estimate of their increases.

At any rate, it was a good business day. No exorbitant prices were asked. All lines of stock moved well. There was a decided preference for corsages and basket arrangements of both plants and cut flowers.

Various Notes.

Donart & Stapleton worked overtime handling their Valentine's day business, at the same time putting up a decoration for a church wedding and home reception. This firm is making extensive plans for its seed business and has engaged to take charge of this department Frederick Hewlett, who for several years was with a leading seedsman of England.

H. L. Olson has been figuring with the intention of building at least two houses this summer.

Henry Reimers is marketing splendid orchids, the best seen here in some time.

Adolph Donart is in with a big crop of sweet peas, which are finding a good market for funeral design work.

L. B. H.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was well observed as a special flower day here this year. No newspaper advertising was done, but all the retail stores had window displays suggesting the suitability of flowers as valentines. The report from the retail trade is unanimous in that it was the best Valentine business ever known. Although red was the favorite, the public did not insist on any special color, but took yellow, pink, white or lavender without any great discrimination. The bright weather had brought on a large supply of stock, which was of first-class quality and which was cleaned up at profitable prices. The displays of potted tulips were unusually fine and these sold to the last pot.

Carl Starker, who owns and operates a range of glass at Jennings Lodge, has had good success with his winter-flowering sweet peas. He is picking about 300 bunches per week.

Clarke Bros. reported a good demand for made-up baskets for use as valentines.

The Tonseth Floral Co. had good success with potted tulips; the public appreciated them.

FEEDING FORMOSA LILIES.

What is best for feeding Formosa lilies, and at what strength should it be used? Is it best to feed only the ones that are showing buds? My lilies are from nine to eighteen inches high and have strong roots. Do you think they have made enough growth? They look strong and healthy and have a good, dark green color. They were planted about November 1, 1916, and some of them are one foot high and are showing buds. Do they make most of their growth after showing buds? This is the first time I have grown them. I followed the cultural methods given in The Review.

A. L.—Mo.

A proportion of these lilies always come somewhat dwarf and some of them throw only a solitary flower. Many, however, will throw five to seven flowers and some of the stronger ones double that number. These latter usually grow three to four feet in height. The shoots will lengthen considerably after the buds appear. Liquid cow or sheep manure can be used to best advantage. If you soak the manure in a barrel or tank, use one-eighth of this liquid to seven-eighths of clear water. Do not feed until you are sure the plants are well rooted. Apply it once in four or five days.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fifth annual convention, Detroit, June 19 to 21, 1917.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. B. Agnew, of Visalia, Cal.

THE soaring price of vegetables is sure to make a big call for seeds this season for planting home gardens.

SEED potatoes never were so valuable as now and it is a question how many growers will succumb to the temptation to dispose of their planting stock.

LARGE onion set dealers report that trade in this item is heavy, with prices steadily advancing. March 1 delivery is now quoted at $4.50 to $5 per bushel.

ALARM is felt over the temptation present prices afford to sell stock seed. Onion bulbs and beans, especially, are so high that there is a disposition to dispose of them instead of planting.

THE recent freeze which extended through the entire south was so severe that even the special frost-proof cabbages, which ordinarily withstand quite low temperatures safely, were destroyed.

DR. DAVID GRIFFITH, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, recently made a trip south and at Brunswick, Ga., is quoted as stating that the soil and climate of Glynn county are as good as Ollioules for the production of narcissus bulbs.

GLADIOLUS bulbs have advanced in price as a result of the German blockade and the reluctance of the Holland-America line to sail its boats under existing conditions. There are large quantities of Dutch gladiolus bulbs that have been depended on to fill orders that may never leave Holland.

THE Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, in its 1917 catalogue, features the casaba tribe of melons. The back cover shows four varieties in colors and several pages of the book are devoted to cuts, descriptions, cultural notes and hints on shipping. The indications are that the casabas soon will be an important factor in the seed trade.

A 9-HOUR day on a 10-hour pay is the latest innovation by the Henry Field Seed Co., of Shenandoah, Ia. The change affects about 100 girl employees. "It is more or less of an experiment that we have had in mind for some time," said Mr. Field. "We think the girls can do as much in nine hours as they did in ten." The business is running much heavier than it did at this time last year. The postage bill for January was $14,000.

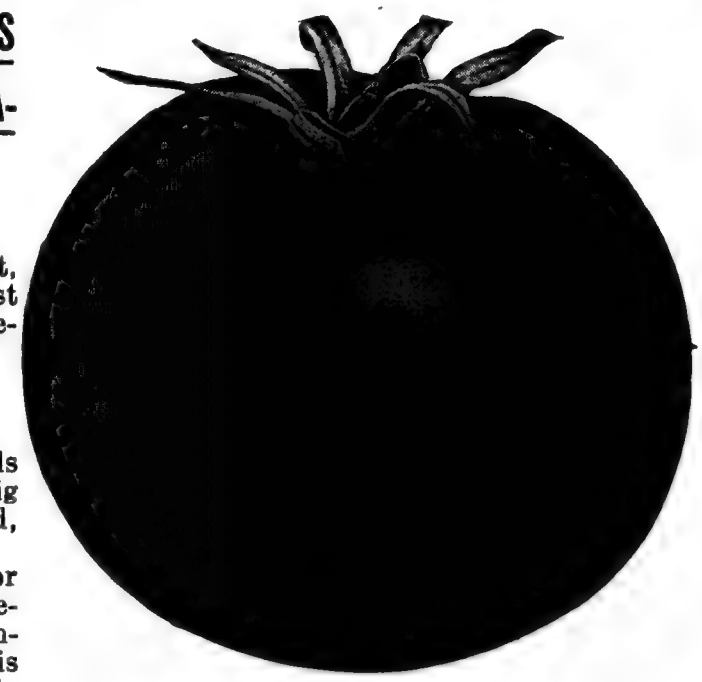
Bolgiano's Tomato Seeds



ARE GROWN BY US AS FAR NORTH AS TOMATOES WILL MATURE.

They are free from blight, most carefully grown, most carefully selected, most carefully saved—

Just for Seed

Bolgiano's Tomato Seeds are well known for their big yields of large, firm, solid, meaty, uniform Tomatoes.

We grow Tomatoes just for seed—even the pulp we destroy. Not an ounce of Canning House Tomato Seed is allowed to enter our establishment.

TOMATO SEED FOR YOUR 1917 CROP

You will get an enormous crop of Tomatoes from Bolgiano's Tomato Seed this year. Our Seed was saved from one of the largest crops we have ever had, due to being favored by weather conditions. The vines were loaded with Large, Solid, Red Fruit. We know positively by planting Seed from this "Big Crop" your yield will be much larger than if you had bought seed grown where the weather conditions were not favorable.

the Paine ranch of 100 acres on South Main street. The soil is well adapted to the tomato and is being put in shape for the crop. The ranch has an excellent well and is equipped with an electric pumping plant for irrigation purposes.

Weather conditions in this locality have been ideal for farm work this winter and the rainfall has been sufficient to date to make the crop outlook satisfactory.

KELWAY NOT OPTIMISTIC.

James Kelway, well known as a seed grower in England, takes a pessimistic view of the situation as regards seed supply for 1918. He says:

"I believe many kinds of agricultural and vegetable seeds, after harvest 1917, will be lacking or exceedingly scarce. Seeds for the consumption of the allied countries have previously been produced almost entirely in countries now at war, and the result this season may easily be prophesied. It is within my knowledge that seeds are not being grown for 1917 to anything like the extent of previous years, although the need is greater.

"In the first place, in this country farms in seed-growing centers have been denuded of labor through the action of the local tribunals, who have not realized the national importance of the occupation of seed growing, nor the need for a larger quantity of trained labor in that occupation than in ordinary farming. Secondly, the government is, quite properly, insisting on the importance of growing corn and is fixing a high price for it, whereas this has not been done, and can perhaps with difficulty be done, for other seeds.

"The wholesale seed merchants, who provide the capital and the outlet for the seed grower, received no special consideration from the tribunals, and are contributing to the fighting line from trained, irreplaceable staffs exactly as if they were manufacturing luxuries, instead of producing something indispensable to the life of the people. These firms not only contract with farmers and growers and distribute the seeds produced, but several of them produce on their own land the selected and improved stocks which they place with their growers. This seed selection needs a certain quality of brains and assiduity, and these are not a monopoly of men over military age. On the shoulders of these firms falls also the duty of supplying with seeds the British dominions beyond the seas, a trade largely in the hands of Germans before the war, and now ours for the plucking, to get and to keep, unless we allow our clever American friends an opportunity to organize for it and capture it.

"I think that all seed growers who can prove that they habitually grow seeds which will produce food for man or for horses or for cattle, and all wholesale seed growers and merchants for whom they cultivate such food seeds

DREER'S FAMOUS AMERICAN ASTERS

Notwithstanding the very short crop of high grade Eastern grown Aster seed we are fortunate in having a very good supply of the choicest varieties.

We offer but a few here; for complete list see our new Wholesale Catalogue.

CREGO'S GIANT COMET ASTERS

Magnificent fluffy flowers, with long strong stems, and unlike most of the Comet sorts, stands when cut and is a good flower to ship.

	Trade pkt.	Oz.
White. Purest white	$0.40	$2.00
Pink. Delicate shell pink	.40	2.00

KING ASTERS

The "King" Asters are of strong, sturdy habit, growing fully 18 inches high, and bear from August to October very large double blossoms, the petals of which are more or less quilled, forming very attractive flowers.

	Trade pkt.	Oz.
Dreer's Crimson King. Rich crimson	$0.50	$3.00
Pink King. An attractive shade of delicate shell-pink	.40	2.00
Rose King. A beautiful brilliant rose variety	.40	2.00

DREER'S "PEERLESS PINK" ASTER

This grand Aster may be briefly described as a glorified late branching shell-pink. The color is rich shell-pink, similar in shade but more decided than the late branching. The center petals are prettily incurved, while the wide outer petals reflex, making a most artistic and finely finished flower, and stands cut longer than any other. 50c per Trade pkt.; $2.50 per oz.

DREER'S SUPERB LATE BRANCHING ASTERS

The finest Asters for late August and September blooming.

The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. They come into bloom from two to three weeks after the average type, usually being at their best during September.

	Trade pkt.	Oz.
Azure Blue. A rich, deep lavender	$0.30	$1.50 should be treated as if they were making munitious of war; as indeed they are, a fact which eventually this country will discover, I hope, not once again 'too late.' ''

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

W. C. Beckert, of Allegheny, Pa., commenting on the high prices quoted on sweet corn, a jump from $8 to $15 per bushel for Stowell's Evergreen, for instance, sees grounds for speculation, as much stock has been sold at the lower figure and the retail selling hardly begun. The quality is good and germinates close to 100 per cent. There also is considerable dickering in wax and green pod beans. Mr. Beckert has spent the last two winters in South America, noting future prospects there and being, as he says, away from the crowded lanes of travel. Each time the boat he intended to return on was internally disturbed by a bomb, so he prefers to stay at home on the job for the present.

Walter C. Schell, of Harrisburg, Pa., exhibits a prize-winning sample of Potato Irish Cobbler, from which he has sold 500 bushels at $8 per bag of slightly over two bushels. ''The highest price in our experience,'' observed W. C. Schell, ''and, unfortunately, we cannot get more of such just now, at any price.''

D. Carmichael, of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., of Cincinnati, O., notes an increasing call for garden seeds and believes that there will be a big boost in planting as soon as the danger of local floods passes. Grass seed is moving well.

Davis & Fine, Inc., of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has the largest store in the Wyoming valley devoted to seeds and poultry supplies. ''Now, more than ever before, one must be posted on the various ailments and the necessary remedies relative to poultry, to make this branch really profitable,'' said Mr. Fine.

B. E. & J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Pa., now speak of bushels instead of packets. ''Our seed business has grown from a sprout to a full head,'' observed the hustling Bert Cokely. The supply department is doing steady work.

G. R. Clark, of Scranton, can readily use a larger store for his old-established seed connection, but he has been at the same location so long that he hates to break away. W. M. specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in an article in the forthcoming Yearbook. The domestic beet sugar industry, in which more than $100,000,000 is invested, was almost wholly dependent until the outbreak of the European war on a seed supply from Europe. Since the normal importation of seed was interfered with by hostilities, efforts have been made to grow the necessary seed in this country, but though the production from approximately 4,000 acres of beets was harvested in 1916, this was hardly more than sufficient to plant the acreage of beets required by the natural expansion of the industry. Some seed was imported with great difficulty for the 1916 planting, but several sugar factories remained idle because of the insufficient supply of seed.

No great difficulties, it is believed, stand in the way of the domestic production of high quality seed sufficient to meet the needs of this country. In practically all instances the American-grown seed has been found superior to the imported seed. This is true of seed grown under various conditions in a number of different portions of the country. The problem, in so far as the mere possible replacement of European seed by American seed is concerned, would seem to be only a matter of the planting of greater acreages in this country. This does not, however, take into account the economic side of beet seed production nor the possibility of improving the quality of the seed. The chief reason for the dependence of America on the importation of seed in the past was the low price at which the supply could be obtained from abroad.

The studies of plant specialists of the Department of Agriculture lead them to believe that the quality of beet seed and of the crops which such seed produces can be improved greatly by selection and plant breeding, and that as a result the cost of production of seed in this country can be reduced.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Kelway & Son, Langport, England.—American edition of "wholesale, real price" catalogue of vegetable and flower seeds. It is printed on a fine grade of enameled paper and contains 104 large pages—sixteen pages more than last year's edition. The typography and illustrations are of the usual Kelway quality, and there could scarcely be higher praise than that. Though not giving quite as positive assurance as in some former seasons that the quoted prices apply to the whole year, the book states: "We print real independent prices in this catalogue, which without engagement—we are willing, as far as possible, to accept throughout the season."

Northboro Dahlia & Gladiolus Gardens, Northboro, Mass.—Illustrated catalogue of the two specialties handled at this establishment, of which J. L. Moore is proprietor. The dahlias, which occupy about fifteen of the entire twenty pages, are carefully classified, and instructions are given as to culture and harvesting. In gladioli a dozen or more of the "leading and popular" varieties are listed. A few other items of stock, such as cannas and irises, are offered.

Mount Arbor Nurseries, Shenandoah, Ia.—Twenty-sixth annual spring trade list of nursery stock, roses, peonies and other perennials, bulbs and tubers, tree seeds and nurserymen's supplies; twenty-four pages and cover, with no descriptions or illustrations. The stock is extensive, both in varieties and sizes, and seems to be carefully assorted.

J. E. Jackson, Gainesville, Ga.—Spring and summer catalogue of "useful greenhouse and bedding plants," grown at the Piedmont Greenhouses; thirty-two pages, illustrated. Roses and chrysanthemums are the specialties and occupy more than half the space in the book. Besides the roses and herbaceous stock, Magnolia grandiflora and Ligustrum Amurense are listed.

Stricker Seed Co., Asheville, N. C.—"Annual Seed Catalogue and Gardeners' and Farmers' Guide"; forty pages, illustrated. The lists include bulbs and plants. Grass seeds and miscellaneous forage crops have particular attention. Patrons are reminded that "July 5, 1916, this company succeeded L. R. Stricker, who retired from the seed business on account of his health."

Mountain View Floral Co., Portland, Ore.—"Roses of World's Fame from Portland's Rose Farm," an illustrated catalogue of roses, perennials, bulbs, nursery stock and seeds of perennials; thirty-eight pages, printed on a good quality of cream-tinted paper. The sixteen pages of roses are outdoor-grown and are mostly budded stock, but own-root roses also are supplied.

Roman J. Irwin, New York, N. Y.—"Florists' Wholesale Catalogue of Plants, Cuttings, Bulbs, Choice Flower Seeds and Supplies," a neat, compact, pocket-form book of thirty-six pages, illustrated. "Twenty-seven years of practical experience," says Mr. Irwin, "enables me to know where to get the best stock, for which I contract with growers who specialize in the different plants, there being few who can grow many things well."

Gunn Seed Co., Lincoln, Neb.—A 32-page, illustrated catalogue of seeds, roses, bulbs, ornamental shrubs, poultry supplies, tools and sundries. Under the head of "Our Guarantee," after giving assurance of the good quality of the seeds, the company adds concisely, "We do not guarantee the crop in any way, because we cannot plant your seed or control weather conditions. This guarantee means just what it says."

Martin Kohankie, Painesville, O.—Wholesale list of hardy perennials, pot plants, roses, shrubs and vines; also seeds of perennials. The alphabetical list of perennials occupies the greater part of the eight large pages. The first page is embellished with a colored picture of the red variety of Meehan's Mallow Marvel.

J. W. Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis.—"Jung's Seed Annual," a 64-page catalogue, freely illustrated. The first fourteen pages are devoted to specialties, chiefly in vegetables, which, says the book, "cannot fail to please our customers." At the end is a wholesale vegetable list for market gardeners.

William P. Stark Nurseries, Stark City, Mo.—"How to Beautify Your Home Grounds," a 48-page book, with many illustrations and several diagrams or plans. This is not a catalogue in the ordinary sense of the word, since it contains no prices but is packed with helpful suggestions. "This booklet," says William P. Stark, the author, "is for the home-maker. It is not a complete textbook on landscape gardening, but it does give the information necessary for planting suitable trees and shrubs about the home, and tells how to arrange and care for them."

Wooster, O.—Philip Rice, who cares for the James Mullins greenhouse, one day last week placed some boards on top of the furnace with the idea of drying them for kindling. The wood dried all right; in fact, it dried too well and became kindling before Mr. Rice intended it to. In a short time several brigades of firemen were on the premises, but there was more smoke than blaze. Little damage was done.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Is the nursery trade the only branch of agriculture that is maintaining ante-bellum prices?

THE Georgia Satsuma Co., Brunswick, Ga., has been incorporated with $85,000 authorized capital stock, to colonize lands in Glynn county. The charter gives authority for a general nursery business.

THE Aurora Nurseries, of Aurora, Ill., recently moved some large conifers from Elburn, Ill., to Aurora. Among the trees was a Koster blue spruce thirty feet six inches high, with a spread of about sixteen feet. In moving this tree it was necessary to lift it with a ball of earth weighing close to four and one-half tons. The work was done under the direction of Charles Nordmark, who is in charge of the landscape department of the Aurora Nurseries.

ADVERTISING VS. FREE STOCK.

[Following are extracts from an address by Carl Sonderegger, of Beatrice, Neb., before the recent meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen.]

Nursery stock, like furniture, clothing or any other merchandise offered for sale, is sold either through advertising, personal solicitation or a combination of the two. Much nursery stock is sold by agents and traveling representatives, but much of it also is sold through direct advertising. And that brings us to a peculiar phase of nurserymen's advertising, the subject of this paper, "Is It a Fair Shake for the Retail Nurseryman Who Advertises in Papers that Give Trees and Plants as Premiums for Subscriptions?"

A newspaper advertises for subscribers just the same as a nurseryman advertises for customers to buy his stock; the newspaper uses space in its own and other publications to sell subscriptions. As an added inducement to new subscribers, some publishers offer subscription premiums of trees and plants. A nurseryman who advertises in a paper that gives away nursery stock with each subscription, and says so in ads, may think he has grounds for vigorous complaint; but there is another side to be considered.

Sauce for Goose, Sauce for Gander.

We have always fought a paper that wanted to write or regulate our advertisements. When we pay for space and send in legitimate copy, we do not like to have the paper change our advertisements, just to please itself or some competitor.

Therefore we are willing to concede the same right to a newspaper advertising for subscribers. If the publisher chooses to offer a gold watch, a town lot, or a collection of trees and plants, he should have the right to do so.

We have sold collections of apple trees and grape vines to farm papers, which offered the stock as premiums to get subscribers. In our opinion there is nothing wrong with this, and we would not refuse to give such farm papers advertisements as long as they paid a proper price and got good stock; and even if they did not, the nurseryman would be rather more to blame than the publisher.

Some years ago we made up a premium collection of six grape vines, using three different varieties of 1-year-old No. 1 plants. We received 25 cents for each collection, and we mailed the premiums free of charge. We just got enough out of it to cover the cost of the vines, the work and the postage. Our aim was to get the new subscribers' addresses, so we could send them our

ROSES From 2½-inch Pots

READY NOW

The assortment below consists of stock of last summer's propagation. These plants have all been rested and are practically dormant now. Our 2½" Rose plants are stronger and more stocky than the ordinary 2¼" pot roses generally offered. They are in fine condition for shifting into 3½" and 4" pots, and are splendid stock for growing on for Spring and Decoration Day sales.

catalogue; more so than to make a profit on the collections. We sent out nearly 2,000 collections and sent the parties our catalogue.

Make Publisher Pay Good Price.

We found, however, in checking up the orders, that we were the losers, as few orders were received the first year and not many more the second. Later we had the same experience with a collection of 1-year-old apple trees.

So now if we make up any collections we ask enough to make a fair profit on them, and we fail to see why this is not a fair sale. We do not blame the paper if it chooses to give nursery stock away. We make a sale and somebody planted the trees.

Quite a few people plant premium trees or vines, who would never do so had they to buy them. While this does not seem to create an immediate demand, it may after the trees get to bearing. It may be of indirect benefit to the nurseryman. Of course, this holds good only when strong, well rooted stock is sent out—stock that will grow, such as a nursery sends to its retail customers.

Where to Draw the Line.

There is something wrong when a paper, the subscription price of which is 25 cents per year, offers twelve hybrid tea roses as a premium for a subscription. These roses are only rooted cuttings, from 2-inch pots, which can be bought at low prices. Such stock seldom grows for the amateur; it rather discourages him. In many instances it creates the impression that all roses offered by nurseries or florists are of the same poor quality, only much higher in price. But then, we find that a paper that makes this kind of offer is seldom the one we would want for an advertising medium; the paper probably is as cheap as the roses it gives away.

Look at the nursery advertisements in the leading farm papers. You will find offers of twenty-five peach trees for $1; twelve roses for $1; fifty peach and fifty apple trees for $2. Do not these nurserymen make about the same offer to get trade as the farm paper does to get subscribers? What is fair to one ought to be fair to the other.

We therefore hold that a paper has a perfect right to offer trees or plants as premiums in advertising subscriptions, and any nurseryman who advertises should not turn the paper down as an advertising medium on account of this alone. We certainly will not.

[Nurserymen who are willing to advertise in farm papers that give nursery stock as premiums may be able to effect an even exchange—surplus stock for surplus space — they probably have about equal value.—Ed.]

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The florists are unanimous in reporting an exceptionally good St. Valentine's day business. The demand was excellent and good prices prevailed. The supply of small flowers was exhausted, and the hope is that wholesalers will make better preparations for this day next year, as the tradesmen are planning to coöperate to make it a bigger day than ever before. Next to the small flowers in popularity were pot plants, these being azaleas, genistas, cinerarias, primroses, cyclamens, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, jonquils, etc.

The amount of funeral work at the present time surpasses the records of other years, the daily death toll being enormous. The orders for flowers for the sick also have been heavier. Carnations, which have always been freely used for this work, have been greatly utilized, thus causing the supply to diminish and advancing prices to $2.50 to $5 per hundred. Lilies are scarcer and bring $1.50 per dozen.

The rose market is about the same—the supply none too ample. Bulbous stock is popular and plentiful. In the cut blooms jonquils are favorites, with hyacinths in the lead in the potted varieties. White and yellow narcissi are receiving more attention and are selling at $3 per hundred. In miscellaneous stock yellow daisies and marguerites are beginning to make their appearance. As in other cities, southern greens are extremely scarce here. Fern leaves are of inferior quality. There is a limited

New Red Rose DONALD MacDONALD
A New HAWLMARK Red Rose sent out this year by Alex. Dickson & Sons
We have tested this rose for winter forcing for two years, and with us it produces more red roses during the winter than any rose we have ever grown. It is not a large rose, but has perfectly formed, medium-sized flowers that sell at sight. Color bright orange-carmine; will not turn blue, because the base of the petals is orange. It is not a summer rose, as it has the same substance as Killarney. We build the plants up until November, and from Thanksgiving until May it is a money-maker for the Rose Grower, as no pinching is necessary.

SURPLUS STOCK OWN ROOT ROSES

Our stock of rose bushes are the finest obtainable, large and well caned. They are actually two-year-old field grown, by this we mean that they have been in the field for two years with a growing period of ten months each year. They will retail easily from 50c to $1.00 each. To facilitate handling and packing and reduce transportation charges all bushes have been cut back to within eighteen or twenty inches of the crown. We will be glad to have your order for any of the following varieties:

300 American Beauties, H. P.
200 Antoine Rivoire, H. T., flesh.

READY NOW

HYACINTHS, DAFFODILS, TULIPS, 3½-in. pots, - $6.30 per 100, f. o. b. Chicago

The root development is complete and shoots started—just brought in from field beds. Hyacinths run one to a pot. Daffodils and Tulips will average three flowers to the pot. These are shipped in 100 lots in paper pots, and are ready for forcing in time for Easter.

JUST AS CHEAP AS THE BULBS — ONLY SELECTED STOCK

Order your shipment immediately, as the plants are immune from frost when shipped in this semi-developed state. Retail florists who have no greenhouses can force these Hyacinths, Daffodils and Tulips in their store windows. Your customers will take advantage of this new offering to prolong the season in their homes. To be successful in this plan, order your supply at once.

ers, such as valley, orchids, baby roses, sweet peas and freesias, were featured in baskets, which, in many cases, were set off by the lacy acacia.

W. J. Smart, of the Knight & Struck Co., New York, visited the trade this week.

John Rieman has been suffering from the grip during the last week.

Fred Kiel last week was away from his post for a day to attend the funeral of his father-in-law, at Cumberland, Ind.

Henry Rodenbeck has been picking the finest Prince of Wales violets in the city.

Mrs. Clarence Thomas has undergone a serious operation at St. Vincent's hospital. She is recovering nicely.

Arthur Pett, of Crawfordsville, has been in the city attending an agricultural board meeting.

Mr. Bishop, of Greenwood, has purchased twenty-five acres of land directly across from the Greenwood cemetery, where he contemplates the erection of a range.

Alvin Schrieber has been sick for some time.

The E. G. Hill Co. recently received a fine shipment of palms from the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.

N. N. Emitslof, of the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, visited the trade this week.

Miss D. Rieman recently underwent a serious operation, but is getting along as nicely as could be expected.

The city market enjoyed the best business since the holidays. Plants moved remarkably well. One of the large wholesale growers in the city sold a batch of good orchid-flowering sweet peas at the city market the day before St. Valentine's day at 25 cents per bunch of fifty. Of course, it is not any trick to give a crop away, but it is better business to put a price on it if one does not sell entirely out. This practice is not fair treatment to the smaller growers, who cannot compete with such prices and obtain a profit.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. auto truck was caught in the elevator at the Steinhart building while removing decorations and was completely demolished.

George Wiegand, not having successfully recovered from a recent operation, found it necessary to return to the hospital for another operation.

Do It Now!

Go over your Rose Houses carefully and estimate the plants you need for replanting this Spring, and place your order. Roses are going to be scarce. The Manetti situation is such that those who get it are fortunate, and the demand is far greater than the limited supply. We have sold over 100,000 grafted Roses in the last two weeks. We have 200,000 more to sell. There is considerable building contemplated. "Changing from Carnations to Roses" is a frequent explanation made when placing an order. If you are short at planting time it will be your fault and not ours. The growing of grafted Roses is an industry in itself. At Cromwell the large quantity of Roses grown for cut flowers makes it possible to get scions that are first-class. We want your Rose Plant order, and we want to be able to say "yes" to your inquiry. Estimate your requirements and write us.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business was far ahead of that of any previous year. It seems as though the public is tiring of celebrating the day with stationery and is starting on a large scale with cut flowers and plants. Every florist reports a large increase in sales. Pot plants of all kinds seemed to take the lead. A large quantity of bulb stock in pans was moved. Novelties and baskets arranged with tulips sold fast. Cut flowers were scarce, but the demand was not so heavy for them.

Business during the entire week was good. The wholesalers were sold out every day before time to close. The shipping trade was good. Roses, as usual, are still scarce and high in price, and it is expected that this condition will continue for two weeks. Some of the local growers say their roses will be ready by that time. Red roses are the heaviest in demand and the scarcest. Other colors are scarce, but the demand for them does not seem to be so large. The shorter lengths clean out first.

The supply of carnations has shortened considerably and these are held at a higher price. Sweet peas are in good supply, either long or short-stemmed. Paper Whites are still plentiful, but not so much in demand as formerly. Tulips, jonquils, daffodils and hyacinths are now in full supply and help out the shortage in other stock.

Various Notes.

Bryson Ayres, of Independence, was operated on for appendicitis last week. It is hoped that he will be completely well in a short while.

The Rosery reports that its St. Valentine's day business was exceptionally large, greatly in excess of that of last year. Corsages and table decorations were numerous. Pot plants were the leaders.

The Alpha Floral Co. has purchased two new delivery cars. This concern is paying dividends to its employees at the end of each month. Last month, January, the employees received $223.

A. F. Barbe reports the best Valentine's day business ever done. He had a large quantity of good pot plants.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a heavy business for Valentine's day, pot plants taking the lead. Baskets and hampers of spring flowers sold well.

Samuel Murray had the largest St. Valentine's day business in years. He sold out in everything and did not have enough pot plants to meet the demand. In order to get all orders out he had to call for an extra delivery car.

Arthur Newell's business was thirty per cent better than last year's. Fancy novelties and baskets sold quickly. He had a heavy run of funeral work during the week.

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. sold out completely. Cut stock has been scarce with them, but they now are bringing in large quantities of violets and smilax. Arthur Lewis, of this firm, was married last week.

W. J. Barnes had a good Valentine's day business. He sold all the rhododendrons he had in flower; also a large variety of other blooming plants.

Adolph Mohr sold at wholesale practically every plant he had in bloom. He has a nice lot of potted stock for Easter.

GERANIUMS

We have for immediate shipment an excellent, fine lot of 3-inch plants, nearly all fall-propagated, topped and branching. In good, standard sorts, including S. A. Nutt, Gen. Grant, Ornella, Abbie Schaffer, E. H. Trego, Mme. Buchner, Berthe de Presilly, etc., at $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000. Cash with orders.

Maryland Geranium, $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000. We see no reason for recalling anything we have ever claimed for Maryland.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was a busy one for the florists. This flower day seems to be getting better each year. There was a speedy sale of sweet peas, Romans and other dainty flowers, and the special valentine boxes were in heavy demand.

Roses and carnations now are not overplentiful. The weather has been severe, as in most parts of the country, causing the plants to grow slowly and to flower slowly.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club members met at Karl Zeidler's February 15 and enjoyed themselves immensely. Theodore Kuebler occupied the chair while Mr. Zeidler, the president, was busy with the lunch and refreshments. In a business way there was little transacted. Julius Niednagel proposed that the club make J. D. Carmody, Evansville's veteran florist, an honorary member; the proposal was well received and the assent unanimous. Mr. Carmody, who is wintering in Florida and in his eighties, is a pioneer member of the S. A. F. He will be remembered by most old-time florists as an after-dinner speaker at florists' conventions. Ernest Lutz, the Boonville member, proposed Peter Morgen, of Huntingburg, as a member. Mr. Morgen was duly elected. Julius Niednagel talked of his experiences in greenhouses and on private places from the time he was about 14 years of age. After the meeting luncheon was served by Mr. Zeidler, and this was followed by a trip through the greenhouses. The next meeting will be at C. L. Niednagel's, March 14.

The Blackman Floral Co. is having a fine cut of long-stemmed carnations of excellent quality. Business continues good at the store.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are enjoying excellent business, with just about enough flowers for the demand. Their carnations are a little slow, but promise large cuts later on.

J. C. Elspermann has not been well lately. Mrs. Elspermann, the daughter and the boys are kept busy with funeral work and getting the spring stock in shape.

The Ideal Dirt Band Co. is receiving many orders for square, wood dirt bands. Many are repeat orders, some for large amounts. E. L. F.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

¶ We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The extremely cold weather of last week seems to have hit the territory south of Washington to such an extent as to have reduced materially the supply of Asparagus plumosus, maidenhair and other ferns. The price has not advanced, but orders are not being filled in full. The scarcity of roses continues, and American Beauties last week brought as high as $12 per dozen. Good Ophelia and red roses are selling at from $15 to $20 per hundred. Shawyer and My Maryland bring $12 and $15, with the shorter grades at from $8 up. Carnations are a little more plentiful than they have been. The sweet peas coming into the market surpass any heretofore seen and are in good demand. The quality is evidenced by the fact that one of the local florists sold eighteen dozen almost as fast as received at the previously unheard-of price of $1 per dozen.

Saint Valentine's day exceeded all expectations. The sale of sweet peas broke all records, but there was a glut of double violets and since that day they have been selling as low as $2 per thousand. Violets are essentially a flower for outdoor wear and when the weather is cold they do not sell readily. Another flower in heavy supply is Purity freesia. This is holding its own with respect to sales, but the price has dropped from $4 to $2 per hundred. The sale of calendulas has been dropping off since daffodils have become more plentiful. Tulips are more plentiful. There is plenty of lilac, both cut and potted, and this is meeting with a good sale. The sale of potted baby primroses is draggy. They were in good demand when cut flowers were scarce, but are now hanging fire.

Various Notes.

J. D. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J., accompanied by Mrs. Eisele, has been in Washington on a sight-seeing tour.

Gude Bros. Co. is cutting some of the largest carnations ever seen in Washington. It is a pink seedling and blooms with unbroken calyx measure four and one-half inches in diameter. William F. Gude says they expect they will have carnations five inches in diamter before long.

Fred H. Kramer again was the vic-

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

ROCHELLE PAPER POTS AND BANDS

Our Square Paper Pots are the Original Improved DOUBLE Bottom Square Paper Pots that we have sold for FIVE YEARS.

They are by far the BEST POT on the market today.

They are made with one tack. No glue.

By ACTUAL TEST they can be made up MORE THAN TWICE AS FAST as a stamped out pot can be folded, assembled and "locked."

They are made of the same new, tough paper that has made our Square Paper Pots and Square Dirt Bands FAMOUS, after FIVE YEARS' TEST by the U. S. Government, the Canadian Government, International Expositions, large numbers of State Agricultural Experiment Stations, City Parks, Public Institutions and many thousands of Superintendents, Florists and Truckers in all parts of the country and Canada.

"Enclosed please find a postoffice money order, for which please send us 10,000 3-in. Square Paper Pots by freight to Yantic, Conn." Avery Bros., Norwich Town, Conn.

(Avery Bros. got 5000 of our 3-in. Pots in 1913, 5000 in 1914, 7000 in 1915, 10,000 in 1916 and 10,000 this year. They know the merits of our Pots.)

"Kindly send us by express 20,000 Paper Pots, size 3-in., for which I inclose check." George Foulsham, Supt., Lenox, Mass.

(Mr. Foulsham orders our Paper Pots regularly every year and says "We grow sweet peas and all our annuals in them.")

"Send by freight 5000 3-in. Square Paper Pots, 8000 4-in. Square Paper Pots." G. E. Hunt, Florist, Rutland, Vt.

(Mr. Hunt orders our Paper Pots each year and knows they are the best there are.)

CREASED DIRT BANDS

1—Should a Dirt Band be CREASED and the ENDS held together until it is set in place? Yes.

OUR DIRT BANDS ARE CREASED and the ENDS HELD TOGETHER.

NOT "LOCKED"

2—Should the ends of Dirt Bands be "LOCKED?" NO. Because "locking" does not serve any purpose and is a serious detriment.

If the ends are "LOCKED" the band has to be TORN OFF when the plant is taken out.

After the bands are filled and watered the soil settles tight against the insides and they cannot be unlocked.

TEARING the ends of the bands apart will break many of the "balls" or cubes of soil.

Get a "locked" band, lock it and try tearing it apart.

Ours are made to SLIP APART easily, without tearing, to let the plant out.

Our bands are made of the same special, tough paper that has been PROVED 5 YEARS to be perfect for the purpose.

They are the BEST Band on the market, but also the CHEAPEST.

Mr. H. B. Weaver of Bird-in-Hand, Pa., grows Carnations, Mignonettes, Sweet Peas and other cut flowers. He says of our Dirt Bands: "I believe any one using these bands will become a regular customer."

(He got 5000 Dirt Bands in 1913, 60,000 in 1914, 70,000 in 1915, 50,000 in 1916 and has just ordered 60,000 for 1917.)

Mr. J. M. Gager, Willimantic, Conn., says: "The crop from the plants raised in your Dirt Bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS."

(Mr. Gager has just ordered 10,000 4-in. bands for this year.)

Mr. Herbert W. Coulter, Avon, Mass., says: "I am so well pleased with the Dirt Bands that I DO NOT SEE HOW A MARKET GARDENER CAN AFFORD TO GROW PLANTS WITHOUT THEM."

To show the wide use of our Pots and Bands by Government, State, City and Public Institutions we might say that while we are writing this advertisement (Feb. 17th) one mail, just opened, brought us orders from South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station, Brookings, S. D. (They got 10,000 of our Paper Pots last year and expect to use 20,000 this year) and Board of Regents of Normal Schools, Whitewater, Wis., and inquiries for prices from New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University and University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

We have probably sold 5 times as many of our Square Paper Pots and Dirt Bands as all other firms put together.

Greenhouse Heating.

LIMIT IN LENGTH OF PIPES.

How long a greenhouse can be heated economically and efficiently with hot water, the boiler to be in a pit eight feet deep; that is, eight feet below the surface of the ground? Can a house 300 feet long be heated successfully with a hot water plant?

E. S. K.—N. D.

While we prefer to limit the length of the returns in a gravity hot water system to 250 feet, yet in the present case, with a distance of about nine feet between the level of the returns and the bottom of the cellar, we would not hesitate to use coils 300 feet in length. However, we would be exceedingly careful not to overload the flow pipes, which should be either 2½ or 3-inch. One 2½-inch or two 2-inch returns may be used with each 2½-inch flow pipe, or either three 2-inch or two 2½-inch returns may be used with a 3-inch flow pipe.

In an extensive range of greenhouses, and where electric power is available for pumping the water, we would prefer to put in an electric pump rather than rely upon a gravity system in long houses. In that case a 2-inch flow pipe would supply four 1½-inch returns. Five flows, each supplying four returns, would answer in a house 30x300 if a pumping system is installed.

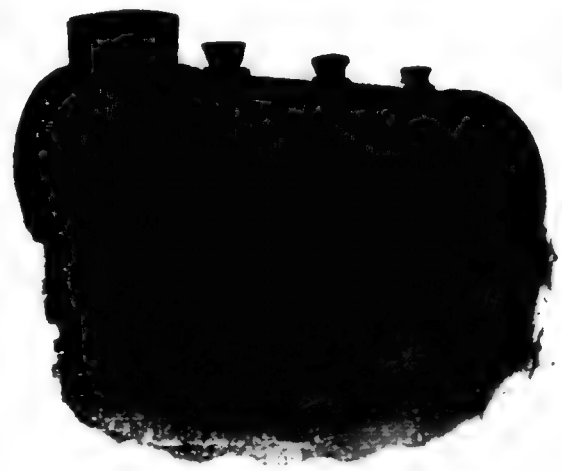
A RANGE OF SIX HOUSES.

Enclosed is a rough sketch of my greenhouses. Houses No. 1, 2, 3 and 4 form the present range. Houses No. 5 and 6 and the store are contemplated. I am heating at present with two hot water boilers, located in different places. I intend to purchase new boilers and set them up together in a cellar under the new store. I am afraid the distance may be too great for effective heating with hot water; so I wish to ask your heating expert to describe the best way of heating the houses with steam.

The houses are of modern construction, with concrete walls and with two feet of glass in the sides. The present exposure is about 10,000 square feet of glass, but I wish to provide a heating capacity for about 20,000 feet. Can 2-inch pipes be used to advantage for return steam coils? How many feet of radiation should the boiler have, to give the best results? Will it be advisable to raise the steam main to a height of six feet above the walks, then follow grade up to the far end of the house and drop the pipe down to coils under the benches?

G. M.—N. J.

The sketch does not give the length of the old range of houses, but we judge it to be about ninety feet. Houses No. 1 and 2, which run east and west, are each twenty-seven and one-half feet in width and are to be used for chrysanthemums, followed by bedding plants. Adjoining house No. 2 on the north is No. 5, which is sixteen feet wide and is to be used for a fern and propagating house. At the north side of No. 5 is the store, in the cellar of which the boiler is to be placed.



To heat houses No. 1, 2 and 5 with steam, we would carry a 3½-inch main flow pipe into house No. 5 and take off a 2-inch overhead flow. Carry this under the ridge to the west end of the house and supply six 1¼-inch returns, arranged in three coils under the benches. Reduce the main flow to 3-inch and carry it into house No. 2. This house and also No. 1 will require a 2½-inch overhead flow pipe, with ten 1¼-inch or eight 2-inch returns. Instead of using a single flow pipe, a 2-inch flow might be carried upon each plate.

Houses 3 and 6 are built running north and south across the west end of the other houses, and No. 4 is evidently a lean-to at the east side of No. 3. This is perhaps ten feet wide and forty-eight feet long, while house No. 3, which is to be used for carnations, is 32x106 feet. No. 6 is of the same size, but is for sweet peas. To supply these houses, we would run a 3½-inch flow pipe through house No. 5 to the west end of the range. House No. 4 can be heated with a 2-inch flow and three 1¼-inch returns. House No. 3 should have a 2½-inch overhead flow, or two 2-inch flows on the plates, and either ten 1¼-inch or eight 2-inch returns. House No. 6 may be piped in the same manner, except that it should have two more return pipes.

While we prefer to use 1¼-inch pipes for the return coils in houses of this length, 1½-inch or even 2-inch pipes may be used. Although a smaller boiler would answer, we would prefer to use one rated at fifty horsepower. If carried on an even grade, so that the water cannot be pocketed, it will make little difference just how the mains are run.

A HOMEMADE HEATING SYSTEM.

I have been running a small greenhouse, 17x70, for the last twenty years. It has been heated by two brick furnaces, one at each end, connected with 10-inch tile flues running the length of the house, under each outside bench. These flues heated the house satisfactorily for my purpose, the growing of geraniums and other pot plants for spring sales and the starting of early vegetable plants. A few years ago, wishing more room to spread my plants in the spring, I put up an addition, eight feet wide, the full length of the original house, on the north side, not expecting to need much, if any, artificial heat in the new room. However, to make sure, last winter I built in a coil of 2-inch pipes around one of the brick furnaces and connected the coil with one 1½-inch flow and three 1¼-inch returns in the 8-foot addition, thus installing a homemade hot water system without a boiler.

This system works well, for the small house, making it nearly or quite as warm as the other. But I notice that for some reason I have difficulty at times in heating the larger house sufficiently. Do you think that the heating of the water in the pipes reduces the heat available for the flues to heat the larger house? Would there be any advantage in running some pipes from the same furnace through the larger house, to raise the temperature there? As it is, I dare not fire heavily or the water will boil, giving trouble in that way. I could easily heat the water in a large system of pipes, but the question is, would that really raise the temperature in the larger house? Will you please give me some enlightenment on this matter?

T. H. S.—Pa.

The introduction of a coil into a hot air furnace would naturally lessen to some extent the heat given off by the flue, and since, for the reason mentioned in the letter, it is not feasible to fire as heavily as before the coil was placed in the furnace, it is not strange that it is not possible to keep up as high a temperature in the large house as before the coil was used.

It will be helpful in keeping up a higher temperature in the large house if a 1½-inch flow pipe is run about two feet under the ridge and connected with a 1½-inch return on each plate. This should be connected with the coil now in use and in this way it will not only aid in securing a better distribution of the heat, but will lessen the difficulty from the boiling of the water, making it possible to fire more heavily. Not much benefit would be secured from placing a coil in the other furnace.

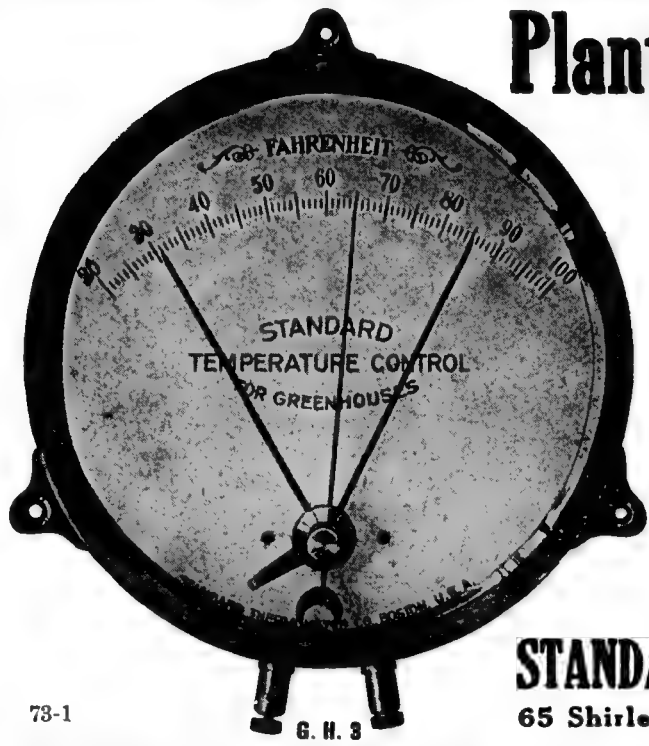
The Market.

There has been little change in the conditions of the market during the last week. The weather has moderated and it seems as though winter's backbone has been broken. There is plenty of stock to take care of all orders, with the possible exception of some grades of roses. Russell and Ophelia are somewhat scarce, but the shortage is not at all acute. Carnations are plentiful and the stock is in good shape. There is no great surplus, however, and the daily cut is being disposed of at fairly good prices. There was a large supply of violets for St. Valentine's day, but these were cleaned up readily.

Cattleyas were in good demand and as the supply was adequate the sales were quite satisfactory. Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities and are moving well. Spring stock is having a good sale and the conditions are satisfactory this year. There has been an exceptionally large sale on spring plants and these have been moved in quantity during the last week.



Indications are for a good Easter trade, and, if we have an early spring, this season should be one of the best yet. The shortage of lilies which obtained for the last few weeks is ended and, while they are not overplentiful, the supply is sufficiently large to take care of the demand.

Various Notes.

George Valker, of Minot, N. D., made a flying trip to Chicago last week and stopped over in Milwaukee for a short while February 17 on his way home. Mr. Valker states that business in his section of the country has been uncommonly good during the winter season.

The Market.

The supply of stock in the market has increased somewhat during the last week, and as a result prices are not as stiff as they were. The demand is steady.

While roses as yet are not plentiful, the daily cuts have increased materially. The carnation market is still light. Enough Easter lilies to care for all present wants are coming into the market. Excellent daffodils, tulips and hyacinths may be had. Other bulbous offerings include narcissi and freesias. Sweet peas are plentiful and generally of excellent quality. Violets, valley, orchids, callas and rubrum lilies are the main items in the miscellaneous list. The supply of asparagus is rather short.

The Market.

Stock has been coming in wonderfully well, considering the severely cold weather that has prevailed. Roses and carnations are increasing in supply. Sweet peas and bulbous flowers of all kinds are in abundance. Business has been satisfactory, there having been a clean-up practically every day.

The retailers report that the cold spell cut down the sale of cut flowers, but that there were enough decorative orders to offset this somewhat.

The stores report only a fair St. Valentine's day business, the extremely cold weather of the day acting as a damper on the sales and, in some sections, causing a falling off from last year's total. Violets were not nearly so popular as those of any previous St. Valentine's day, when they really were the principal flowers of the day. Stock now is cleaned up each day at the wholesale houses.

Various Notes.

H. Scheaf, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, has the sympathy of his friends in his bereavement in the death of his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Malbrane, of Johnstown, Pa., spent February 13 in Pittsburgh. Walter Mott also was a visitor.

R. E. Blackshaw, representative of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, has been confined to his room at the hotel by a rheumatic fever, but is now recovering.

Dean Hill has opened a store at 6137 Penn avenue in connection with a confectionery business.

John Mitchell, the Union station florist, has returned from Utica, N. Y., where he and others celebrated his engagement to be married. Mr. Mitchell will become a benedict shortly after Easter.

The Market.

Last week saw another increase in the volume of the bulbous stock. The quality of tulips and jonquils is improving. Sweet peas also are better, having long, strong stems and large blooms. Carnations now are unusually good and quite plentiful. White lilacs are arriving in fair quantities. Roses are good and fairly abundant. The price of roses keeps up well; in fact, the same may be said of prices of flowers in general, though there has been a tendency toward lower prices since the arrival of larger quantities of bulbous flowers. Many of the growers are planning for a big supply of pot plants for the spring trade, geraniums being grown in extra large numbers.

Various Notes.

The February number of Strobell's Floral Magazine, which is issued monthly by Henry A. Strobell, contains many timely hints for purchases of plants, flowers, etc.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co., which recently moved to 451 Broad street, reports that business is much better at the new stand than at the old quarters, which, while but a short distance from the main business street, was far enough away to miss considerable business.

The Market.

The florists experienced an unusually heavy St. Valentine's day business this year, many of the forces in the stores working late the night before and the entire following day filling orders. There were also a number of large dances and social affairs on the day, and the demand for flowers for these was heavy. Stock was plentiful in all lines, with the exception of roses. These were in extremely short supply, due to the fact that many of the local growers were off crop. The continued dark weather also caused a shortening up in the rose supply. American Beauties were plentiful, but the call for these was not large. Violets sold better than ever before and the prices held up well. Corsages were in exceedingly heavy demand. Roses, orchids, violets, sweet peas and spring flowers were the stock most in demand for these. Orchids were plentiful and sweet peas in good supply.

Potted plants sold on sight, especially the bulbous stock. Red roses were at a premium. Carnations were only in moderate supply, but the demand was not large. Good valley was scarce and the prices were high. Tulips, freesias, snapdragons, jonquils, daffodils, primulas, forget-me-nots, sweet alyssums, narcissi and primulas made up the variety of spring flowers.

Deliveries were difficult on account of the extreme cold, which did not seem to affect the demand.

The weather has moderated considerably within the last few days, but there is little sunshine and stock is not any too plentiful. Funeral work and decorations for receptions and parties make the heaviest demands on the supply.

Various Notes.

Carl J. Getz, city forester, gave an interesting and instructive address on "Bark" at the banquet of the Rotary Club February 14.

Miss Flick has been associated with the Flick Floral Co. for several years. She is one of the most prominent decorators of the city and possesses excellent business qualifications. The wedding will take place June 6. Miss Marguerite Flick has returned from a two weeks' business trip to Detroit, Mich.

The Market.

With a tremendous business, well distributed, St. Valentine's day gave the local market a decided impetus that gladdened the hearts of florists notwithstanding that they were unable to obtain all the red roses and red carnations they desired. Violets and sweet peas, however, served to fill out. The abundance of bulbous stock has lifted the strain on other cut flowers and sent the prices tumbling. Funeral work continues to be brisk and several florists report almost record-breaking numbers of designs made up daily.

Various Notes.

Joseph E. Koppelman still is confined to his house at Riverside by the serious affection of one of his eyes.

The Flower Growers, 317 Westminster street, is organizing a delivery system of boys with wheels that promises well.

Several of the downtown florists had attractive St. Valentine's day windows. Among these were Smith the Florist, Johnston Bros., T. J. Johnston & Co., Macnair and Bowers.

Charles Smith was a visitor in Boston last week in search of novelties.

Alexander H. Johnson, doing business as George Johnson & Son, 521 Elmwood avenue, has sold the florist, nursery and forestry business to Hugo De Wild, who will continue the business under the same name.

Edward F. Ely, one of the Providence park commissioners, has been elected a director of the Swan Point Cemetery corporation and Daniel S. Thurber has been reëlected superintendent.

W. J. Sevigne, of Harrisville, reports the booking of a large number of commissions for pruning, spraying and trimming of trees and shrubs this spring.

J. & P. Coats Co. has erected a house 23x40 at Pawtucket for a propagating house. W. H. M.

ROSES FROM 2½-IN POTS.
READY NOW.

The assortment below consists of stock of last summer's propagation. These plants have all been rested and are practically dormant now. Our 2½-in. rose plants are stronger and more stocky than the ordinary 2¼-in. pot roses generally offered. They are in fine condition for shifting into 3½-in. and 4-in. pots, and are splendid stock for growing on for spring and Decoration day sales.

The Right Way
Gives Us the Right of Way

Every Metropolitan greenhouse is planned with an eye to results—successful crops.

Our cares do not cease with the mere mechanical part of the work. And, while we no doubt owe a great deal of our success to the high grade character of our labors, still we base our claims for your consideration upon our ability to erect the right kind of a greenhouse, in the right manner, at the right price.

PUT YOUR GREENHOUSE PROBLEMS UP TO US

We go anywhere in the U. S. to submit plans and prices.

Proves Well for all Uses

Following is a letter from Mr. M. E. Hiett, one of our satisfied customers, of Clarksville, Tenn.:

"My violets this season never suffered in the least from the drought, and now occasionally I remove the glass and let them have a sprinkle. I am never bothered with red spider. I obtain my water supply from a large spring on my place. I grew a very fine crop of asters this past season by the help of the watering system. I will close, but have not said more than half I would like to."

Had you thought of This?

—the building of a greenhouse such as the AGMCO is a problem in mechanics just as surely as the construction of a compound locomotive, a suspension bridge, a battleship or a sky-scraper.

Every little part used in the construction of an AGMCO supergreenhouse has been designed by an expert with an eye to the part it would later play in the completed structure. Every part is tested for its particular function before being placed in the structure.

—and the completed house? Science again—steel cold science—the most exact science in the world—mathematics. And mathematics says, "The whole is equal to all its parts taken together." In other words, if the PARTS are PERFECT, the DESIGN PERFECT, the WORK PERFECT, the WHOLE, which is EQUAL to the SUM of ALL THESE PARTS, will also be PERFECT. In the AGMCO the parts, the design, the work are as perfect as science, an intimate knowledge of the growing business and intense application can make them.

Science rules the universe—we live by science, die by science, make war by science—grow flowers by science and—if you are to succeed in a large way—you must have greenhouses built by science.

That means a supergreenhouse and—if it isn't an AGMCO it isn't a supergreenhouse.

The highest priced and the cheapest greenhouse.

Coin your thoughts into action today.

COLD WEATHER

Geo. Valker's Range at Minot, N. D.

Last summer we built some greenhouses, a large brick service building and installed two power boilers and complete vacuum heating system for Mr. George Valker, at Minot, N. D.

Today, right in the midst of a "below-zero" spell of weather, Mr. Valker paid us a visit, wearing his usual bright smile.

Naturally during this cold weather, when a great many florists are having trouble with their heating systems, we asked Mr. Valker if he wasn't a bit worried about his greenhouses.

"Not in the least," was his instant reply. "The heating system has given such perfect satisfaction that, although we have had the thermometer as low as 35° below zero, we had no difficulty at all in maintaining our temperature."

Just give us a chance on your greenhouse problems; you will not be disappointed.

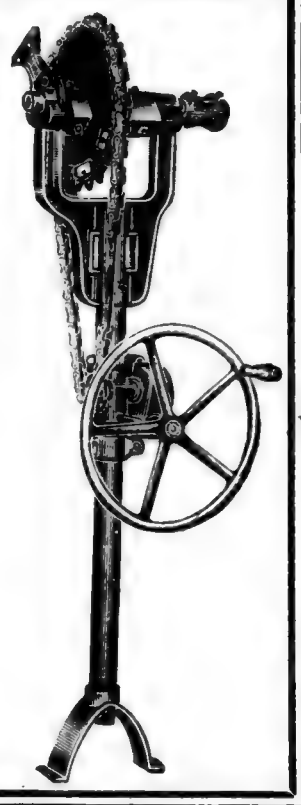
WHY SHOULD YOU TAKE A CHANCE

When You Can Get a Machine That Is Absolutely Dependable?



Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 15, 1916.
John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.
Gentlemen: With reference to your letter of December 14, would say that we have used at least four different ventilators with little satisfaction; yours, however, has proved an exception. We are exceedingly well pleased with it. We have never seen anything in this line as satisfactory as the double-arm feature.
Yours truly,
Drumm Seed & Floral Co.

Columbus, O., Dec. 16, 1916.
John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.
Gentlemen: With great satisfaction we have used, for many years, your ventilating machines at our greenhouses. Your double-acting 20th Century Arm is a great success. We like it better than anything we have on the place.
Respectfully yours,
The Livingston Seed Co.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

The reason these houses are seemingly on such a peculiar angle, is because they were taken from the top of the orangery with an extremely wide angle lens, which, as is generally the case, distorted them a bit.

This delightful cottage is the happy home of Mr. Head.

Glimpses on the J. Ogden Armour Estate near Chicago

Thos. Head, Superintendent.

IT is generally acknowledged that the Armour Estate, at Lake Forest, is one of the finest in the middle west.

Others may be larger, but none are planned with greater care or finer taste.

In spite of its comparative newness, it gives you an impression of long establishment.

The formal garden, with its extensive pools, rare planting and choice sculpture, transports you to sunny Italy.

Thomas Head, who has full charge of the Armour estate.

To the fine range of curved eave houses already erected, we were last year asked to add the two large ones on either side of the workroom. One is for fruit, the other flowers. Both are equipped with continuous side ventilation, the lack of which was often found somewhat of a disadvantage in the other houses.

Thomas Head, well known in the East, is, with his customary ability, filling the position of superintendent.

NEW CARNATIONS

ROSALIA—Cerise pink, large three and one-half inch flower of a true cerise pink color. Form is perfect. Calyx strong, never bursting. Stem is at all times strong and wiry. The growth is far above the average when we consider vigor, health and early and free flowering qualities. ROSALIA is a decided improvement on ROSETTE, having a better color and a better commercial habit.

OLD GOLD—We offer this as the earliest and most free flowering yellow carnation we have yet produced. A decided improvement over YELLOW PRINCE, being of a stronger growth, is perfectly clean and healthy, produces larger stems and more bloom. The color is a deep yellow with faint pink stripes.

The above two varieties, Price: $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

NEW LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM

FALL BEAUTY—A large Japanese reflex of a pleasing pink color with a shading of deep cream to the base of the petals and center of the flower. Has an extra strong stem, is especially fine for Thanksgiving, maturing November 25th to December 10th. The color, combined with its being so late and its extra keeping qualities, makes it of especial commercial value.

Price: $3.50 per doz.; $30.00 per 100

BREITMEYER FLORAL COMPANY

FRED BREITMEYER, Proprietor MT. CLEMENS, MICHIGAN

LOUISA POCKETT

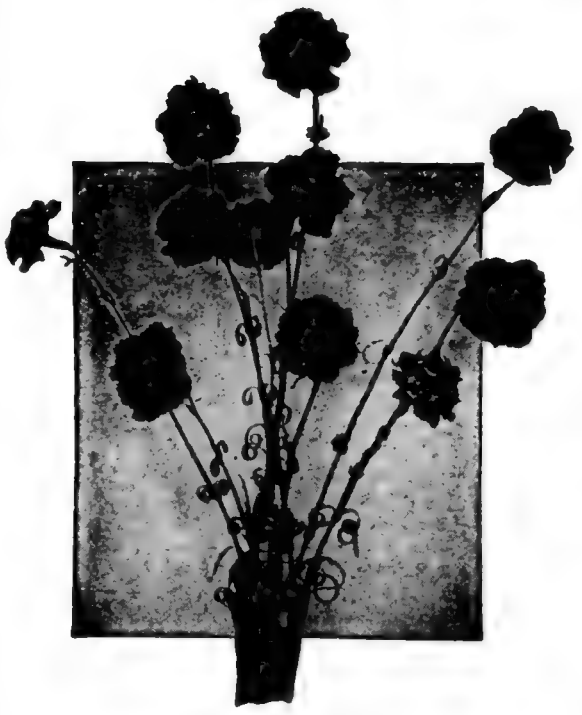
New Chrysanthemum

that is announced by its raiser, Mr. Pockett, as being

Superior in Every Way to Wm. Turner

of which it is a seedling. Since he raised both varieties, we may safely take his word for it. Louisa Pockett is larger than Turner; a better shape and as strong a grower as Marigold. We have 3000 plants ready for immediate delivery from 2½-inch pots, which if set out in the benches now will make ideal stock plants to propagate from. You must eventually have this variety—why not buy it now?



Also: Nag-ir-roc, W. H. Waite, Bol d'Or and President Everitt, our other Chrysanthemum Novelties for delivery at this time.

VIM Delivery Car Solves Florist's Delivery Problem

I have found my VIM Delivery Car very satisfactory. It is low on gasoline consumption and is doing the work of two or three teams. I have found it an economy, particularly at times when my equipment is idle. I then have one machine using up nothing, instead of two or three teams consuming feed and requiring care. Yours truly,

Charles B. Stahl.

MR. STAHL'S experience, like the many other florists who are using the VIM Delivery Car in their business, is typical of VIM economy.

For the florist there can be no question but that the VIM is the right delivery car. It is built for its work. It will deliver cheaply a rush order of cut flowers or truck a thousand pounds of potted plants.

The VIM is fundamental—built solely for delivery work.

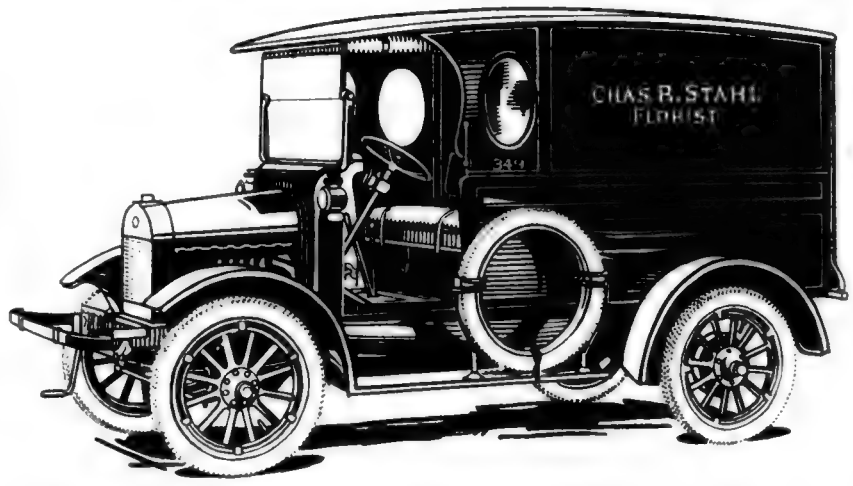
The VIM is easy on tires and economical in gasoline consumption. It has capacity and distance. It keeps delivery costs down where they belong.

The VIM will stay on the job delivering every working hour of the day and keep out of the repair shop. Last year the converted pleasure car cost the merchants of this country over $10,000,000 for repair bills alone.



You ought to know the VIM Delivery Car and the VIM Deferred Payment Plan. You use your VIM Car while you are paying for it out of the money VIM Delivery saves from the cost of your present delivery methods.

Tell the VIM Dealer in your community to show you.

This is the most efficient chassis for its work in the world—price is $645. Fitted with any one of twelve types of body—handsomely designed and strongly built—suitable for a hundred lines of business. Price complete: Open Express, $695; Closed Panel, $725.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

WILL FOOD FAMINE AFFECT FLOWERS?

The prices of food form the staple topic of conversation in the United States, for even the well-to-do find many so-called necessities of life beyond easy reach. Florists fear the mounting cost of food can go no farther without affecting the demand for flowers.

HOW far can the price of potatoes go before it cuts down the demand for daffodils? It is the question the men of the trade are asking each other, at florists' clubs and at chance meetings, for the impression is general that the recent sensational rise in the cost of food is prejudicial to the interests of those who deal in less necessary things. The fact is ignored that the florists' business always has been best while prices elsewhere were soaring.

"With potatoes at 6 cents a pound, cabbage at 12 cents and onions at 18 cents," said a retailer in a factory section, "my people will have nothing left with which to buy flowers." But he forgot the fact that all the workers in his section are employed, for about the first time on record, and that the earnings per household are the highest ever known.

The flower business never has been hurt by high prices for other things—somebody gets the money and that somebody is almost sure to spend part of it for flowers.

True, present conditions in the United States are without parallel. Price levels are higher than the present generation ever has known. Mr. Lugubrious Blue asserts with truth that the cost of living never was so high as now, but Mr. Smiley Glad points out with equal assurance that never before have so many people lived so high.

Active Money Helps.

High prices should be no bugbear to the florist who has it in him to keep the pace. Dull times for our trade always have come with periods of deflation elsewhere, never with times of inflation. It has been demonstrated over and over again that when money changes hands with celerity our trade can rely on handling a portion of it, a portion that grows greater or less as general business activity rises or falls.

It then merely is a question of the individual florist's ability to so manage his affairs that he is able to retain a profit.

What if potatoes are nearly a dollar a peck? Does the dollar disappear from the face of the earth? No; only the potatoes! The dollar merely changes from one man's hand to another's. And if there be a little better than the usual profit for the seller, so much the better for the florist whose door is handy to the spender of easy money.

Deflation Is What We Fear.

No. The trade need not be alarmed by rising prices. So long as inflation is in progress there will be brisk demand for flowers. Dull times for us will come with deflation—when our erstwhile free spending customer is loaded up with a lot of high priced merchandise and the market is crumbling beneath his feet; when the family that now has father, two sons and a daughter all contributing to the exchequer becomes dependent on the earnings of one son and the daughter. Then will come the time Old Man Worry will displace some of the people now around us.

In the meantime we should practice the old precept and make hay while the sun shines. The opportunities never were better than now. Consider that the high prices of food and most other articles are caused by the fact that demand is greater than the supply—but there is no shortage of cut flowers or spring plants! Indeed, there are plain indications that the first few days of spring weather, due any time now, will bring on the market perhaps the largest supply of cut flowers the trade ever has been called on to merchandise. We are not handicapped as many others are: We have plenty to sell; we can supply anything wanted in our line, in any quantity and at reasonable prices, in fact at prices that are distinctly low when compared with the prices asked in other trades.

Under the circumstances this is a time for florists as a class to be of good cheer. The long, hard winter is over and the season of largest demand is here. It will be larger than ever this year, helped rather than hindered by high prices in other trades. It is a time for all florists to hustle to turn the heavy spring crops into cash.

But it is no time to cut prices.

Hold Up Prices.

Costs this season have been much higher than usual. Now is the time to get the money back. Charge more, rather than less than last year. The public is used to it. Scarcely anyone will object if you are reasonable. Make the sales effort in the line of better display, more newspaper advertising, frequent direct appeal to regular customers, personal salesmanship in the case of hotels, restaurants, institutions and neighboring stores. Push, but don't cut prices. We must ask for what we want or we stand no chance of getting it.

And don't for a moment let any florist relax his effort because of high prices in other lines—when money is changing hands rapidly is our best time to catch our share of it. It's purely an indi-

UP

Goes the Cost of Food and No One Can See the Top.

Food costs are steadily rising, as indicated in price quotations gathered by a Chicago newspaper, used here as indicative of conditions in America's greatest food center. And the end is not in sight, according to forecasts of dealers. The figures quoted below show advances of twenty-five to 100 per cent over prices prevailing thirty days ago:

Potatoes, per peck	80	to 90	cents
Butter, per pound	45	to 50	cents
Eggs, per dozen	45	to 55	cents
Roundsteak, per pound	22	to 28	cents
Veal, per pound	28	to 40	cents
Pork chops, per pound	22	to 30	cents
Bacon, per pound	32	to 38	cents
Ham, per pound	24	to 40	cents
Lard, per pound	22	to 30	cents
Sugar, per pound	7½	to 8½	cents
Tomatoes, canned	13	to 20	cents
Corn, canned	15	to 20	cents
Peas, canned	12	to 25	cents
Cabbage, per pound	10	to 15	cents
Onions, per pound	12	to 18	cents
Cornmeal, per pound	4	to 10	cents
Hominy, per pound	12	to 18	cents
Navy beans, per pound	12	to 18	cents
Flour, 100 pounds	$5.00	to $6.00

PRIMROSE POISONING.

As a cure for primula poisoning the following has been found successful: Dissolve 10 cents' worth of camphor gum in one pint of gasoline. Rub the mixture on the affected parts after handling primroses and before putting the hands in water. Another application before retiring also is helpful. And, gentlemen, be careful that you do not light your pipes while bathing in this solution! E. E. Temperley.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

MUFFS FLOWER-TRIMMED.

Muffs made of delicate materials and trimmed with cut flowers are being carried by guests at the balls given by fashionable skating clubs in New York city. The one shown in the illustration was designed and produced by Max Schling. Exceptionally good taste has been used in the application of the flowers to the muff here shown. It will be seen that a sense of proportion has been observed, the roses on the muff proper being confined to a few stems woven together, with single blooms attached on the top and sides and to the ribbon streamers.

In sending the photograph, Mr. Schling says that these muffs are popular, not only for skating parties, but also practical for weddings. Their simplicity and artistic appearance will undoubtedly create a demand for muffs of this description throughout the country.

"IT PULLS LIKE FORTY."

Z. D. Blackistone, the Washington retailer, always has been a believer in the saying that "any advertising is better than no advertising" and he recently has been converted to the theory that "some advertising is a great deal better than other advertising." It came about like this: Mr. Blackistone's method of advertising had been to tell about the quality of his stock, the speed and precision of his service and the convenience of his location, but he had not said much about his prices. Still, results were good. Then, just by way of a change, he used about ten inches of space in a well read paper to show a cut inscribed "This is the handsome Blackistone spray at $2," with some other "Flower specials for this week: Roses, $1.50 dozen up; double violets, 50c bunch; jonquils, 75c dozen; selected carnations, $1 dozen; sweet peas, 50c and 75c bunch; seasonable potted plants, 75c." Of course it was well displayed and, although florists will appreciate that the prices were not low for the week after St. Valentine's day, "it is pulling business like forty" is the way Mr. Blackistone puts it.

HAVE YOU HEARD FROM HIM?

Several florists are interested in the fortunes of one H. R. Conklin, whose most recent headquarters appear to have been at Atlanta, Ga. It is alleged that Mr. Conklin worked harder to secure merchandise for which he was not required to pay on delivery, and to sell it if he could not use it, than would have been necessary to make a good living by the ordinary means. The postoffice inspectors appear to have checked his operations through bringing him before the United States Commissioner at Atlanta on a charge of fraudulent use of the mails. Max Schling, in New York, as recently as January 28 received a letter from Conklin as follows:

I am endeavoring to furnish Mrs. Conklin at this address with two dozen American Beauty roses twice weekly, on Tuesday and Friday of each week. These to be of the best quality and extremely long stems.

I am unable to obtain anything satisfactory in this vicinity and if possible you could supply same directly from New York, and that shipment can be made in such manner that they will reach here in first-class condition.

If it is possible for you to do so you may make shipment as above and continue until further notice.

It is possible that these might be obtained in some eastern city nearer here than New York where there would be better facilities for delivery. If this be true you may supply in this manner, but I must insist that they be extremely good and those obtainable here are not.

Schling's Muff for Skaters.

The communication and proposition did not look business-like to Mr. Schling and he did not accept the order. As reported in an Atlanta paper, Conklin's scheme, according to the government, was to trade under a name similar to that of some important concern, hoping that when he ordered goods the shipper would confuse the name of Conklin's concern with the real one. According to the postoffice inspectors Conklin's orders ranged all the way from portable houses to carbon paper, but he specialized on automobile goods.

H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., Cleveland, O., states that he filled H. R. Conklin orders to the extent of $90, which has thus far proved uncollectable, and he understands other florists, including the C. A. Dahl Co., of Atlanta, have had a similar experience.

THE LARGEST ORDER.

In a recent issue of The Review an illustration was shown of a design representing a value of $100, ordered of James Hayes, of Topeka, Kan., by telegraph because of his card in the Telegraph Delivery Department of The Review. It was cited as the record order. But here is another:

I read with much interest the account of the order sent to Mr. Hayes, of Topeka, by telegraph and note it was said to be the record order so far as heard from. It may interest The Review and its readers to know that I sent an order by wire to A. E. Fancher, of Binghamton, N. Y., amounting to $160. This was a simple order, however, compared to the one Mr. Hayes received, as it consisted of three separate standard pieces, a blanket and two wreaths. I think it would be interesting to hear from other florists who have sent or received larger orders than these, and to find out who really has sent and received the record telegraph delivery order up to this date.

William C. Gloeckner.

The feature of the record order received by Mr. Hayes was not so much the size and value of the design as it was the unusual and complicated character of the piece demanded on short notice. Any retailer will agree that an order for a special design never made before would be much "larger" than an order for a standard design costing the same money. What was the largest order you ever sent or received by mail or wire? The editor will be glad to hear about it.

MAKING THE STORE ATTRACTIVE.

That a beautiful store is a great help in selling flowers is thoroughly appreciated by John Mangel, the Palmer House florist, Chicago, and he is tireless in his effort to achieve his ideal of a retail establishment. Not only should the store be of the greatest beauty, but there should always be something new to attract customers' attention, he says.

The illustration on page 13 shows the conservatory at the rear of his store at 17 East Monroe street, which indicates clearly how Mr. Mangel carries out his policy. The column of spray in the center is produced by one of the Randall changeable-light, self-contained, electric fountains.

A BLUE RIBBON WREATH.

The accompanying illustration of a funeral piece finds print not because there is anything unusual in the wreath's design or get-up, but because it depicts a high order of workmanship on the part of the designer. The wreath was made by the Duluth Floral Co., which operates the "Flower Store of Service Combined with Quality," at 121 West Superior street, Duluth, Minn.

CHARGE SLIPS VALUABLE.

Their Loss Serious to Florists.

One of the cleverest little business sermons consists of two pictures. One picture shows a bill hook on which hangs a lot of 5-dollar and 10-dollar bills, with the wording under it:

You wouldn't take care of your money in this way.

The other picture shows a similar bill hook hung full of charge and C. O. D. bills. Under it is the legend:

Why do you keep your valuable charge records like this?

The more you think of these pictures the more you recognize the truth of the sermon preached.

Inventive genius has provided modern means for safeguarding a merchant's coin and currency, even to the point of recording each transaction of each clerk who has access to the cash register.

But, until now, the leaks that come from carelessness in handling charge accounts have not been adequately provided against.

A charge slip for $10 against a customer is worth $10, because if the evidence of indebtedness is lost, the chances are that the money will be lost.

Yet florists usually are woefully careless with their charge business.

Why is it that, of two florists with apparently equal prospects of success and equally equipped with brains and business experience, one builds up a good business and makes money while the other, after struggling along for months or maybe years, fails?

Experience supplies the answer, that in almost every case where an honest, experienced, industrious florist fails it is because he robs himself of his profits through lax methods of handling his charge accounts. Indeed, it is almost axiomatic that any merchant, to prosper, must be careful with his credit business.

Careless Dealers Fail.

A merchant in a western town who was reputed wealthy suddenly failed, and when the receivers went through his books they found $85,000 of worthless accounts which the merchant had been carrying as good and collectable.

These losses had two principal causes: Credit risks that were bad from the start, and risks that may have been good originally but were allowed to lie so long that they became uncollectable for various reasons.

How much more that merchant lost by forgetting to charge altogether, nobody will ever know.

And no one will ever arrive at even an approximate estimate of what it cost him to keep his charge slips on spindles on an open desk, where they could be tampered with or destroyed either by debtor customers or tempted clerks.

Credit File on Market.

The subject is brought up by the appearance on the market of a new device called a credit file, designed to remedy these conditions. It is worthy of consideration because it is offered by the manufacturer of the cash register used in almost every flower store, the general adoption of which by the merchants of America has done more than any other one thing to conserve their money. This new credit file is designed to take the place of both a day book and ledger, and the only "posting" that is done is the writing of the charge slip, of which the customer gets the carbon copy, and the filing of the original copy in this unique device.

The file is divided into two compartments, an open one in front, and, back of that, a locked compartment with a plate glass top.

The act of pulling forward the vertical guides in the front compartment does three things:

It rings a bell. It registers a serial number. It opens the corresponding guides in the locked file so that the clerk can look through the glass top and see the previous charge slip of the customer, which is filed in such a way that the name and the total amount of indebtedness are exposed.

under the customer's name in the front or daybook compartment, and each night the proprietor or his delegated authority unlocks the glass-covered rear compartment and transfers the daily charges to the proper locations in the permanent, or "ledger" file.

Aids Credit Man.

The information locked under glass serves two purposes: First, a private mark, made by the proprietor or credit man, may tell the clerk that no further credit should be extended to that customer without his personal O. K.

Second, the clerk enters on the customer's bill the amount carried forward plus the amount of the customer's current purchase, the customer being handed the duplicate sales slip embodying this information.

It may be said, in passing, that this act of reminding the customer of his full indebtedness each time he makes a purchase is calculated to prevent disputes and to speed up liberal payments on account.

But the major function of this new credit-file is to compel the filing of all charges and C. O. D. slips in a safe place where they cannot be mislaid, altered or destroyed.

Equally important is the fact that this file shows the proprietor of any business in a graphic way, each evening, exactly the extent and condition of his credit business.

Fifty per cent of the florists who fail, fail through extending more credit than their capital warrants.

They are blindly ignorant of the fact that far too many of their charge customers are not worthy of the credit extended. Careless habits of bookkeeping and filing are fatal to any business.

It is true, also, that most merchants get into deep water because they don't realize how much outstanding credit business they have upon their books until it is too late to save themselves.

This new credit file not only tells them the general condition of their credit business but the actual status of each charge or C. O. D. account, as well as the amounts paid on account each day by each customer.

THE GRIMM & GORLY STAFF.

The accompanying illustration was made in the workroom of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, and the group includes the store staff, all but the employees in the packing room and the delivery boys. The size of the force will give an idea of the volume of business necessary to keep so many people busy.

WHEN LILIES FREEZE.

My lilies were frozen recently, but I think some of them could be saved. As I have a great many, I would like to separate the good from the bad, and use the space. Some of them are in bloom. Can these be moved without injury? Also, can those not in bloom be safely moved to another house?

M. C. M.—Mich.

I am afraid that if your lilies were really frozen they will not amount to much. The foliage may remain green, but the buds are likely to be killed. You can move the plants you wish to keep into another house. You will soon be able to find out whether the buds are irretrievably injured or not. Usually a chill, not to say a freeze, will finish the buds on lilies, especially if they were grown warm. If you have been growing your lilies cool, there is a chance that some may be all right.

["The Dahlia—a Practical Treatise on Its Habits, Characteristics, Cultivation and History," by Lawrence K. Peacock. Fifth edition. Published by Peacock Dahlia Farms, Berlin, N. J. Size, about 8x10¾ inches; eighty pages, fully illustrated. Price, in paper cover, 50 cents.]

Although this book may have been intended principally or primarily for the use of amateurs, yet it can scarcely be amateurish in any objectionable sense of the word, since the author's long experience in the trade should be an assurance of the practical nature of his opinions. Moreover, by the time he gets halfway through the book he has passed beyond the rudiments of the subject and is addressing himself directly to the commercial growers. The fact that the needs of the amateurs receive full consideration is probably an advantage, tending to prevent the omission of any of the important elementary principles. At the end of the book is a "select list of varieties," carefully classified and briefly described.

AMARYLLIS CULTURE.

I am starting some amaryllis bulbs. They now are dormant and I wish to bring them into flower as soon as possible. Please inform me as to soil, heat and watering, and length of time before they will show buds. E. W. P.—Ill.

Use a mixture of fibrous loam, three parts; old, dried cow manure, one part, and some sharp sand. Give the bed good drainage. Place the bulbs in a temperature of 60 to 62 degrees at night. Give them a watering after potting and then run them on the dry side. Flower spikes will show within a week or two and flowers will be open within a month from the time the spikes appear. Established plants in tubs give much finer spikes than can be had from dry bulbs.

TO MEET HIGHER COSTS

NEW TERMS AND DISCOUNTS.

For Agents in Smaller Towns.

A letter has been sent to the florists throughout Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, in accordance with the plan adopted at the meeting in Lincoln some time ago. About 200 copies of the letter have been sent out and every report that has been received up to date is favorable and a great many are now operating under these new terms and discounts. A committee intends to follow up this campaign and do everything possible to get the trade to adopt this plan for agents in smaller towns.

The commissions allowed by different florists to their agents seem to have varied from twenty to forty per cent. It can be readily understood that no florist can do a legitimate business and give his customers value if he allows such large commissions, especially under the present conditions of increased expenses.

We, the members of the committee referred to, certainly feel that it is short-sighted for florists to continue giving such large discounts and lose so much in their profits, for they can certainly obtain business on other arguments, of quality and service rather than discounts.

It seems that a great many florists are extremely negligent in their methods of handling their terms and some do not get out their statements until the middle of the month. We, therefore, would like to have The Review help get the new discounts universally established and do everything possible to get the florists to enforce their terms more rigidly. Any assistance or suggestions will be greatly appreciated.

The Letter to the Florists.

The following is a copy of the letter that was sent, as stated, to the florists of four states:

Gentlemen: At a joint meeting of the Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas florists, held at Lincoln a few weeks ago, there was quite a discussion regarding the increased expense items and costs. Since the selling prices of flowers have remained practically the same for the last several years, it is necessary that some changes be made in most of our businesses to meet these abnormal conditions.

It was therefore decided to establish more uniform discounts and definite terms of credit on shipments to agents.

A committee was appointed and, after careful thought, the committee recommends the plan as outlined on the enclosed notice. We know that every florist is interested in making a fair, legitimate profit and we should like to have you consider and adopt the plan as specified.

Any questions on the subject will be gladly answered and the committee will coöperate with all the members of the trade and assist them to get the system established at once. Please let us know when you will start.

Address reply to Roy F. Wilcox, chairman, Council Bluffs, Ia.

The Proposed New Terms.

The notice that accompanied the letter to the florists was as follows:

Jan. 30, 1917.

The general increase in the cost of all materials used in our business makes it necessary for us to change our discounts and terms. The average prices of cut flowers at the different seasons are remaining practically the same, and, rather than increase these prices in proportion, we recommend this new plan:

Commencing February 1, all shipments will be billed at list prices, subject to the following uniform terms and discounts to all agents:

Bills are due the first of each month following purchases.

Twenty per cent commission will be allowed for payment on or before the tenth day of the month.

Only ten per cent commission allowed for payment after the tenth day of the month.

No commission allowed on bills unpaid by sixty days from date of invoice.

Discount will not show on invoices; the proper amount is to be deducted at time of remittance. In order to continue our standing of high quality and efficient service, it will be necessary that the terms be strictly observed and payment made promptly.

This is the amount of discount adopted by the National Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association for transactions between themselves and we are hereby placing you on the same basis as a florist who always carries a stock on hand.

Telephone and prepaid express charges cannot be allowed. They should be paid by your customers and not deducted out of your commission, as some do. Packing charges will be added to all invoices for plants and also on shipments of cut flowers requesting packing in separate boxes.

Please do what you can to help increase the sales in your territory, for there is not an easier profit, especially since there is no investment to carry.

Roy F. Wilcox, Chairman.

HEAR YE, HOOSIERS!

The meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana, originally scheduled to be held at La Fayette, March 6, has been postponed one day, to March 7, on account of the election. A special car will leave the terminal station at Indianapolis at 8:15 a. m. "Get Higher Prices!" the principal topic up for discussion, should bring out a good attendance.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Seattle, Wash.—It is reported that Rosaia Bros., Inc., have been forced into bankruptcy as the result of a damage suit said to have been brought against them for personal injuries. It is believed by L. Ghilarduin, of Tacoma, who is soliciting power of attorney to act for other creditors, that with proper handling by the trustee "we will come out all right."

DARWIN TULIPS FOR EASTER.

Kindly let us know when we should bring in Darwin tulips to have them in flower at Easter, in a carnation temperature. W. B.—Ont.

House the plants about March 10. Darwin tulips require a little longer time than early tulips. You will probably need to retard them if you get bright, warm weather. C. W.

FORMOSA LILIES.

We are having disappointing results from our Formosa lilies. The plants develop well and look healthy, but when the buds form they do not open white, but remain the same color as the foliage, not forming the lily at all. Fully one-third of our bulb shipment turned out this way. Can you give us any information that will help us?

W. G.—Ia.

Formosa lilies often will act in this way if they have had a check. For instance, if you have been growing them warm and, after the buds show, give them a sharp drop in temperature, the bulk of the buds will remain green and not open at all. The same trouble sometimes occurs on a portion of the plants although an even and suitable temperature has been given them. This is due, not to wrong treatment, but to the bulbs having been dug and shipped in an immature state. Such bulbs nearly always throw diseased growths or malformed flowers, and no treatment you can give them will overcome this. If all lily bulbs were ripe when dug we would have less disease. C. W.

Akron, O.—Hammerschmidt & Clark, growers of Medina, have acquired the business of the Botzum Flower Shop, fixtures of the store, etc., and will conduct the business from their establishment at 12 West Market street.

West Toledo, O.—Harry Heinl comments that in this section of Ohio the law requiring the employment of licensed firemen is enforced to the letter and is burdensome for florists. In his own case he is required to keep a licensed man on duty all the twenty-four hours.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

FRED H. WEBER.

FRED H. WEBER is the newly elected president of the St. Louis Retail Florists' Association, having been chosen for that position at the annual meeting held February 19. Mr. Weber takes up the duties of president with a ripe experience in florists' organizations. He has served as vice-president of the S. A. F. for Missouri and has long been active in the St. Louis associaton. Mr. Weber was born in Germany in 1875, and came to St. Louis fifteen years later. There he entered the employ of his uncle, Fred C. Weber, with whom he remained until 1903, when he established the business which bears his name. Through Mr. Weber's activities in the affairs of the S. A. F. he is well known to the florists of the country.

The Store Staff of Grimm & Gorly, Retailers, at St. Louis, Mo.

under the customer's name in the front or daybook compartment, and each night the proprietor or his delegated authority unlocks the glass-covered rear compartment and transfers the daily charges to the proper locations in the permanent, or "ledger" file.

Aids Credit Man.

The information locked under glass serves two purposes: First, a private mark, made by the proprietor or credit man, may tell the clerk that no further credit should be extended to that customer without his personal O. K.

Second, the clerk enters on the customer's bill the amount carried forward plus the amount of the customer's current purchase, the customer being handed the duplicate sales slip embodying this information.

It may be said, in passing, that this act of reminding the customer of his full indebtedness each time he makes a purchase is calculated to prevent disputes and to speed up liberal payments on account.

But the major function of this new credit file is to compel the filing of all charges and C. O. D. slips in a safe place where they cannot be mislaid, altered or destroyed.

Equally important is the fact that this file shows the proprietor of any business in a graphic way, each evening, exactly the extent and condition of his credit business.

Fifty per cent of the florists who fail, fail through extending more credit than their capital warrants.

They are blindly ignorant of the fact that far too many of their charge customers are not worthy of the credit extended. Careless habits of bookkeeping and filing are fatal to any business.

It is true, also, that most merchants get into deep water because they don't realize how much outstanding credit business they have upon their books until it is too late to save themselves.

This new credit file not only tells them the general condition of their credit business but the actual status of each charge or C. O. D. account, as well as the amounts paid on account each day by each customer.

THE GRIMM & GORLY STAFF.

The accompanying illustration was made in the workroom of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, and the group includes the store staff, all but the employees in the packing room and the delivery boys. The size of the force will give an idea of the volume of business necessary to keep so many people busy.

WHEN LILIES FREEZE.

My lilies were frozen recently, but I think some of them could be saved. As I have a great many, I would like to separate the good from the bad, and use the space. Some of them are in bloom. Can these be moved without injury? Also, can those not in bloom be safely moved to another house?

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Trailing Plants.

Seeds of such plants as thunbergias, Maurandia Barclaiana, Lobelia speciosa, Linaria Cymbalaria and Lophospermum scandens should now be sown in a warm house. Sow them thinly and pot off before the seedlings become crowded. The lobelias take a longer season than the others, but there still is time to secure plants of a suitable size. Senecio scandens, or German ivy, is another plant which should be propagated now, while that easily grown plant, Tradescantia zebrina multicolor, as well as the ordinary green form, grows so rapidly that it will be of ample size if cuttings are put in a month from now. This common plant is quite suitable for use in window and porch boxes and it will grow and thrive where other plants would fail. Do not overlook the drooping forms of coleus and abutilons, which are well adapted for trailing purposes.

Variegated Vincas.

Variegated vincas, to be at all serviceable, should be thick and heavy and have long, trailing shoots. The proper place for them is along the sides of carnation benches, where the shoots can hang down. Water and feed them well for the next three months and you will have splendid plants. Propagation from either divisions or cuttings is easy. Remember that if you sell all your sizable stock you will need a good batch to follow them for another season, and these smaller plants should have a season in the field to give them size and vigor. Vincas like a rich soil and an abundant water supply. At this season they bloom freely in a sunny house. It is too bad they do not flower through the summer also. The blue flowers and variegated foliage make a charming combination.

English Ivies.

English ivies make splendid basket, vase and piazza box plants. They are good for covering walls in some of the colder states where the morning sun will not hit them, and in more balmy states have manifold uses. There is always a big call for them and it pays to work up a good stock of them each season. Cuttings do not take long to root in a warm propagating bench and now is a good time to start a good batch. These small plants will not be salable this season, but if potted and the pots plunged overhead in any good garden soil, the plants will make a good growth in a season. They will do specially well plunged in a partly shaded position, although that is not necessary. If an occasional soaking can be given during dry weather, it will cause an accelerated growth.

Dahlias and Cannas.

It is somewhat early to start either cannas or dahlias, but it will be a good plan to look over the stock of roots. Some of these may be showing decay and should be cut away. Where this shows among the cannas, scatter some dry sand about the cuts. If you want a few early cannas in pots, start one or two of each variety. Keep these potted along and have them in good bloom before spring sales start. By having a blooming plant of each sort, it is easier for customers to pick out what they want.

Propagating Bedding Plants.

Keep the cutting bench well filled with cuttings of coleus, acalyphas, alternantheras, ageratums, petunias, lobelias and other bedding plants. All cuttings root much more quickly and satisfactorily now, while steady fire heat is used and the sand in the benches is constantly warm. Do not allow them to become too dry and be sure to keep sun and air currents from the cuttings; thus treated, few should fail to root.

FERN FRONDS WITHERED.

I am enclosing a few fronds of a fern which I am growing. At present it is growing in the bench for development. This bench of ferns was in fine shape about ten days ago. On going to the greenhouses this morning, however, I find that the ferns look bad in certain places, though not throughout the entire bench. This is something that we cannot account for. I shall be thankful for any information as to the cause of the ferns acting in this way. I should also be pleased to know the name of this fern.

R. G.—Ill.

The fern of which some fronds were enclosed is Nephrolepis cordifolia, a pretty and compact-growing species when propagated from spores, and of rapid growth during the summer months. The fronds were quite dry and were dropping some of their pinnæ when examined; so it is not easy to say what caused the injury to the foliage, but as the damage is stated to be in patches, it would seem probable that it was due to an escape of gas from the furnace. Had the trouble with the foliage been general throughout the bench, it would more likely have been due to the ferns going to rest for a time, as this species is semi-deciduous.

CARNATIONS

CARNATIONS HURT BY SPRAY?

I would like to know what is wrong with my carnation plants, samples of which I am sending you under separate cover. I have about 300 plants in this condition. One night the temperature in the house dropped to 43 degrees; I now am maintaining a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees. As the remainder of the plants in this house are doing well, I am at a loss to find the cause of the trouble.

J. F. M.—Ill.

Your plants are not diseased. They appear to have been scalded in some manner, perhaps by some kind of spraying material. That drop in temperature could hardly be responsible for the trouble.

A. F. J. B.

A BEGINNING IN CARNATIONS.

Will rooted cuttings of carnations, 2½-inch pot plants or field-grown clumps give best returns in a greenhouse which I am planning to build here, in northern Georgia? When should I plant them? How often should I pinch them back and when should I cease pinching?

R. D. M.—Ga.

While I have no personal knowledge of the climatic and other conditions in Georgia during the summer, I presume that in order to grow carnation plants in a greenhouse in that state the greenhouse would need to be well shaded and provided with ample means for ventilation, and that careful attention to watering would be needed. It would seem better, therefore, to use field-grown plants and plant them in the beds in September.

If conditions are favorable for so doing, the cheapest way of securing plants is to obtain rooted cuttings, either by growing or purchasing them. If they have been properly hardened in the cutting bench, and a Skinner system or some other method of watering them is available in case of dry weather, they may be set at once in the field, but ordinarily a much better stand may be secured if they are placed either in pots or flats for three or four weeks before they are planted in the field. This will make it possible to harden them properly and, as they will develop a strong root system, the results will generally repay the extra labor.

If the small plants, either in the flats or field, show a tendency to develop a single stem, they should be cut or pinched back to one inch from the ground at first, but later the stems may be left a little longer. Ordinarily this need not be kept up for more than two months after the plants are set in the field, but flower stalks should not be allowed to develop until within two or three weeks of the time they are to be placed in the house, unless the plants have become strong and stocky.

For complete directions for the growing of carnations in the field, as well as in the greenhouse, you might consult Taft's "Greenhouse Management," which will be sent postpaid by The Review for $1.50.

RAMBLERS FOR EASTER.

Fertilizer and Water.

Easter ramblers now are making a rapid growth and need considerable feed and water from this time on, so as to insure good flowering breaks. Cattle manure soaked in barrels about ten days and diluted in fresh water makes an excellent fertilizer. The strength of the mixture depends on how far your plants are advanced; care must be taken at the start not to make the fertilizer too strong. Pot-grown ramblers will stand a good deal stronger mixture than field-grown stock.

Field-grown ramblers sometimes are slow in making new roots, especially the imported stock, which this year was in transit longer than usual A great many plants start breaking and leaf out before there is any sign of root action. Plants acting in this manner should not have fertilizer of any kind until they show fresh roots.

Time to Feed.

When the breaks develop from three to five leaves and the roots are well started, it is time to give the plants a light dose of the manure liquid, once every week. First give them a watering of fresh water. After the manure is well soaked in there generally is a sediment on top. Soak this down with fresh water. This practically means three waterings, and it is not any too much.

Thousands of roses in pots and benches are ruined every year because they did not receive enough water and fertilizer at the proper time.

Make the mixture a little stronger each time. When the breaks begin to show buds, give the plants the limit in food, and plenty of water.

As most ramblers are in 5½ and 6-inch pots, it is impossible to water them thoroughly by going over them once only. Soak them two or three times, especially when you are watering and feeding them during the bright days of March.

Red Spider and Syringing.

When red spider makes its first appearance, syringe the plants the day on which you water them, or the following day, while your pots are well soaked. The next syringing should be done when you give the plants the next watering. By following this rule you always know the exact condition of the soil. Many growers have an idea that it is necessary to syringe ramblers or other kinds of roses on all bright days, but this is a great mistake, as it makes the wood soft, and the grower is more liable to meet with mildew. Furthermore, it keeps the top soil wet and makes it hard for the grower to tell the exact condition of the soil. The plants may be suffering from want of water, and the only way one can tell it is by taking out the plants. On bright days they may begin to wilt before one realizes how dry they are. If rose plants get in that condition, injury is done to both flowers and foliage. Jerry P. Jorgensen.

INSECTS IN ROSE SOIL.

Under separate cover I am sending you a sample of soil taken from the top of my rose bed. It contains little white insects which stay just under the top soil. The insects were not brought in with this mulch, as they were there before it was put on. The rose plants are not doing well and I would like to know if these insects injure the roots. If so, how can I get rid of them?

A. R. W.—Mich.

I could not find any of the white insects referred to in the soil sample received, but found several wireworms. These can be gotten rid of by laying a poisoned mash for them, the bait to consist of sweet bran, molasses and Paris green, using just enough poison to slightly color the mash.

For soil pests use carbon bisulphide, boring holes twelve to fifteen inches apart each way and two to three inches deep. Into each hole pour a scant teaspoonful of the carbon. It generates a gas which suffocates all soil pests and will not harm your roses. As the liquid is of an explosive nature, be careful not to use any naked light while applying it. C. W.

TIMING ROSES FOR EASTER.

We have some Magna Charta roses that have been in the house six weeks and are now showing buds. The temperature in the house is 52 degrees at night. Do you think the buds will open before Easter? We have more of the same variety that we want for Decoration day. How many weeks will it take to have them in time for that day?

L. A. E. & S.—O.

The roses, if already in bud, will be too early for Easter. I am afraid that if you place them in a lower temperature you may get mildew on the plants. You might try running them a trifle cooler, say 45 degrees at night, and hold them there until the buds show color, when it will be safe to keep them still cooler; but avoid cold drafts, which would start mildew.

For Memorial day eight to nine weeks would suffice to flower the plants in an average night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees. A good deal, of course, would depend on the amount of sunshine we have. If cold and unusually cloudy, ten weeks might be necessary. C. W.

Elyria, O.—Its present building having become too small to care for the largely increasing business, the Hecock Floral Co. has made plans for the erection this spring of a 3-story building on the site of its present structure.

Rotterdam, Holland.—The nursery stock and bulbs aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, recalled after sailing, have gone forward on a freighter.

Haywards Heath, England.—Allwood Bros., one of whom obtained his training as a carnation specialist in America, have a White May Day of spotless purity, said to be unusually prolific.

London, England.—A. Hemsley, 66 years of age, widely known as manager for H. B. May & Sons and later for H. J. Jones, Ltd., died recently of cancer. He was a frequent contributor to the trade press.

London, England.—Hurst & Son are distributing to the seed trade new varieties of Primula obconica, known as the Chenies strain, raised by John Dickson, which capable observers say will be found to surpass anything now on the market.

London, England.—It is said here that the vogue of Ophelia rose in America is due to E. G. Hill having seen it, while on a visit to England, extensively grown by George Beckwith, who marketed the blooms as Ladylove, although most rosarians knew its real name.

London, England.—The suspension of the Gardeners' Magazine has made it possible for the newly organized British Wholesale Florists' Federation to secure Charles H. Curtis as its secretary. An office has been opened in Covent Garden. The federation already has 1,000 members.

Odense, Denmark.—Danish seed growers, who long have had a reputation for certain vegetable seeds, notably of the brassica family, have been hard at work since the war started in improving their strains of flower seeds and hope to be able to afford Germany some strong competition after the return of peace.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

MUMS IN THE SOUTH.

Now is a good time to begin to take chrysanthemum cuttings, especially of the early varieties, and particularly in those sections where the bulk of the crop is grown outdoors. A deep coldframe is the best place in which to propagate the cuttings, in the warm sections, and a mixture of half sand and half charcoal dust is the best propagating material. The cuttings will require shading during the day, but the cover should be removed at night, to allow the dew to settle on the cuttings. The main thing to remember when propagating in a coldframe is to do all necessary watering after removing the shade at night. The cuttings root readily during March. Later they have a tendency to rot, commencing at the top of the shoot. If the cuttings are taken just a little bit hard and the tops pinched out, no trouble will be experienced.

In the cooler sections of the south cuttings will root readily in the same bed in which carnations are propagated. Propagation can be continued during the hot weather of May and June if some lath shutters are placed on the roof over the bed, the beds kept well shaded and the little plants given plenty of water.

L.

EASTER PLANTS IN SOUTH.

With Easter only six weeks away, southern growers can now make a reasonably correct estimate as to whether their stock will be in flower at that date. The great staples in the south are lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas, spiræas and bulbous stock. If the lilies and hydrangeas are showing buds now, they will be in good time if kept in a night temperature of 60 degrees. In the cooler sections more heat can be given, and then the plants may be hardened off for two weeks in a cool, shaded house. Hydrangeas should be given manure water twice a week from now until the flowers show color.

Spiræas need about nine weeks to come into flower. They should be started cool and then advanced into warmer quarters as they progress. They will stand hard forcing if necessary, but they will be better if grown in a temperature not exceeding 60 degrees at night. They require plenty of water. Azaleas will flower almost naturally for Easter. If they have been kept in a coldframe during the winter, three weeks in a greenhouse temperature will develop the flowers. Almost all of the bulbous stock for this holiday will bloom in ten to fourteen days after uncovering. Lilies, hydrangeas and all bulbous stock have a better appearance when tied to neat, green stakes with green raffia.

MODERN TUBEROUS BEGONIAS.

Their Hybridization and Culture.

A recent bulletin from the Missouri Botanical Garden contains some interesting information on the hybridization and culture of the tuberous begonia. During the summer the tuberous begonia, with its large, waxy flowers of various colors, says the bulletin, has no equal for an indoor display.

The begonia was named after a French patron of botany, M. Begon, and the term "tuberous" is applied because the group possesses perennial rootstocks. Thirty-five years ago the plant was just beginning to attract popular attention. At that time a number of hybrid forms were introduced, and the evolution since then has resulted in the production of varieties with large-sized blooms as double as a rose. At present nearly every imaginable tint is being shown, as well as many shapes, which often present an extraordinary similarity to other flowers, such as the camellia, rose, hollyhock, carnation and peony. In a great many varieties the petals are round, in some short and narrow, while in others they are fine and frilled; sometimes they are loose and open and often the reverse is true. Many of the flowers are flat when open, a few are anemone-centered, and others are globular, pyramidal or elliptical. The plant blooms continuously from June to October, the duration of the individual flowers varying from three to six weeks from the time of opening.

Parents of Modern Begonias.

The first species concerned in the parentage of the present-day forms was Begonia Boliviensis, which was introduced into England from Bolivia in 1864. It is characterized by long, narrow leaves and scarlet, fuchsia-like flowers. This species has recently been crossed with some of the double and single forms and has given rise to a type with long, pendulous stems and drooping flowers, which is suitable for hanging baskets.

The next species to be introduced was Begonia Pearcei, also from Bolivia, in 1866. The plant has large yellow flowers in axillary panicles and has been the chief factor in the production of hundreds of yellow, buff and orange forms. In 1867 B. rosæflora was brought from Peru. It bears large rose-red flowers and has proved to be important in the creation of some of the white forms, the best known of these being the Queen of the Whites. The same year B. Veitchii followed, with its round, vermilion-tinted flowers, to which many of our present-day varieties owe their coloring. In 1876 B. Clarkei and B. Davisii were introduced. The former has rose-colored blossoms, and the latter, a dwarf plant with smooth, glossy fo-

Murfreesboro, Tenn.—The Jetton Floral Co. has recently completed a new greenhouse.

Gulfport, Miss.—The Mills Farms Co., one of the largest seed firms in this part of the United States, is planting forty acres in satsuma oranges. The trees are Mississippi grown.

Tampa, Fla.—The Knull Floral Co. put a new delivery truck into service just before Christmas and reports it is proving a good advertisement as well as a means of quick action on an order. The truck is unusual in that it is pure white except for the trimming.

New Orleans, La.—Frank J. Reyes, who claims the distinction of having furnished more wedding bouquets than any other man in New Orleans during his twenty years' career as a florist, has purchased the interests of his partner, Peter Ackerman, and is planning big things for his business.

Waco, Tex.—Through the efforts of the Lions' Club, February 22 was observed here as rose-planting day, the movement having the official recognition of the mayor and the town's civic workers. Several of the department stores held mammoth sales of 2-year-old rose plants. At the club's banquet in the evening speakers gave cultural directions to amateurs.

Tifton, Ga.—M. F. Myers, of the Myers Seed & Plant Co., reports that nearly all his plants were killed by the recent cold wave.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Rosemont Gardens reports business this season the best in its history. Only a small part of the business is local, cut flowers being sent throughout the south, with a large mail order business in plants.

Reidsville, N. C.—Mrs. W. T. Barber is erecting a greenhouse of the Moninger semi-iron type, 30x50 feet. The weather has been unusually cold here. The mercury fell to 3 degrees above zero February 6, the coldest known in thirty-seven years.

Savannah, Ga.—The florists in this section lost heavily in the February freeze. There are several establishments with only rudimentary heating equipment, for little heat usually is needed. A. C. Oelschig, whose establishment has been considered well equipped, lost quite heavily, one item being about 10,000 plants of Ficus elastica. The rubber plant is Mr. Oelschig's specialty and it is probable that he is the largest grower of it in the United States. The high wind that accompanied the drop in the temperature proved Mr. Oelschig's undoing, for it made it impossible to heat the exposed parts of his range.

CASEY'S GREEN CARNATION.

The subjoined "poem" was penned when the green carnation was more of a novelty than it is now. It was published in Butte, Mont., February 7, 1906. "Jimmy" King now is one of the officers of the Butte Floral Co. Casey is a man well known in Butte, as were Beudahl and the author.

Have you ever heard the story, weird and strange and grewsome, too,
How a florist showed the people what an awful lot he knew?
Hear, then, of the green carnation Jimmy King the florist grew.

In his buttonhole he wore it, green as is the Emerald Isle,
Green as vernal April meadows, far from city sin and guile.
"Here," said King, "for fancy blossoms—this will hold you for awhile!"

Casey saw it; Casey loved it; Casey bought the flower of King.
When at last he owned the blossom George was proud as anything,
Danced an Irish jig, a polka and a lightsome Highland fling,

Swelled his chest to fearsome compass, wore a high and mighty grin,
Swore that King had Burbank faded, said he knew that King would win,
Then went homeward to his chamber, doused the glimmer and turned in.

All night long that green carnation stood in water fresh and cool,
All night long did Casey murmur, "Jimmy King is no one's fool—
He's the greatest living pupil of the Luther Burbank school."

In the full, fresh, fragrant morning, Casey woke and looked around Till his eyes upon the table once again the blossom found.
"Then it was no dream," said Casey, "it is green and safe and sound."

Entered presently a comrade, finding Casey all serene,
Norseman Beudahl glanced about him with a rather prying mien,
Till he spied the green carnation, still a vivid vernal green.

"Casey," said his friend, "I'm thinking this is paler than before.
Tell me, is this green carnation just the same as what you wore
When you wended through the city raising such an awful roar?"

"Yes," said Casey, "that's the ticket; that's the blossom, ain't it great?
Green carnations ain't so frequent in the old Montana state;
I shall order forty dozen for St. Patrick's day and date."

"Yaas, I tank it's fine," quoth Beudahl, "green and wonderful to see,
And the water it is kept in is as green as it can be—
Green carnations be lak marvels, but dem colors runs, by yee!"

Casey looked, and Casey fainted from a sad and pained surprise.
All his boasting had been wasted, Norseman Beudahl put him wise
That the green carnation's color was the work of Diamond Dyes.

Now you've heard the wondrous story, and it's absolutely true
How a florist bunkoed Casey with a blossom strange in hue.
Farewell to the green carnation Jimmy King the florist grew!

ILLINOIS FLORISTS TO MEET.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its twelfth annual convention at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., March 6 and 7. The program is as follows:

2 P. M., TUESDAY, MARCH 6.

Welcome, by J. C. Blair, Head of Department of Horticulture.
President's Address, by C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park.
Report of Secretary, by J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.
Report of Treasurer, by F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.
Report of Fertilizer Works, by F. W. Muncie, Urbana.
Report of Pathological Work, by E. M. R. Lamkey, Urbana.
Report on Instructional Work, by H. B. Dorner, Urbana.
General Discussion.
Nomination and Election of Officers.

8 P. M., TUESDAY, MARCH 6.

"How Can We Increase Flower and Plant Sales? (a) By Better Arrangements, (b) by Better Salesmanship." Speakers on above topics will be announced later.

10 A. M., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7.

Unfinished Business.
New Business.
After the meeting the state experiment greenhouses will be open for inspection. The research and instrumental staffs will be on duty and will be pleased to answer all questions.

Secretary Ammann gives notice that an amendment to the constitution, as a substitute for Article 4, pertaining to membership, will be offered to be passed upon at the meeting as follows:

The membership shall consist of—associate members, paying a fee of one dollar ($1); life members, paying a fee of ten dollars ($10); and honorary members without fees.

This amendment if adopted will do away with the payment of $1 dues annually.

J. F. Ammann.

A NEW PORTRAIT.

Here is a new portrait of J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., who is secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, and who presided at the recent Indianapolis convention of the American Carnation Society. Mr. Ammann is one of the best known members of the trade, but that is not the reason for printing the picture here. The reason lies entirely in the excellence of the portrait. The halftone was made for the secretary of the Carnation Society, to serve as a frontispiece for the forthcoming annual report. When the editor saw it he liked it so well he asked for the privilege of showing it to the readers of The Review before it was sent away.

Cromwell, Conn.—Last week the stork left a son at the home of Wallace R. Pierson.

Lexington, Ky.—W. S. Bell, who is now with the H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., was formerly a retail florist in this city, where he lived for thirty years. He entered the business in 1881 with a store on Short street and later for fifteen years was located on Main street.

Allentown, Pa.—At a banquet here recently the florists of Reading and Allentown discussed matters concerning the good of the trade and suggestions for harmony in business matters. The men from Reading, who were guests of the Allentonians, made a tour of inspection, including the establishments of Horn Bros., Ernest Ashley, Andrew Yeager, E. M. Kroninger, O. J. Sawyer, Charles Vorkeller and Sawyer & Johnson. Among the visitors were F. H. Lauck, J. Stanley Giles, Alfred Lunden, Harry Huesman, Frederick Frank, William Kern, J. C. Bauder, Paul Blackman, Jr., John Downing, of Reading; Harry F. Keck, Lee P. Arnold, Ferdinand F. Heck, Jr., Wyomissing; S. J. Johnson, Charles Vorkeller, of South Bethlehem; T. J. Nolan, of Buffalo, representing the King Construction Co.

BEGONIA ALICE MANNING.

The Alice Manning begonia belongs to the tuberous-rooted section and makes a grand basket plant. Kenneth McLean, head gardener for John I. Kane, of Bar Harbor, Me., grows it successfully, as he does many other plants flowering in the Bar Harbor season. By starting tubers in February he has them in full bloom, as shown in the accompanying illustration, early in June, and other tubers started at intervals up to April 1 give a succession of blooms until September. The flowers retain their best effect for more than a month. These begonias are used entirely in hanging baskets on the piazza of the mansion.

The color of Alice Manning is primrose-yellow and the flowers are double. The culture and soil are the same as for achimenes and gloxinias. Mr. McLean grows Golden Sheaves and alba plena of the same type, which do equally well. These begonias should prove valuable for gardeners and florists requiring basket plants for piazza use.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER AGAIN.

A Subject That Will Not Down.

In all trades, professions or walks of life we meet spooks. By spooks I mean questions returning periodically, causing people to use a lot of printers' ink, arousing excitement, making enemies of friends and then often vanishing as mysteriously as they appeared. Many of them, however, after having been voluminously discussed, finally take definite form and emerge from the realm of spooks to become laws, customs or institutions, adopted or sanctioned by society. The national flower spook has appeared in the columns of the horticultural papers and I am prompted to make a few remarks regarding it.

Some of the State Flowers.

There are two factors that may lead to the selection of a state or national flower: Historical events and the desire of the people not to lag behind the rest of the world through not having such a national emblem. Some people may say we ought to wait till some historical event would give us a national flower, but modern people, especially Americans, live so fast that they cannot patiently await such an event.

Let us suppose, therefore, that the desire for an arbitrarily designated national flower is justified. Great care ought to be exercised in adopting one, for we all want our new national flower to be popular among all classes of people. We do not want a national flower that exists on paper only, like so many of the state flowers. Who knows what is the state flower of Oklahoma? The people of Oklahoma do not know. The school children and teachers may know. It is no flower at all. It is a farm plant —alfalfa. This fact would not bar it from the list of successful state flowers. Hasn't Scotland the much despised thistle as a national emblem? But alfalfa will never be really popular in Oklahoma, except among the bottom-land farmers in dry years, when the chinch bugs eat their wheat and the hot winds burn their corn.

The weedy, homely, much fought sunflower is the state flower of Kansas, and a popular one, too. Many people outside of Colorado know that state's flower. It is the lovely columbine.

Three Necessary Qualities.

The unpopularity of alfalfa and the popularity of the two other state flowers mentioned may give us a few hints regarding the selection of a national flower.

Alfalfa blossoms are not strikingly beautiful. I said "strikingly beautiful," for all flowers are beautiful if you look at them with the eyes of a lover of nature. Alfalfa is not a native of Oklahoma and is not even grown everywhere in the state. That is why alfalfa is not a popular state flower.

The reasons for the popularity of the Colorado flower are its beauty and the fact that it is a characteristic flower of the Rocky mountains. No doubt, the tourists also have helped to spread its fame.

The sunflower, on the other hand, is not strikingly beautiful. Many people regard it as an obnoxious weed and all of us have to fight it occasionally. Yet the sunflower has much popularity as a state flower in Kansas, because it is so characteristic of the Kansas plains. You will know why the sunflower is so dear to the heart of many a Kansan, if you ever speed through the southwest, comfortably seated in the cushions of a Pullman or a large touring car, and see the millions of sunflowers along the roads and fences and in the cornfields, where they intrude on the slovenly farmer.

We thus have found three requisites to the popularity of a state flower. It must be beautiful, it must grow in all parts of the territory it represents and it must be characteristic of that territory.

Some Candidates for Favor.

The rhododendron has been proposed as our national flower. I have seen the Alleghenies in June and I shall never forget the glorious sight. Whole mountainsides were covered with rhododendrons and the blooms looked like a lovely pink veil spread lightly over the glossy green of the foliage. But do we want to force the people of Texas, North Dakota and the whole west to accept as their emblem a flower that they do not know? They cannot even grow it in their gardens, on account of the glaring winter sun and the lime in the soil.

The iris has been recommended as our national flower. Few flowers are more beautiful. Several species grow wild in the United States. But the native irises are not characteristic of the country in general, because they love moist haunts. Wide stretches of the country have no native species at all.

The gladiolus has a pull, as they call it in politics. It will never do for our national flower. There is no native species, at least east of the Rocky mountains, and a foreign flower cannot become our national flower. It is the grandest outdoor cut flower we have, but it cannot be used generally as a garden flower, on account of the sparse foliage and the short duration of the individual flowers.

Beautiful, But a Foreigner.

The peony is another aspirant for the honor of being our national flower. It is beautiful, but it is a foreigner and its blooming season is short.

By the way, I do not see why a national flower ought to have a long, stiff stem, so that we can "wave it in triumph," as one writer has suggested. I think the florists will agree with me when I say that most flowers will be worn in a buttonhole or as a corsage bouquet, and few will be waved in triumph.

The goldenrod has been suggested as a national flower. It has better claims than all the flowers mentioned before. It grows almost everywhere in the Begonia Alice Manning in Hanging Basket.

United States and the countryside looks beautiful when it is ablaze with the yellow hue of the goldenrods. But the goldenrod is not so strikingly beautiful as the iris, the gladiolus, the rhododendron or the peony. And, worst of all, goldenrods give many people hay fever.

An Objection to Asters.

But perhaps we can find another flower, possessing the virtues but not the objectionable features of the goldenrod. Asters grow everywhere in the country and most of them are beautiful. One fact is against them; the wild-growing species differ too much and people would hardly regard the fifty or more different species of asters, growing wild in the northeastern United States, as one flower.

Some florists seem to think that our national flower should be a florists' flower or at least a garden flower. Of course, it could be a garden or greenhouse flower, but most likely it will not be. It looks selfish when a florist uses so much rhetoric to push a florists' flower as the national flower. Florists have Mothers' day and many other days on which to sell flowers. They should not go to extremes. But no doubt the voice of florists and gardeners ought to be heard in selecting a national flower for the United States. Paul Winkler.

GERANIUM FOLIAGE AFFECTED.

Can you tell me what is the matter with my geraniums? The leaves seem to be diseased. I am sending some of the leaves under separate cover.

M. C. M.—Mich.

This is not a disease. The leaves have turned red and this may be due either to excessively dry root conditions, or to the fact that they are standing on a layer of coal ashes, or to a deficiency of food in the pots. If they are in need of potting, shift them. Use a little old, well rotted manure and a 4-inch potful of fine bone to each bushel of soil. Maintain a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and a dry atmosphere. If you have coal ashes below the pots, remove them. Proper watering and a little feeding should soon put your plants in good shape.

C. W.

GERANIUMS DISEASED.

I am enclosing two geranium leaves, the stems of which are diseased. The white streak seems to eat the substance out of the stem and cause it to turn yellow and die. We have about 4,000 plants, about half of which are affected, principally of the S. A. Nutt variety.

J. F. L.—Pa.

Leaves affected in this way usually indicate that the plants have been kept crowded in the cutting benches too long and have become more or less debilitated. I would pick off all the leaves with stalks thus affected. Endeavor to get a better growth on the plants by giving them a nice, sunny house, with plenty of fresh air on every favorable occasion and a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. Also, give them a spraying with a good fungicide, such as Bordeaux mixture or Fungine. I doubt if your plants will ever have the vigor of stock which has had proper care in the early stages of growth. Excessive propagation and too long a period in the cutting bench are usually responsible for these and other ailments.

OBITUARY

Gustav Knoch.

Failing to renew his health in Florida, where he had spent six weeks, Gustav Knoch, of Detroit, hanged himself among the flowers in his store, February 27. He had suffered from a nervous breakdown due to overwork.

Besides his widow, five sons and three daughters survive him. Mr. Knoch was born in Detroit fifty-one years ago. He had been in the florists' business more than thirty years, having built up the large establishment on Fort street west by his own efforts.

George F. Kingsley.

George Kingsley, of Wooster, O., died February 14, following an illness from a complication of diseases. Mr. Kingsley was a native of Ashtabula county, O. In early life he learned the trade of a cabinetmaker and followed that occupation for a number of years. About thirty years ago the family located at Wooster and the first Kingsley greenhouse was erected. The business was conducted by the decedent and his wife with success during all these years. Mr. Kingsley was 82 years of age and is survived by his wife, one son, Charles, and a daughter.

Samuel L. Winternitz.

Samuel L. Winternitz was not in the trade, but he was known to nearly every florist, nurseryman or seedsman who ever came in touch, as buyer or seller, with Chicago's auction machinery, for Winternitz conducted most of the forced sales of horticultural goods that have occurred in his city in the last twenty years. He was born in Austria March 6, 1862, and died at Chicago February 23, 1917, a man whose word was good.

B. Terrell Hoyt.

B. T. Hoyt, well known landscape architect and proprietor of the Hoyt Nursery Co., of St. Paul, Minn., died February 12 of nephritis, following an illness of four months' duration. Mr. Hoyt was born at St. Paul, February 11, 1876. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, two sisters and two brothers.

D. R. Mayo.

D. R. Mayo, proprietor of a large seed business at Knoxville, Tenn., passed away February 16, death resulting from a stroke of apoplexy, Mr. Mayo was at his place of business on the morning previous to his death and apparently was in the best of health, but later in the day, while attending to some legal business at a magistrate's, he suddenly fell unconscious to the floor.

Mr. Mayo was born in Monroe county, Ark., September 20, 1854, and removed to Knoxville in 1880. He was first engaged in the grocery business, but later took up the seed business, in which he prospered so well that he soon ranked as one of Knoxville's foremost business men. Although not rated as a good "mixer," the decedent had a host of friends. R. E. M.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., are rapidly bringing into shape the latest addition to their collection of orchids. Just now there is a fine showing of Cattleya Trianæ. I learned from W. J. Vesey that a recent report relative to a range of houses especially built for orchids, was an error; but it is intended to tear down a range of six houses and to build the new houses each 100 feet longer for roses. Ophelia is a perpetual bloomer. Whether grown on own-root or grafted stock, the yield is the same. Shawyer is doing well. Planted six weeks later than usual, the plants are not so strong as they otherwise would be; yet there was a heavy crop at Christmas that sold at $20 per hundred wholesale. Speaking of the loss in holiday shipments of orchids, Mr. Vesey remarked that his concern was doubly unfortunate, as the duplicated shipments also were frozen. The total comprised 6,800 blooms, in addition to sprays. Vandas, phalænopsis and Oncidium splendidum are much sought after as sprays. Carnations are cropping heavily and are in good demand.

"Every hybridizer," observed Theodore Dorner, of the F. Dorner & Sons Co., of La Fayette, Ind., "has some special color as well as character of the plant in view. Father paid less attention to white than any other color, but in White Wonder we have a carnation that stands today without a peer in its class. We are trying out some promising whites, as you will see." There is no dearth in pinks, with Good Cheer and Sensation going strongly. Laddie, the latest introduction, will be a strong favorite. It is a lovely shade of salmon and has a strong clove scent. It is a sure winner. "Look at this bunch of Rosalie," said Mr. Dorner. "Here we have a distinct color, red or pink, according to the light. The richest of all our introductions, Rosalie, cannot but become a general favorite for color, growth and freedom of flowering." From four benches of seedling reds there were selected just four that were considered worthy of further trial. While the carnation may be said to be preëminent at the Dorner establishment, it is interesting to note something highly promising in a seedling rose, Sunburst x Hoosier Beauty, which possesses all the excellent points of the parents. It has the fragrance of a hybrid tea, a long shapely bud, and is a pleasing shade of pink. "We think highly of Mrs. Shawyer," commented Mr. Dorner, "but believe to do it justice it must be grown alone. Killarney is not so particular—you will notice how well the old favorite does here." A house of Violet Princess of Wales was noteworthy, as well as a general assortment of stock grown for the retail trade.

F. B. Smith's Sons, of Danville, Ill., are rushed with funeral work. "It is either a feast or famine," remarked Fred Smith as he was putting the finishing touch to a handsome casket cover. W. M

Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

ALL winter many greenhouse men have been on the ragged edge of having their places freeze up. We hope they do not get an all-summer drought.

THIS will be a great year for the home gardens. Every florist should prepare himself, for there will be many demands for advice, and for seeds and plants.

ADVERTISERS are urged to act promptly in the matter of cutting out offers of stock that is becoming sold out, also to specify in the advertisements as nearly as possible when the stock offered will be ready for shipment.

THE human family is a gay and confident lot. The fact that two experienced florists have made a failure of a certain flower store would not for a moment deter a third, perhaps less experienced, from trying his luck.

THE growth of the trade comes about principally in one or the other of two ways: either an amateur makes a small beginning commercially or an employee sets up for himself, usually in an unpretentious way. There are few instances in which men without experience have entered the field and continued in it any length of time.

THOSE who fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas can not be too careful. Last week a grower visited The Review in search of suggestions for a quick crop to take the place of cucumbers completely ruined by the gas just as they came into bearing. The space was 65x450! In this case the grower laid the loss to chlorine in the gas, but the wholesale druggist's clerk had sold the chemical for potassium cyanide ninety-eight per cent pure.

IN view of the rapid advance in the cost of production and considering the risks involved in this phase of the business, members of the Rochester Florists' Association at last month's meeting went on record as favoring an increase in the rentals of palms and ferns. The average charge, a speaker said, is $4 per dozen plants; it was proposed that the price be raised to $6. If the members follow their resolutions with concerted action in charging the higher rentals, the Rochester body will have set a precedent for other trade organizations in the matter of raising prices through coöperative effort.

LAST week The Review published forty-three for-sale advertisements as against twenty-nine in the corresponding issue of last year. One is inclined to consider the comparison significant, though it is not wise to put too much stress on one week's showing. At first glance—the majority of the ads offered greenhouse establishments for sale—it would seem that many florists are desirous of quitting the business, or, to put it more strongly, many find the business unprofitable. Undoubtedly in most cases the so-called reason is the high cost of doing business, coal, materials, etc. But perhaps in many other cases the advertisers were not sure of their costs—did not base their selling prices on the actual cost prices.

"SEND HER EASTER FLOWERS."

One of the largest advertisers in publications of general circulation is Hart, Schaffner & Marx and to them florists owe a return for the excellent boost given in the current magazines. The ad in the Saturday Evening Post for February 17, for instance, cost about $5,000. It shows a young woman receipting for flowers in a box from "Easter & Co., florists," and the offer to send the H. S. & M. style book begins, "Before you send her Easter flowers," etc.

The suggestion to the Post's "more than two million a week" that it is the proper and conventional thing to send "her" flowers at Easter is worth more than a little to this trade.

THAT $7,000,000,000 RAISE.

A statistician of repute has estimated that the so-called tremendous prosperity of the country has resulted in an addition of seven billion dollars to wages alone during the last year. Now, it has been ascertained that, on receiving a larger compensation for his work, the average wage-earner advances his rate of living; that is, he expends a part or all of his augmented earnings for the better things, including some of the luxuries that formerly were beyond his reach. From this it may be assumed that an appreciable number of the country's workers have, for the time being at least, graduated into the flower-buying class. Perhaps this will act as an incentive to the florist who believes in educating potential buyers to the uses of flowers. This year there are likely to be more converts to retail advertising among florists than ever before, but it is hoped that none of the converts puts all his eggs in one basket.

It seems advisable to point out that the figure given covers the increase in wages only. Many of those who enjoy salaries or general incomes also have been benefited by the prosperous times, but there are no statistics on salaries or incomes, except income tax statistics, and these are admitted to be widely off the mark, not only on account of the great numbers of tax dodgers but also on account of tax exemptions, etc. At any rate, $7,000,000,000—per year, if the war keeps on—is not to be overlooked. The national debt is only a little over a billion and Uncle Sam bought Alaska for a mere $7,200,000!

A GENTLEMEN'S AGREEMENT.

It will be well to turn to the Philadelphia letter in this issue of The Review and read what the growers of Easter and bedding plants in that district have done to recoup the losses occasioned by the high costs of doing business. They feel, as do all other florists, that higher selling prices are necessary, and they have determined to make an advance of about twenty-five per cent all along the line.

Wherever florists do not feel strong enough to advance prices on their individual responsibility, the action of the Philadelphians suggests a means of avoiding a profitless season.

THE READERS' VIEWPOINT.

When the rising cost of paper made it necessary for The Review to increase its subscription price to $1.50 per year, it was done with some hesitation, not because of doubt of the value given, but because of reluctance to change in any matter that had served satisfactorily for years. But the weekly circulation of The Review at the present subscription price of $1.50 per year actually is some 400 copies greater than it ever was while the price was $1. It seems to work like this:

Enclosed find $1.50 for another fifty-two issues of The Review. If you raise the price to $5 I shall have to have The Review just the same.—Frank H. Ford, High Point, N. C., February 19, 1917.

When a publication is so useful to its readers it naturally is equally useful as an advertising medium, so when you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Shipping business last week, stimulated by a funeral demand which was heavy all through the country, was good. In fact, although city trade has at times been far from satisfactory, the out-of-town demand has been uniformly steady for the first two months of this year and no cause for complaint can be found from this source. The Lenten season has made its arrival felt in some degree, especially on city trade, this period being seemingly observed more rigorously in larger cities than in the smaller towns.

A retrospect of business of the month of February is not unsatisfactory. Although, as has already been noted, local trade has at times been lethargic, shipping trade was evenly good and the market cleaned out with regularity each week, with the possible exception of a few items of bulbous stock. Stock generally was scarce and prices held up fairly well to the quoted figures.

American Beauties still are scarce and their quality is at present not good, it being between seasons. Other varieties of roses are in much larger supply this week, but are moving well. Pink Killarney is a little off color with many growers, but on the whole there is no fault to be found with the quality of roses. This is true of the entire season, the weather, on the whole, having been favorable to growers. In fact, it may be said that Russell, Ophelia and Shawyer never were of better quality. Although the preference is given to red, pink and yellow varieties, no difficulty is found in clearing white stock. Prices are easing as the supply increases.

Darker colored varieties of carnations were scarce last week, with Enchantress and white varieties more plentiful. Good grades in all varieties move readily.

Easter lilies are in large supply in one or two houses, in small supply elsewhere. The receipts of callas are ample, but no difficulty is found in clearing them. Orchids, though not in large supply, arrive in sufficient quantities to meet a fairly active demand. Single violets are coming in more heavily and are selling well. Sweet peas are plentiful. Good stock brings fairly high prices, but shorter stock, of which there is much, sells at a nominal figure and bargain sales may be seen at nearly all the department stores. Calendulas are moving slowly, while mignonette, which is in fair supply, enjoys a partial popularity. Paper Whites are almost out, but are readily replaced by poeticus, which finds a ready sale. Good tulips require no great effort to effect their sale, while poorer quality stock is almost inert. Jonquils and daffodils are in heavy supply and the average price has fallen so low many growers of bulbous stock are complaining. Freesias are in short supply, as their season draws to a close. They sell well. Rainbow freesias sell readily. Snapdragons in white, yellow and pink arrive in larger quantities. The quality is good and they sell well. A few forget-me-nots coming in, are easily disposed of.

Plumosus is a scarce article. A little Florida stock is, however, coming through with regularity and a slight increase in the home-grown supply was noted last week.

Club Plans Big Meeting.

The good of the club committee of the Chicago Florists' Club, Geo. Asmus, chairman, has completed arrangements to hold a novelty show and jubilee at the New Morrison hotel, Thursday afternoon and evening, March 8. Special arrangements have been made to entertain members of the trade, and every florist in the vicinity of Chicago is invited.

Growers of novelties and members of the club are especially invited to send exhibits of cut flowers and plants, which will be displayed in the New Morrison hotel parlors, B 5 and B 6. Send all exhibits express prepaid to A. Zech, flower show, care of New Morrison hotel, Chicago. Arrange to have exhibits reach destination Thursday morning, March 8. Guy French has been appointed manager of this show, and will see that all exhibits are displayed to the best advantage. The exhibition will be open from 3:00 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. Arrangements are now being made to invite the public.

The jubilee will be in the form of a chicken dinner, which is announced to take place promptly at 6:30 p. m. on the same floor as the exhibition. Everyone in the trade should attend and bring a guest. Notify F. Lautenschlager, 444 West Erie street, Chicago, immediately how many reservations you wish.

We are right in crop on Roses and are prepared to furnish you in quantity. The quality of our stock was never better. All leading varieties. Our prices are right.

The dinner will be served at $1.50 per person, refreshments and cigars by compliments of the Chicago Florists' Club.

The jubilee is in honor of the Illinois University students, who will attend our meeting and exhibition. Everyone in the trade should meet these young men. They have promised to bring an interesting exhibit from the university greenhouses.

Another Club Organized.

February 18 a new florists' and gardeners' club was organized in Chicago. The membership is limited to the Polish-speaking florists and gardeners residing in the United States.

The purpose of this new organization is to promote social fellowship among its members, encourage higher and better professional education and assist in finding suitable positions for the members.

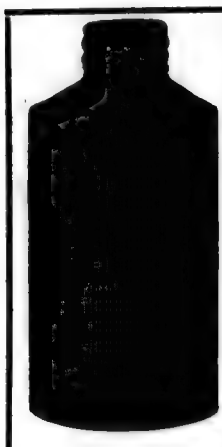
More than twenty members have already joined the club and many more are expected at the next meeting, which will take place March 4, at 3 p. m., at Kosciuszko park field house, located at Diversey and Ayers avenues. Application for membership from florists and gardeners residing outside of Chicago should be addressed to Thomas Skorupa, 2740 North Avers avenue, who will furnish all necessary information.

Thomas Skorupa, superintendent of the Northwest Park District, is the promoter of this new organization and is confident that through it much good can be accomplished for the advancement of the profession and its members.

Various Notes.

A retailer who is positive in his opinions stated to The Review his belief that not more than three downtown retail stores in Chicago have done better than change old dollars for new ones so far this season.

February 23 Samuel Seligman severed his connection with the American Bulb Co. He will visit his home in Philadelphia before making any new business arrangements.



The need for novelty is thoroughly appreciated by George Wienhoeber and one of the ways he is obtaining it this season is by making up baskets of cut week, where, he says, he found business conditions good.

F. A. Parkmire, 1429 Morse avenue, is an enthusiastic booster for St. Valentine's day. He says his sales for that day have increased steadily for the last three years.

A. Henderson says cannas have cleaned up with unusual celerity. He looks for the supply of gladiolus bulbs to prove larger than was expected earlier in the season.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner celebrated their first anniversary in their present quarters March 1. "The change has been an advantageous one in every way," said Miss O. A. Tonner, "January and February this year showing an increase of sixty per cent over the same period last year." The supply business, which was commenced about a year ago under the direction of Miss L. A. Tonner, has also shown excellent progress and she is optimistic for the future.

S. W. Pike, of St. Charles, Ill., was a visitor February 27. He says he does not remember a year in which the demand for young stock of bedding plants has been so strong during February.

J. A. Young, of the Aurora Nurseries, Aurora, Ill., was in the city last week. He is a frequent visitor because his concern is selling large quantities of shrubs here.

BALTIMORE.

Reminiscences, Not News.

The growers will be glad of a rise in temperature; with the temperature hovering around zero and coal scarce and high, it was a problem for the boys to figure overhead expenses. I met my old friend, Rob Halliday, a few days ago, and we had lunch together. He told me that he was obliged to pay $8 per ton for soft coal that cost $4 last August. He also told me that the management of the Sherwood Distilling Co. had to pay this figure for it in train-load lots.

While talking we became reminiscent of the old days when we were both in the greenhouses of our fathers, and, as we compared notes, we both agreed how much better the young fellows have it today than those of—we will say—twenty years ago. Then we had only brick flues and a furnace for a heating plant, and the ashes had to be sifted every day in order that the cinders might be used. During a cold wave in those days it was simply a case of staying up all night in order to keep the frost out.

Nor is it only the grower who has been benefited by modern progress; if anything, I think the retail stores have a little the best of it. In those days there were no wholesale houses. Now in our city we have the Pennock-Meehan Co., the Leo Niessen Co., the Baltimore Cut Flower Co. and the Baltimore Florist & Supply Co., so that, among these four, when an order out of the ordinary comes along, one will have a chance to get what one wants. In those days it was a case of going every morning among the growers and gathering up the stock for the day.

How well the writer of this can remember a stern parent calling him from a good, warm bed before daylight, with "If you don't hurry up, Fritz (Fritz was R. J. Halliday's buyer) will be up to Alex. Scott's ahead of you and you will get nothing." Then, hitching the horse to the wagon, the race was on. First to Scott's, where, if conditions were favorable, you might get two dozen Perle des Jardins roses. In those days Scott's had the best roses. But we cannot stop here; the Isaac Moss place is our next stop, and that is a good two and a half miles. There we might pick up from a half to one dozen callas, and Ike always had good bouvardias. I wonder if he can remember that white abutilon which stood at the end of the house. How that would help out on a design! Take the yellow center out and bend the petals back—but I must be off to Archie Brackenbridge's, for we can always find some miscellaneous stock at Archie's. Then across the country to Register avenue, where our old friend, Eichelberger, will welcome us, to say nothing of Jim Rice, on Abel's place, where we always went for camellias and white azaleas. Then there was Warwick, who grew fancy geraniums. No matter how cold it might be, there was never any frozen stock, for sheet raw cotton was cheap and blankets were plentiful. We were back at the store by half past ten.

If my old friend, Fred Berger, reads this, he will recall some mighty cold mornings along the York road, for Fred in this marathon was a hard one to beat. Nowadays, with the telephone and automobile, if stock cannot be had in Baltimore you can have it from New York and Philadelphia almost as quickly as we in those days could gather it up.

Another big improvement is in decorating. In those days we had to use anything we could get hold of, but now it is no trouble to decorate a room, when one has an abundance of good stock. Two dozen mixed plants of every variety was about the limit, and when you wanted to make a bank of palms to hide an orchestra, or make a background for a bridal party, you had to do some building up. If the boys of today who have auto vans could have seen some of the wagons used for hauling plants on a cold day, with blankets lined about it, they would wonder how we managed to do it. Yet this was laying the foundation for the florists' business as we see it today. Most of the improvements and new methods have been introduced in the last thirty or forty years, so what may we hope for in the same length of time in the future?

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held February 12, at which officers for the coming year were nominated. These will be elected March 12, when a banquet will be held, probably at the Hotel Rennert. J. J. Perry, James Boone and W. J. Johnson were appointed a committee to arrange for the feast, and as these three are men who do not do things halfway, the banquet will be some affair.

Everyone will be glad to hear that

James Glass is recovering from an operation for kidney trouble.

George Cook, of Arlington, Md., had quite a serious accident. The cap blew off his boiler and he was severely scalded, but he is coming around all right.

R. L. Graham made a handsome pall for the Brooke funeral. The bed was made of smilax, with 4,000 violets bedded in it and with festoons of smilax around the edge. The loops were tied with clusters of Sunburst roses.

James Hamilton is having a fine cut of carnations, his Enchantress and Ward being specially fine.

I. H. Moss is sending in good carnations and his yellows are particularly fine.

Everyone will be sorry to hear of Conrad Hess's misfortune. His azalea crop for Easter is a failure, and Conrad always had the finest at this season. They were chilled before he brought them in and the buds fell off.

J. P. Willheim has some fine azaleas that he is finding a ready sale for.

Pere Erdman has sold his range on Montebello avenue, to make way for residences, which are fast pushing out in that direction. But Pete is too young a man to retire, so we all wish him good fortune with his new range, which will be on Taylor avenue.

The supply and demand about balance, with prices firm. Perhaps there will be a break in prices now that Lent is here, yet I am told that in these days Lent does not affect prices much. Tate.

Greenville, Mich.—A beautiful wedding recently took place at the Congregational church, when Miss Lucile Kemp, only daughter of E. A. Kemp, vice-president of the Greenville Floral Co., was united in marriage with Henry James Dotterweich, a member of the faculty of Grinnell College and Conservatory, of Grinnell, Ia., at which place the couple will make their home. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. The church was elaborately decorated with palms, ferns, smilax and cut flowers, the color scheme being green and white. The home also was beautified with smilax, ferns and red carnations. Both decorations were under the supervision of E. G. Mulick, president and general manager of the Greenville Floral Co.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There are lots of flowers coming into town now—so many that prices have fallen. Everything is plentiful except Beauties and asparagus. Beauties are so scarce that they are hard to secure, while asparagus, though procurable, is quite unequal to filling the wants for it. Opinions differ as to the reason for the complete change in market conditions of a week ago, when flowers were so scarce. Some people say that Lent has come; many more say that flowers are coming in much more freely. Probably both are right.

The difference between flowers that are grown in great numbers and those of rarer culture is marked. For instance, Killarney and White Killarney, still the leaders in their colors, are so plentiful that the quantity buyers at times can get them at absurd prices, while the retail stores pay much lower figures for them than they did a week ago. Such roses as Ophelia, on the other hand, bring nearly, often quite, as much as they did in the pre-Lenten season, because there is a good demand for them and a much smaller supply.

Carnations have fallen in price; so have sweet peas, and violets even more so. Most of all the bulbous flowers have suffered. Daffodils, tulips, yellow narcissi, freesias and Paper Whites can be purchased at extremely low prices where a good many of them are wanted. Taken all in all, the market is no worse than usual during the first week of Lent, when values are apt to tumble, soon to become stable on a lower level.

The Plant Growers' Meeting.

Sixty of the leading plant growers of this district met in the Florists' Club's room in Horticultural hall Wednesday evening, February 21, to discuss the question of higher prices on plants for Easter and in the spring. Fifteen more growers signified their intention of standing by their associates' action at this meeting. Fred Hahman presided. For three hours the question of whether a higher price could be asked and obtained for pot plants was discussed, pro and con.

While the sentiment of the meeting from the outset appeared to be in favor of a moderate advance in price, there were objections. No one disputed the fact that labor, coal, pots and many other things made the cost of production greater this season than it had ever been, but some doubted—there always will be some who doubt—whether a proportionate increase in the price of the finished product could be obtained. It is perishable, they urged, and if not sold for what it will bring the stock is lost. It also was urged that it was not possible to compel the growers to stand by the action of the meeting and ask the price agreed upon. One speaker said that he was not going to allow a table of plants to spoil because the buyers would not pay the price asked. To this Chairman Hahman replied by asking whether the speaker would rather sell 100 geraniums at 7 cents each or 70 geraniums at 10 cents each. This argument proved conclusive to many of those present. No one could deny that it was better to do business at a profit than at a loss.

It was proposed to get up an agreement binding all those present to sell their plants at an increase of twenty-five per cent over last year's prices. This was turned down on the ground that the only true way to carry out the plan was for each grower to feel that it was to his interest to do so. The plan as adopted by the meeting is that each grower agrees to ask and to do his best to obtain an advance of twenty-five per cent over last year's prices on all Easter and spring plants. The wholesale price on geraniums in 4-inch pots, for May delivery, is to be $10 per hundred, instead of $7 or $8 per hundred, as formerly. The wholesale price on all small bedding plants that formerly sold at $3 per hundred is to be $4 per hundred. The wholesale price on Easter lilies that formerly sold at $10 per hundred flowers is to be $12 per hundred flowers, and so on, in proportion. One grower told some of his friends in the evening that he had booked an order the day before for a large number of 4-inch geraniums at $100 per thousand from a customer who paid him $75 per thousand last year. The general feeling among the growers regarding the effect of the meeting is that many of the growers will stand by the gentlemen's agreement made, and that those who do so will benefit by it.

The Farmers' Institute Program.

The Farmers' Institute meeting for Philadelphia county, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and Florists' Club of Philadelphia, was held in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, February 28 and March 1.

The afternoon meeting of February 28 commenced with an address of welcome. The lecturers were as follows: "The Dairy Cow and Her Feeding," by A. B. Hess, of Chambersburg, Pa.; "Farm Poultry Production of Winter Eggs," by George L. Gillingham, of Moorestown, N. J.; "Market and Home Gardening," by C. E. Myers, of State College, Pa.; "Grass, the Foundation of Soil Fertility," by J. A. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa.

Question box: "How close can asparagus be planted in a garden where land is valuable?"—assigned to C. E. Myers. "What is the best way to select seed corn?"—assigned to A. B. Hess.

Evening lecturers: "Corn and Alfalfa," by A. B. Hess; "Pork Production, or Breeding and Management of Swine," by George L. Gillingham; "Principles and Practices of Plant Breeding, Illustrated," by C. E. Myers.

Question box: "What have the experiments of level culture in growing potatoes proved?"—assigned to C. E. Myers.

The afternoon of March 1 the lecturers were: "Corn Breeding and Growing," by A. B. Hess; "Potato Culture," by C. E. Myers; "The Silo, or Economical Use of the Corn Plant," by George L. Gillingham; "Marketing Farm Products," by J. A. Herr.

Question box: "Why is it that so few turkeys are raised in eastern Pennsylvania?"—assigned to George L. Gillingham. "Is barnyard manure or commercial fertilizer best for potatoes?"—assigned to C. E. Myers.

The evening of March 1 the lecturers were: "The Farmer of Tomorrow," by A. B. Hess; "The Breeding Up of the Dairy Herd," by George L. Gillingham; "Experiments with Vegetables, Illustrated," by C. E. Myers.

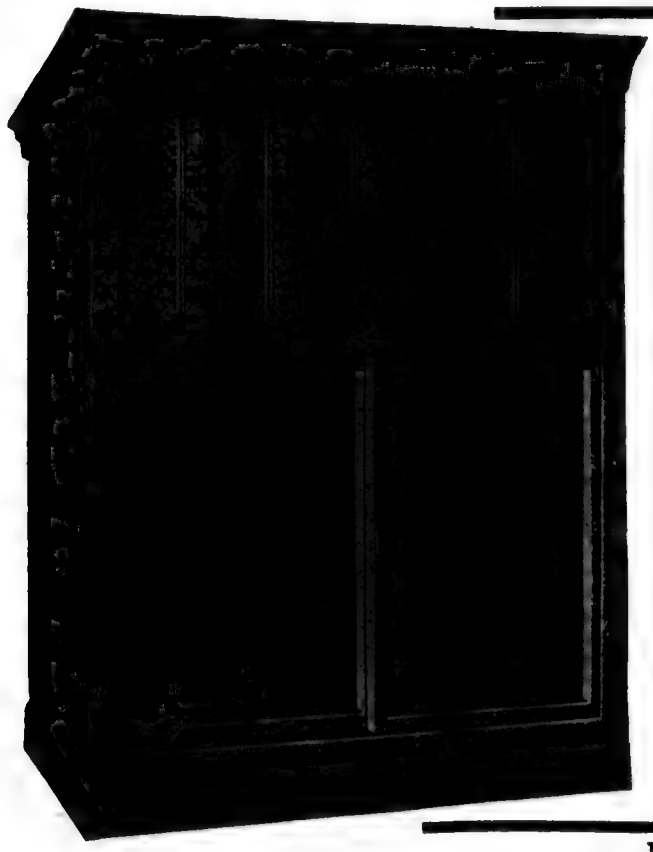
NEW YORK.

The Market.



Lent, large shipments and pleasant, sunny weather are having their anticipated effect on the wholesale cut flower market. The surplus of stock is increasing and prices are slowly but surely declining. It has been a wonderful season, so far as the steadiness of prices is concerned, ever since the Christmas holidays. This is the first serious recession in value. Surely this must have been a profitable season for the growers. The retailers have not complained of the high rates, because the public seemed to understand the situation.

Roses have been especially strong and have virtually held the whole market steady, no serious break having occurred in any line of cut flowers. The present week opened cold and cloudy, so the avalanche of roses may be delayed a little longer.

There were few special American Beauties shipped to the New York market last week. For the best $1 was obtainable. This is an abnormal figure for this date; so few sold at this figure that it can hardly be called a quotation. From 75 cents down would seem a fairer average, the "down" decreasing rapidly below the 50-cent grade. Hadley specials held at the top quotation for this popular variety. The arrivals of all other favorite varieties are larger, and prices of Ophelia, Sunburst, the Killarneys, and the other specialties are falling; $8 to $10 for the best was the price quoted by a leading wholesaler. Some of the short-stemmed blooms were obtainable February 24 at $20 to $25 per thousand.

There was not an excessive supply of high-grade carnations last week. The best easily held at $3 per hundred. The lower-quality stock sold as low as $10 per thousand. The opening sales of carnations this week were from $1 to $3 per hundred.

Few orchids have sold above $5 per dozen, and these because of the scarcity.

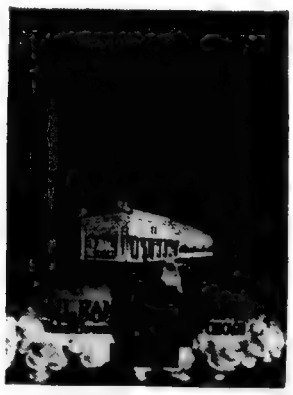
The general top is 35 cents each, except for the selected cattleyas. Gardenias have sold at the same figures as orchids. Just now they are of superior quality. Valley is somewhat higher, up again to $4 per hundred, and even higher for the selected. Lilies of all varieties are lower in price and the supply of them is larger. The quotation for topnotch blooms was $10 per hundred and from that down to $5. Every wholesaler's window February 24 seemed crowded with lilies. Violets are most abundant and the prices for the surplus are low. The street offerings are rapidly increasing. Violets and sweet peas are the street men's stock in trade at present.

Tulips are still unpopular, being too short of stem. Daffodils are so abundant one almost realizes that the southern shipments have begun. Prices for these, freesias and Paper Whites are much lower. Freesia shipments, especially, are greater than the market demands. Callas are again abundant and sweet peas flood the market. Even the Spencers are down to $1.50 per hundred. There is the usual quantity and variety of other seasonable flowers — lilacs, irises, pansies, mignonette, calendulas, daisies and forget-me-nots.

The market is short on Asparagus plumosus. The supply houses are handling immense stocks of wild smilax and ferns, and large advance orders for Easter are already booked.

Various Notes.

Miss Hamburger will continue with the firm as office manager. Mr. Woodrow's entire time will be devoted to landscape work, so rapidly of late has this branch of his business been growing.



March 12 is rose night at the New York Florists' Club. The meeting will be of special interest, as it is only three days before the opening of the spring flower show. Final reports will be made by all the committees. There will be a special entertainment by the house and essay committees. Secretary Young reports over $14,000 worth of trade space sold in the flower show. Many thou-

Chas. Grabig Says

Chicago, Ill., Feb., 1917.

"The refrigerator you recently installed is giving perfect satisfaction. It uses less ice than our old box, and it also keeps and displays the flowers better. I like your storage compartment idea very much."

You, too, may enjoy the satisfaction of convenience, service, beauty and more profits in your refrigerators, tables, or display cases, if backed by the guarantee of our Store Fixture Division.

FOR YOUR PROTECTION, MR. FLORIST,

ACCEPT "SUPERIORA" MAGNOLIA LEAVES ONLY

For they are endorsed by the leading wholesale trade. REFUSE IMITATIONS.

EXTRACTS FROM OUR ENDORSEMENTS

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are the best leaves that we have ever handled, and we have had no complaint from any of our customers who bought these leaves from us. We have stored these leaves under all conditions and found that they will not mould; it is a very satisfactory leaf indeed."

W. Q. Potter Co., successor to the McCallum Co., of Cleveland, O., states: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are of the highest obtainable quality and second to none, such as has never been on the market before, for they are all of a one uniform size, which is the main thing in the making of wreaths. Also your leaves are uniform in color, which gives the finished wreath a rich tone quality, and this gets the results for the florists. Up to now all imitators of your leaves have failed in producing a quality which is worth mentioning. Every wholesale florist who wants to protect his trade should sell only your product. We have found that you have kept up the quality always, and we hope that you will continue to do so. The florists are willing to pay a few cents more per case on your goods, which are really cheaper in comparison with any other brands which are flooding the markets from time to time."

Jos. G. Neidinger Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but find your leaves to be far superior to all others, etc., etc."

The Barteldes Seed Store, of Denver, Colo., writes: "In regard to the quality of the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, we take pleasure in advising that we have found all of these leaves which we received from you to be of an even size and medium length. Both the size and the length being extremely uniform. They have also reached us in pliable condition, and altogether we have been quite well satisfied with them."

The Kervan Co., of New York City, writes: "We have handled your Magnolia leaves for several years and we take pleasure in announcing that our already long list of satisfied customers continues to grow. Since we have handled your leaves we have never had a complaint, but before that there was dissatisfaction."

The Montreal Floral Exchange, Montreal, Canada, writes: "Our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, which is a good recommendation in itself that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf. We appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us."

The Wm. Murphy Co., of Cincinnati, O., writes: "We find your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves the best product of the kind we have ever sold, and we take pleasure in congratulating you on same and recommending them to all in need of a first-class satisfactory leaf."

B. E. & J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Pa., write: "We have always considered your Magnolia Leaves to be a standard for quality, etc."

The Baltimore Wholesale Florist and Supply Co., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "We are confident that any other manufactured Magnolia Leaves could not compete with yours, as other brands have been offered us, which, after we tried them, we refused to carry in stock."

N. F. McCarthy & Co., of Boston, Mass., write: ". . . It is the opinion of McCarthy & Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents."

Jos. Ziska & Sons, of Chicago, Ill., write: "We feel that you are entitled to a compliment on the good quality of your 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves. We have handled these goods for a long time—in fact, we believe that we are one of the first handlers of your goods here in Chicago, and must say that we have as yet to get a return of your merchandise. Even buyers that were always accustomed to buying the foreign brands realize and admit that your leaves are far superior."

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange, Cleveland, O., says: ". . . never as yet have we had a complaint on the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, nor a carton returned."

Smith & Young Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "We will continue to use 'Superiora' exclusively as we consider it superior to any other leaf in the market. Since we handle 'Superiora' we have not had one single complaint, etc., etc."

The Leo Niessen Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "To the best of our knowledge your leaves are of the best quality and as good as we can get in the market."

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, writes: ". . . that we have been sending you orders for 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves for several years should prove that we like your goods . . ."

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., says: "We have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves for the past six years and find in all this time that we have had no complaints but many compliments on these goods., etc., etc."

Jos. E. Koppelman, of Providence, R. I., writes: "We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere, etc., etc."

McAlpine & McDonald, of Boston, Mass., write: "In answer to your letter of January 5th, requesting our endorsement on 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, would say that you might put us down as saying that we have found them a most satisfactory leaf in every respect, our trade being well pleased with them. We also wish to say that our business dealings with the Dr. H. Dux Co. have been the finest ever."

New England Florist Supply Co., of Boston, Mass., writes: "Have found 'Superiora' Magnolias the best leaves on the market. The sales on this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business."

Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Have always found that the 'Superiora' brand gives our customers entire satisfaction; in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years."

Russin & Hanfling, of New York City, write: "In response to your letter of recent date, it gives us great pleasure to state that we have been very much satisfied with the quality of your 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves. We have tried the Magnolias of several other manufacturers, but in consequence we find your leaves to be pre-eminent to all others placed upon the market, particularly with the view that your leaves are all of one uniform color, as well as being pliable and non-moulding."

Henry M. Robinson & Co., of Boston, Mass., write: "We are pleased to state that the quality of your leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale, etc."

Reed & Keller, of New York City, say: ". . . and we beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way. We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory; colors vary and leaves mould quickly, etc."

The Dale Estate, of Brampton, Ont., writes: "We are glad to state that any 'Superiora' leaves that we have had in the past were always as reported and gave satisfaction in our business."

Geo. H. Angermueller, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "It pleases me to say that I have worked up a splendid business on your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, and I credit my success to the fact that the quality of your leaves has always been entirely satisfactory to my customers, etc."

Oscar Leistner, of Chicago, Ill., writes: ". . . As you know, before you gave us the sole agency for the Western country, we were handling a different leaf, but these leaves gave us no end of trouble and our customers were very much disappointed with the quality. Since we have been handling your leaves we find that the complaints from our customers have entirely disappeared, and the trade seems anxious to buy your leaves exclusively. Only today one of our customers told us that he had bought 100 cartons of Magnolias from one of your competitors, but that he has been compelled to return them, as his customers absolutely refused to accept them, due to the fact that the leaves are 'off-color' as well as mouldy, etc."

New York Florists' Supply Co., of New York City, writes: "Since we have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves we have had no complaints about the quality, and can assure you that in our judgment they are fully up to the standard of the best imported."

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "My customers insist on having the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolias, as they claim these are the best, and that they do not dry out or become mouldy, and that every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest, besides being the best."

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Other Magnolia preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods 'just as good as Dux's' at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us, and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business and will not take a chance of losing it; in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as 'Magnolia Kings.'"

L. Baumann & Co., of Chicago, Ill., write: "We regard your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves as being unequaled and certainly would not want to have anything else. Your leaves need no recommendation—they speak for themselves."

sands of trade tickets have been disposed of. During show week the executive board of the S. A. F. will meet; also the National Flower Show committee. The attendance at the New York Florists' Club's annual banquet promises to include the leading horticultural lights of the country. The club's "din-dan" takes place at the Biltmore hotel March 17.

The wedding bouquets for the Taft-Draper wedding in Boston last week were made by Joseph Barnett, decorator for Alexander McConnell. Mr. Barnett had a room on the seventh floor of the Lenox hotel. This was destroyed by fire at 4 a. m. and Mr. Barnett escaped from the burning building in his pajamas—a nerve-racking experience.

A fire at Henry Lustgarten's, at Manhasset, L. I., February 19, destroyed the $50,000 range. Carnations and sweet peas were the specialties. Charles Millang handled Mr. Lustgarten's shipments. The loss is a serious one.

Louis Hanfling, Jr., says the announcement of his engagement should have been delayed until April.

March 31 the florists' chauffeurs' ball takes place at Bryant hall, 723 Sixth avenue. The names of many of the leading wholesalers appear on the list of committees.

February 28 the Greek-American florists' ball was held, at Fifty-eighth street and Third avenue.

Hugo H. Jahn, of Brooklyn, reports a busy season.

Warendorff's new store at Eighty-fifth street and Broadway opens this week, with Victor Warendorff at the helm. It is a beautiful store, filled with attractive novelties and catering to the best trade.

McKenney's, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, the center of New York, have had the decorations for many notable dinners during February.

Frank Millang is back at his headquarters in the Coogan building, much benefited by his two months' vacation in Florida.

ciated with H. E. Froment and D. C. Arnold & Co., now is salesman for the Beechwood Heights Nurseries, at 57 West Twenty-sixth street.

P. B. Rigby, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., has returned from his two months' vacation in Florida looking well.

H. W. Thomas, secretary and treasurer of D. C. Arnold & Co., has purchased Mr. Arnold's interest in the enterprise and will take over the growing end of it. Over 60,000 feet of glass in five greenhouses will be devoted to carnations, snapdragon and sweet peas.

Clarence Slinn has taken over the interest of D. C. Arnold & Co. at 112 West Twenty-eighth street, and will handle the outfit of the glass at Babylon, L. I. Mr. Slinn will retain the selling force of the company, Messrs. Frank Sheehan and George O'Sullivan.

Miss Florence Cadieux has taken over the retail business of Woodrow & Marketos and will trade as the Cadieux Co. Walter F. Kline will be sales manager.

Reed & Keller, manufacturers of florists' supplies, have incorporated with $50,000 authorized capital stock. The officers are W. N. Reed, S. Keller and F. Umhey.

TOLEDO, O.

The Club's Carnation Exhibit.

The meeting of the Toledo Florists' Club held at the Helmer flower store was devoted entirely to carnation exhibits, the intention being to bring the members together and to show them the progress made by noteworthy carnation hybridizers. It is to be regretted that the attendance was not so large as expected, that the novelties shown could not be appreciated by a larger number of growers. However, what the attendance lacked in numbers was balanced by the enthusiasm of those present, and the good seed sown is bound to tell in the future.

The distributors of novelties were asked to show a few flowers of their new introductions. Those requested were most generous in sending good flowers, but, unfortunately, two shipments did not arrive the day of the meeting, that from Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, Ind., of Merry Christmas, and that from A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., of Arawana. But we had the pleasure of examining Thenanthos, by the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago; Radium, by P. J. Olinger, of Newcastle, Ind.; Cornell, by Ira G. Marvin, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Superb, by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill.

The varieties Superb and Thenanthos arrived in splendid condition and were much admired. Superb had stems three feet long and scored ninety-three points. The color is a beautiful salmon pink. The shape and substance of the flower are good in every way and this variety undoubtedly will be heard from later on. Thenanthos had the best red color ever seen here, and stood up well, on long, wiry stems. The flower is extra large, double and has a delicious odor. It was a revelation to see such good qualities combined. It did not, however, score so high as Superb, but received eighty-nine points.

Cornell and Radium arrived in poor shape and could not be judged. What there was of them showed good color, good stem and fair size.

Why Not "Minimum Prices"?

Business has been good with everyone, but as to whether we make more money is a question that cannot be answered. The prices of our products have not advanced in the same ratio as those of other goods. When will the florist realize that he must advance his prices if he wants to cover his expenses and have something left? To a few who have done so it has been just as easy to raise prices as to lower prices in case of oversupply. And here we suggest that The Review take a lead in advocating standard "minimum prices" for standard merchandise. Let each one charge as much above these set prices as he thinks his product is worth. While it is true that the quality of a given plant from different growers varies, the difference in the cost of production may not be much, if each grower figures correctly. Are not azaleas bought in standard sizes and priced so evenly that each grower gets his share of business?

There certainly are men in the trade who are capable of working out a scale of prices which everyone would be glad to approve.

Various Notes.

Toledo news now is centered in coal and its various phases. We are down on the dealers for disregarding their contracts. We have to pay the same fancy prices as all the rest, but seem to be better off than other sections. Anyhow, formerly we could always secure coal in time, without any trouble.

There has been a great agitation regarding the Ohio law which compels us to have licensed firemen for boilers over thirty horsepower. We are now trying to have the law amended to exempt green-

THE INDUSTRIOUS MISSOURIANS.

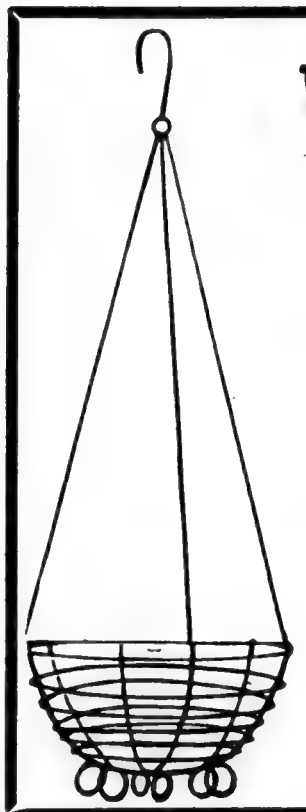
The St. Louis Flower Show Association is now finishing the details for the spring show to be held at St. Louis March 15 to 18. It no doubt will be a huge success.

Manager Jules Bourdet and Secretary W. W. Ohlweiler are two exceedingly busy persons, putting the finishing touches here, or settling some difficult proposition that has loomed up; in fact, there is a continuous buzz evident whenever you get into either's office.

The finances of the St. Louis Flower Show Association are in perfect shape. They are in the hands of W. A. Rowe. It is superfluous to state that things will be properly taken care of; Mr. Rowe's manner of diplomatically evading excessive expenses and at the same time satisfying everyone makes his ability invaluable to the committee.

August H. Hummert must be commended for his work as chairman of the guarantee fund committee. This means hard work from the start, and uphill work. Many talks and pleas must be made, to secure all of the money essential to make a show possible through a guarantee fund; but with a talking wonder like Mr. Hummert, anything is possible.

Alex. Lurie, chairman of the premium committee, reports everything completed on his work. He also should be commended for his invaluable services. The special premiums are still coming in, is the information from George B. Windler, and, seemingly, there will be a lot of specials.



The work of admissions is left in the hands of a man of experience at many past shows, Carl Beyer, who states that there will be many tickets distributed to charity, school children, etc. His task is one that will need his vast experience and good judgment.

The best florists' supply and florists' accessory concerns have rented their exhibit space. W. J. Pilcher, who is chairman of this committee, has done wonderful work in securing the desired class of trade exhibitors and in satisfying the exhibitors to the last detail.

The program committee, under the guidance of Chairman J. J. Winder, reports that the program is completed, with advertising galore, and all clean-cut ads. This committee has seen fit to pass up any kind of ad that would be objectionable to anyone interested in the flower business.

W. S. Wells, chairman of the special exhibits committee, has arranged for a wonderful display of aquariums. Fishes of rare kinds will be displayed, and as an added feature to the other special exhibits, which are usual, this end of the show is assured success.

The decoration of the hall, under the direction of D. S. Geddis, promises to be a creation, the result of unusual artistic ability and hard work. The general scheme of decoration is to reproduce the "Japanese Heno Tea Gardens," similar to the exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904.

flowery "jazzes" for the younger set of St. Louis society.

The question of more retail exhibits is one of great importance. For this reason F. C. Weber, Jr., chairman of the retail exhibits, has been exceptionally busy getting the retail florists interested in making elaborate exhibits. He reports that he has met with great success. There will be more and better retail displays than usual. The retail florists are enthusiastic, says Mr. Weber, and any who fail to be interested to the close of the show will regret their folly later on.

L. P. Jensen, chairman of the private gardens committee, has formulated a plan that has interested all of the private gardeners and will prove successful in enhancing the attractiveness of the show.

W. C. Smith, who is chairman of the exhibition and hall committee, through his untiring efforts has lessened the troubles of the executive committee a great deal. His precision and knowledge are a great aid to the committee.

This exhibition will have many features that will mark it as a unique show. All florists and other interests in close touch with St. Louis at times should be well represented.

We welcome all visitors.

Frank A. Windler,
Publicity Chairman.

COTTON SEED AS FERTILIZER?

I am sending you some sweet peas under separate cover and would like to have you tell me what is the matter with them. Half of the soil in which they are growing is well rotted cotton seed and sand, the other half being fair, sandy loam. They have had plenty of water and are full of buds. The buds start to open and get about as far as those I am sending, when they go to seed without opening any farther. The vines are about ten feet in height and seem to be in good condition. I had flowers from them for about ten days and then they began seeding.

L. G. P.—Tex.

Not having tried decayed cotton seed as a sweet pea fertilizer, I am unable to speak as to its qualities, but I should say that if you used as much of it as you did soil there would be a decided excess of fertilizer. This would cause a strong growth of haulm at the expense of flowers. The soil evidently is lacking in some element when the flowers fail to develop. Cotton seed can hardly be considered as desirable a fertilizer for sweet peas as such animal manures as cow, sheep or horse, when well decayed. Probably more specialists in indoor sweet peas use cow manure than any other food for their plants. A night temperature of 45 degrees before the flowers open and 50 degrees while in bloom, with a rise of 8 to 10 degrees on cloudy days and 15 degrees on sunny days, suits sweet peas in winter. Perhaps growers who have used decayed cotton seed for sweet peas or other flowers can favor The Review with their experiences. C. W.

SAVE THE POTS.

Prior to this year of grace pots have been so plentiful and cheap that they have been treated as of little value. Now it is different, however; pots are scarce, worth saving and careful cleaning, for a dirty pot is not safe for a second using. In England the pot problem and the necessity for economy is even greater than in America and the following note from a British chronicle will be of interest:

"Pot washing ranks today, as it ever has done, among the most menial of a gardener's duties, reserved generally for wet and frosty days, and for the least skillful of the gardening staff. Unloved at any time, it is particularly so in times of frost, unless heated potting shed or convenience in boiler shed exists for the work. For a considerable number of years, however, pot washing by hand has been entirely dispensed with by many growers. It was done just as effectually, and far more cheaply, by the elements. The finishing of crops of chrysanthemums or carnations always released a few thousand pots, and these, freed of soil, were taken direct to the then vacant standing ground and arranged close together. A few weeks thus exposed to the weather wrought a great change, the interiors being usually as clean as if thoroughly scrubbed. Inverting the batch, the exteriors were exposed, with similar cleansing results, frost playing a most important part in freeing them from moss or vegetable accumulations of any kind. In this way thousands of pots were cleansed at practically no cost, and the cleansing was even more thorough and complete than in ordinary washing. In addition, the pots are appreciably hardened by the exposure, while materially sweetened—disinfected if you will—by the action of the frost. In any case it is worthy of general adoption as a time-saver alone. The idea originally came from observing the cleanness of the exposed portions of the pots in the stacks. Doubtless other plant growers were similarly impressed, since for some years now it has been practiced by market growers large and small."

The Market.

The wholesalers had an exceedingly good week, considering that Lent began February 21. The bright weather during the week caused large consignments to come in daily, especially of violets. These constituted a glut and sold as low as $2 per thousand, the extra blooms bringing 35 cents per hundred; as a result thousands were sold to the large flower stores downtown and were disposed of at 10 cents per bunch of twenty-five.

Roses are in large demand, but they continue to be scarce. It seems as though all the rose growers are off crop at the same time. Good blooms of Killarney, Russell, Ward, Sunburst, Ophelia and Beauty sell at sight, at top prices. Carnations have been holding their own, the prices during the latter part of the week dropping to $3 for the choice blooms. For the inferior grades $2 was asked. Of these the supply has been large, but the best have cleaned up almost daily. The Enchantress varieties continue in the majority. In reds some excellent Beacons are seen, and in the dark pinks Ward sells well.

There now are plenty of Easter lilies and callas, which experience a splendid call at $10 per hundred. Some excellent valley was seen last week, and it promises to be in good supply from now on. There is almost a glut of sweet peas and only the choice butterfly blooms have the call and demand any price. The short, common varieties sell slowly at not more than 25 cents per hundred. The fancy, long-stemmed peas make 75 cents to $1.

Bulbous stock is coming in heavily; large quantities of tulips, jonquils, Paper Whites and freesias are seen daily at the various wholesale establishments. In greens asparagus is extremely scarce, both plumosus and Sprengeri; of other greens the supply is good and the demand is large.

Association Meeting.

The meeting of the Retail Florists' Association was held February 19 at the Mission Inn Garden. The attendance was good and a great deal of interest was manifested in the proceedings.

President Young opened the meeting, and after all committees had reported, the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. The balloting resulted in the choice of the following: President, F. H. Weber; vice-president, Theodore Miller; secretary, Marion Uhlschmidt; treasurer, Fred C. Weber, Jr. The new officers, even as the old, are regarded as hustlers.

It was decided by vote to offer $150 in prizes at the spring flower show. A committee was appointed to handle the funds, of which Vincent Gorly was made chairman. A general discussion of St. Valentine's day business took place, and all agreed that business for that day was better than that of any previous year.

Various Notes.

A new pot concern, to be known as the St. Louis Pottery & Mfg. Co., has been formed, with offices and factory in the city. August Vollmer, Jr., head of the company, says that they have many local orders booked and that the force is working full time.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold an important meeting March 8, as this date is only one week before the opening of the spring flower show. The place of the meeting will be decided at a meeting of the officers sometime this week.

William Bouche and M. Metzger are hard at work in the Delmar garden constructing the rustic features in the decorations for the spring flower show. David Geddis, head of the committee, says the decorations will cost $1,000.

George Wagner, manager of the design department at Grimm & Gorly's, is suffering from a large carbuncle, which greatly handicaps him in his work, but he stuck to his post all the week.

A committee headed by Vincent Gorly was successful in securing the assent of Miss Ella Grant Wilson, of Cleveland, to speak here on publicity March 5. Mr. Gorly says that efforts are being made to secure Mission Inn Garden for this meeting, to which all florists in the city and vicinity are invited.

Edward Rodgers, well known in the trade as a wireworker, left February 25 for Casey, Ill., to take a position with the Young Tool Co.

The following is a list of trade exhibitors at the spring flower show, as handed to me by Chairman Pilcher; all have taken rooms adjoining the main hall: Lord & Burnham Co., J. C. Moninger Co., Poehlmann Bros. Co., American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., St. Louis Seed Co., Vaughan's Seed Store, Guy Reburn, American Bulb Co., Knight & Struck Co. and Schloss Bros. Mr. Pilcher says there are a few more to hear from, and that these no doubt will come into the fold this week. This will about use up all available space for the trade's display.

Allen Humason, representing the Raedlein Basket Co., of Chicago, spent a few days here this week showing a nice line of samples at the Jefferson hotel.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold an important meeting at the Eleven Mile House March 7. Secretary Deutschmann says every member should attend, as the spring flower show is only a week off, and the association is much interested in the show's success.

Paddy Patton, of Smith's, had this to say last week: "Here's the only way to beat the high cost of living: The less you sleep, the less you eat. Therefore the best way to beat the game is to stay awake all the time; but it will require time to wean me from that grand old indoor sport." J. J. B.

of life is also, no doubt, hurting in some degree the sale of flowers. Roses are now of superb quality and are coming in much more freely. Hadley is particularly fine and sells at higher prices than any other hybrid tea. Ophelia is good, as is Russell, while Killarneys, Miller, Sunburst, Ward, Hoosier Beauty, Francis Scott Key and Shawyer are at their best. Prices show a weakening, however, especially on White Killarney. Carnations also are lower. A few fancy flowers make $5 or even $6, but the general average now is $2. All stock is of excellent quality. Violets are arriving much more freely, but sell fairly well. English primroses in several colors are quite popular.

Bulbous stock is overabundant and increasingly difficult to clean up at satisfactory prices. With milder weather, snapdragons are coming in a little more freely. In addition to white freesias, a good many of the colored varieties are now seen and are popular at the better stores. Anemones are coming in quite freely. Sweet peas are seen in great abundance and are of splendid quality, $2 per hundred being the highest price obtained for fancy Spencers. Lily of the valley is not of good quality and sells somewhat slowly. Easter lilies sell a little better. Some speciosum lilies are seen, but only in small quantities. Good assortments of miscellaneous flowers now are offered. There is an abundant supply of gardenias. Cattleya Trianæ orchids sell at $5 and $6 per dozen and are in good supply. Pot plant trade is fairly good.

Some Prizes at Future Shows.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has announced a number of special prizes for exhibits from foreign growers of bulbs for the March show in 1918. Gold medals are offered for twenty-five varieties of hyacinths, 100 varieties of narcissi, fifty varieties of single early tulips and 100 varieties of late tulips. The bulbs can be flowered near Boston. Another gold medal is offered for a collection of bulbous and tuberous plants, in competition for American producers of bulbs may enter classes for twelve varieties of hyacinths, thirty varieties of narcissi, twelve varieties of early tulips and twelve varieties of late tulips, with an Appleton gold medal in each class. This, it is hoped, may encourage bulb production in America.

Generous prizes are offered for an iris garden in 1919, a rose garden in 1920, a collection of lilacs in flower in 1921 and a fruit garden in 1922. Full details of all these prizes will appear in the 1918 schedule.

Matchless carnations. He is getting sweet peas of excellent quality, the finest seen here this season. He is also picking quantities of primroses and polyanthus in blue, pale yellow and deep yellow, which prove to be great sellers. Mr. Sim also has fine mignonette and is growing a quantity of auricula.

H. J. Borowski & Sons, of Roslindale, have one of the best kept commercial establishments near Boston. They make a specialty of cyclamens and their plants are of fine quality. They have just purchased a Commerce Service motor truck on which they can carry a double tier of plants for their store trade.

At the Houghton-Gorney store, on Tremont street, some finely flowered plants of Jasminum primulinum make attractive window objects. Anemones, pansies, cornflowers, marguerites, lælias, leptosynes, acacias and other flowers are effectively used in baskets or large bouquets.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, never had finer carnations than this season. His Good Cheer and Pink Sensation are better than a year ago and bring fancy prices. Of his new Benora sport, which is much larger than Benora and deeper in color, he says he will have 2,000 plants next season. He will also have about 1,000 White Benora. Matchless is grown in quantity and looks fine. Champion, Beacon, Rosette, Alice and Pink Delight are other varieties grown. Lady Northcliffe, a beautiful salmon variety, is in splendid crop. White Wonder still is retained as a profitable variety.

Wax Bros. sell quantities of such high-grade carnations as Pink Sensation, Good Cheer, Rosette and Champion. Among roses, Ophelia, Russell and Hadley are leading sellers. They specialize in pansies, violets and English primroses in large bunches and use butterflies more freely in their windows than any other florists here.

McAlpine Bros., Exeter, N. H., are shipping an unusually high grade of roses, including Hadley, Crimson Queen, Ophelia, Sunburst, Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney.

John J. O'Brien, of 82 Beacon street, is one of the local retailers who sells an immense quantity of high-grade plants, having an exclusive Back Bay trade to cater to. There is always something good and original to be seen at his store.

Thomas Roland is cutting some splendid sweet peas from one of his big Revere houses. His roses also are in good crop.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club March 13, Leonard Barron, of New York city, will lecture

Penn had a special window arranged in honor of Washington's birthday, February 22. Plant trade at his store is heavy, Darwin tulips in pans, azaleas, rhododendrons, forced deciduous shrubs, French hydrangeas and cinerarias being the best sellers.

March 3 "Strawberry Culture" will be the subject of a lecture at Horticultural hall by O. M. Taylor, of the New York experiment station, Geneva, N. Y.

Peter Hylen, of Randolph, is a most successful bulb specialist. I noted that his Golden Spurs February 24 had extra large flowers carried on 24-inch stems. Couronne d'Or and Murillo tulips are among his other specialties.

H. R. Comley, of 6 Park street, is showing some nice plants of chorizemas, amaryllis and strelitzias. Carnation Easton Beauty, a new variety originated by Littlefield & Wyman, is popular here.

The question of the threatened prohibition of imports of all nursery stock from abroad was discussed at the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

Local carnation men are already actively at work on plans for the Boston 1918 exhibition of the A. C. S. and will leave no stone unturned to make the 1918 show the finest ever seen in America.

Owing to Washington's birthday falling on the regular bowling night of the local bowling league, no games were played last week.

per barrel and squash at $100 per ton wholesale. Secretary Wheeler, of the state board of agriculture, says he would not be surprised to see Maine seed potatoes sell as high as $20 per barrel, which would mean that many small growers who had planned to grow a few potatoes will plant something else. Meantime thousands of families have stopped buying potatoes for good.

Edward Bingham, of Dedham, has been growing single violets and English primroses with exceptional success. He follows these with Spencer peas, which are now a few inches high.

Business last week was, on the whole, not satisfactory, and was stimulated only slightly by the decorative work incidental to Washington's birthday. Funeral work was light and the vicissitudinal weather had its effect on local trade.

Bulbous flowers arrive in a flood, but they are welcome because of their usefulness in funeral work. The receipts of roses are satisfactory and the good blooms experience a ready sale. In addition to an adequate supply of violets, orchids and roses, a limited number of good fuchsias are offered. There have

Various Notes.

As spring draws near, the Minneapolis Garden Club is clearing its decks for action. With full knowledge of the high prices of vegetables, the club is planning to make a drive on vegetable growing, particularly of potatoes. The public will be encouraged to use more window boxes this spring; each club member will be furnished with one box.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fifth annual convention, Detroit, June 19 to 21, 1917.

THERE is a pure seed bill pending in the Texas legislature.

ONION sets continue to advance in price and are now bringing $5 per bushel in large lots.

CALIFORNIA growers gradually are capturing business. Recent progress in that direction includes radish and tomato.

THIS sums up the market: Clover, active and higher; timothy, steady; alsike, higher; American-grown alfalfa, firm.

THE Swep. Taylor Seed Co., Jackson, Miss., has received an order from the state amounting to over $17,000, for seeds to be used at public institutions.

THE Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., New York, says: "Owing to heavy congestion of freight on all railroads, we advise early forwarding of shipments."

W. F. PITTS, formerly manager of the Luther Burbank Co., which went into bankruptcy, has opened a seed store on Market street, San Francisco, under the name of Pitts Seed & Nursery Co.

THE Smith Seed & Feed Co., Danville, Va., has let contracts for a new building to cost between $15,000 and $20,000, in which the seed and implement departments, now in different locations, will be consolidated.

NEWSPAPERS and civic organizations are bestirring themselves and back yard and vacant lot vegetable gardening is being advocated as never before. It will mean a greatly increased demand on the consignment box seeds.

JOHN J. GARLAND, formerly assistant secretary of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Association, has been engaged by the Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O., to take charge of the trial grounds and seed growing work on its recently acquired farm.

THE Holland-America line recalled the big S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam after it had sailed from Rotterdam last week and the cable reported that a part of the cargo was being transferred to a smaller boat. There were large quantities of gladiolus bulbs on board, one Dutch house having 400 cases, and it is estimated the total quantity may run as high as 7,000,000.

DAILY PRESS NOTES CONDITIONS.

Predictions that crops this year would show a marked increase over the 1916 output, because farmers, tempted by the prevailing high prices for their products, would plant much greater acreages, are not borne out by conditions prevailing in the seed trade, says the New York Journal of Commerce.

Prices of seeds have followed the lead set by vegetables and in most instances are at the highest range on record. Varieties of corn selling a year ago at $3.50 to $4 a bushel are now quoted at $6 to $7 a bushel. For the finer grades the quotations run from $10 to $13.50 a bushel and almost as great advances have been made by the majority of vegetable seeds.

The farmer's inclination to increase

TOMATO SEED FOR YOUR 1917 CROP

You will get an enormous crop of Tomatoes from Bolgiano's Tomato Seed this year. Our Seed was saved from one of the largest crops we have ever had, due to being favored by weather conditions. The vines were loaded with Large, Solid, Red Fruit. We know positively by planting Seed from this "Big Crop" your yield will be much larger than if you had bought seed grown where the weather conditions were not favorable.

Sutton's Seeds

Send for Catalogue Containing Latest Novelties

ONE of the interesting things about our business is, that every so often a man who for years has been buying certain seeds from us, will stop for a season and try some other seeds.

In nine cases out of ten, however, back he comes the next year and buys a larger assortment than ever.

It's like a fellow's going away from home for a time—when he comes back, he appreciates the home as he never did before.

Whether you are one of our stick-tight customers, an entirely new one, or an old one returning to the fold, you will find the 1917 catalogue has the usual number of goodly new things. Things that have been tried and tested as only Sutton's try and test. It's this continual painstaking trying and testing that makes Sutton's seeds dependable.

Our catalogue is so elaborate and expensive to produce, that you will readily appreciate why we make a small charge of 35c for a copy; but this is promptly refunded when your orders amount to $5.00 or more.

his acreage, seedsmen say, will be checked not only by the cost of securing a supply of seed, but by the increased price of farm labor and of fertilizers as well.

In explanation of the rise of seed prices, dealers say that the primary cause is the actual shortage, which in turn is due to several conditions. Instead of holding back the usual proportion of their crops for seed last year, the farmers are said to have been lured by the demand at high prices and to have sold most of the portions that they usually held back for seeding. The embargoes put by most of the European nations on the export of seed have been another contributing factor and the unfavorable weather of 1916 also played a large part in bringing about the present conditions.

"But the predominant cause is actual shortage," said a member of one of the largest seed firms in New York. "There was not one good vegetable seed crop in 1916. Hay and tobacco were the only good crops of the year. These conditions are, of course, reflected in the range of seed prices this year.

"So acute is the shortage in some lines that one firm is sending out to its customers, as its annual souvenir, beans mounted as stickpins.

"As an instance of the growth of the shortage in practically all lines, take our catalogue for 1917. Although this has been out only a short time, it has been necessary to make three revisions in prices so far, and, of course, each revision has been at an advance over the previous one.

"The foreign situation has had a marked influence on conditions too. In previous years most of the spinach seed has come from Holland; but now an embargo has been placed on exports of the seed. In this country the spinach growing center is around Norfolk, Va., and usually at this time of year we have a salesman down there. We have sent none this year, however, for we have not got the stock to sell. If we had, there would be no trouble in disposing of 100,000 pounds at $1 a pound, double last year's quotation.

"The scarcest seeds this year are spinach, beans, peas, sweet corn, potatoes and onions. There is enough of the other general run of varieties to go round, but at much higher prices than normal.

"One result of the scarcity is likely to be seen in higher prices for pickling, as the big firms in that industry have been unable to get seed of the kind of onions they need. The demand for canning industries has been a factor also in keeping prices up.

"Market gardeners have been hit by the shortage of labor, as well as of seed. There will probably be a much reduced crop this year of radishes, beets, onions, lettuce, carrots and parsnips, because the market gardener will be unable to secure the manual labor necessary to raise these products.

"Seed potatoes have been raised in price three times this year and are now selling at $10 a barrel, as compared with $4 to $5 at this time last year.

"There is no likelihood of a reduction in prices until the 1917 supply of seed is received."

THE TEXAS ONIONS.

The U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates has issued a special report on the Texas Bermuda onion crop, showing its average condition before the freeze to have been eighty-seven per cent, and its condition after the cold had passed sixty-nine per cent.

The truck crop specialist of the bureau, who is now making a tour of the onion fields of Texas, reports that the onions in Nueces county are at a standstill on account of the drought, but that no damage was caused by the cold wave of February 1 to February 6. In the lower Rio Grande valley the onions were slightly damaged by the cold wave, but

Burpee's Seeds Grow

New Aster American Beauty

AMERICAN grown Aster seed is now acknowledged to be so vastly superior to European grown seed that there is no reason why European grown seed should be at all considered. Even in the Early Queen of the Market type, American grown seed has been found superior to European. The Royal and Crego types closely follow Queen of the Market, and these are followed by the Late Branching types.

Burpee's New American Beauty Aster is in type of growth and form of flower similar to the Late Branching, but differs in that all the large blossoms are produced on much longer and heavier stems. In some instances stems measure more than two feet in length. It has the longest blooming period of any Aster that we know of. The large double flowers are of a bright carmine-rose, almost identical with the World's Famous American Beauty Rose. Mr. Fred Howard, of Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, Cal., writes March 29, 1916, in reference to American Beauty Aster:

"It is, in my opinion, one of the most remarkable Asters which has come under my notice. The plants attain a height of some four feet and the flowers are borne singly at the ends of stems which attain a length of thirty to thirty-six inches. The most remarkable feature to be noted regarding this Aster is the length of time which it remains in flower. The plants at our nursery came into bloom during the month of July and we were still cutting from them late in September. It is unlikely that they would come into bloom so early under Eastern conditions, but if they come in later I have no doubt the season during which they flower would be equivalent. The stems are absolutely non-lateral branching. The flowers attain an enormous size, owing to the fact that the entire sap flow is diverted to the one terminal bud or flower. The color is a distinct shade of carmine-rose. The addition of new colors to this new type of Asters will, in my opinion, prove to be a strain of great merit."

Burpee's American Beauty Aster is illustrated in color on the front cover of Burpee's Annual for 1917, and now that we have harvested a little more seed than was estimated we have decided to offer it to the Florist trade. This superb Aster should have a place in every Aster field. It will certainly prove its superior merit.

Packet containing 40 seeds, 10 cents; packet of 120 seeds, 25 cents; trade packet, 1000 seeds, $1.25 at Laredo they appear to have suffered considerably more, especially the earlier plantings. The later plantings are not materially hurt. The specialist also states that apparently the thrips have not caused any damage, as most fields appear free from the pest. The pink root seems to be general at Laredo, but the damage will depend on weather conditions at the time the onions begin to bulb. It is estimated that the crop is three weeks later than last year.

Correspondents in Frio county report that onions suffered severely in this district. Due to the fact that no rain accompanied the cold wave, the tops of the onions were cut to the ground and the efforts of the plants to make new tops will be retarded by thrips, which have made their appearance.

In Dimmit county it is estimated by some reporters that about ten per cent of the late plantings were killed by the cold wave and the crop will be set back fifteen days or more. The ravages of the thrips seem to have been checked by the cold wave.

In Zavalla county it is estimated that the crop has been damaged about twenty-five per cent by the cold wave, but it is stated that, on account of weather conditions, no reliable information can be had at this time concerning the damage done.

The prices are "limited to this spring and are subject to change without notice."

State Nursery & Seed Co., Helena, Mont.—An attractive and comprehensive catalogue, consisting of 136 large pages, freely illustrated, and bound in a colored cover of neat design. The stock listed is extensive in all departments, including both greenhouse and hardy plants, and at the beginning is this statement: "Our claim—Everything for the Farm and Garden—will be more than substantiated by a careful perusal of the following pages."

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, N. Y.—"Henderson's Farmers' Manual," containing "a complete list of high-grade farm seeds"; forty pages. Both text and illustrations are, as is usual in the Henderson catalogues, of a distinctive and interesting character. Under the head of "Miscellaneous Agricultural Seeds" are listed cotton, tobacco and a few items for special localities.

Winterson's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill.—"Winterson's Garden Guide," an illustrated catalogue of "Worth-while Quality" seeds, perennials, ornamental trees and shrubs, fruit-bearing stock and miscellaneous requisites. Like many others of this season's catalogues, this one is slightly smaller than last year's, but within the limits of its sixty-four pages it approaches remarkably near completeness as a list of garden requirements.

J. W. Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis.—A special list of aster seeds, with an offer, also, of seeds of Kochia trichophylla. The receipt of "Jung's Seed Annual," a 64-page catalogue, was announced in The Review of February 22.

W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, Ill.—Two catalogues, general and wholesale, both notably neat and artistic and both bearing evidences of careful, systematic arrangement. Both are well illustrated. The general catalogue offers, in its ninety-six pages, most of the ordinary requirements for the garden and farm, such as seeds, bulbs, vegetable plants, perennials, nursery stock, remedies, lawn and garden tools, etc. The forty-eight pages of the wholesale book are almost entirely occupied by lists of flower and vegetable seeds and bulbs, with miscellaneous requisites in the last few pages. In the lists of beans, sweet corn and a few other crops, the condition of the market is strikingly indicated by the frequent occurrence of the words "sold out."

Onarga Nursery Co., Onarga, Ill.—A 16-page wholesale list of nursery stock, vegetable plants, roses, perennials and bulbs, with a special offer of seedlings and other young stock for lining out.

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.—"Livingston's City Garden Catalogue," a 32-page, illustrated list of seeds, vegetable plants and roots, bulbs, cannas, dahlias, tools and supplies. At the beginning are two pages of instructions, under the heads, "Have a Garden—the Best Way to Reduce the High Cost of Living," and "Suggestions for Starting a Back Garden"; at the end is a "vegetable planting table," and the cultural directions in connection with the various classes of stock are more than ordinarily comprehensive.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

While field carnations and a few other cheap items have become more plentiful, the demand for this grade of stock, until about February 20, more than kept up with the demand for the better grades of flowers. Good freesias, daffodils and jonquils have been especially scarce and difficult to obtain. Outdoor roses are still practically out of the market, and there are few Cecile Brunner roses to be had. Indoor roses and carnations have been more plentiful, but there still is a marked scarcity and prices are well maintained.

Violets continue the only cheap corsage flowers, though there is a little valley being offered by the wholesalers. Cornflowers are scarcer than usual at this time of the year; owing to the cold nights they do not open freely. Greens are in large demand and of fairly good quality.

Plants that missed the earlier market now are coming in freely, and it is a good sign that they are moving well. The scarcity of good cut flowers may have something to do with this, but one good effect is to interest the people in plants, which have usually sold freely only at holiday times. A scarcity has developed in the better class of shrubs and fruit-tree branches, there being a large demand for these for decorations.

Various Notes.

S. M. Uyematser, proprietor of the Star Nursery at Montebello, was the victim of a cowardly assault recently while on his way home. Some thugs had placed a Montebello "jitney" sign on a car and Mr. Uyematser and a friend got in. When about halfway out, the highwaymen tore off the sign and robbed Mr. Uyematser of his money, after beating him severely about the face.

Wright's Flower Shop windows are gay with bright red azaleas, which are selling freely, but which would have been a gold mine at Christmas. The name, Christmas Red, does not say much, but the color has Mme. Petrick and other Christmas varieties backed off the boards.

Howard & Smith are sending in splendid stock from the nursery at Montebello, the bulbous items, spring flowers and fruit blossoms making a delightful showing in the big store.

Murata & Co. are doing a large local business in flowering plants and palms; also shipping small and medium-sized stock. The cut flower shipments hold up well.

The store of the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co., on Seventh street, now is most attractive and business is reported good.

J. W. Wolters has had several good decorations of late, and his staff has been on the jump.

George Eischen is more than satisfied with the business in his new store at Venice, and says that things are moving lively at Ocean Park.

In a dispute between brothers, which has caused quite a little talk of late, Bernard Tassano, of the Santa Cruz Evergreen Co., obtained a judgment against Tassano Bros. for money he claimed was due to him.

J. Dieterich has been handling a line of well flowered azaleas, the plants being held over from last year. They were grown at his nursery at Montebello.

The L. A. Floral Co. continues to send out large consignments daily, plant shipments as well as cut flowers being included. Manager Fred Sperry is a true optimist and his personality is writ large at the establishment he controls so well.

George Levai, of El Paso, Tex., hit town this week. He was looking up stock for his increasing business.

Albert Weedall, of Bakersfield, was among the visitors last week. Everyone sympathizes with him and Mrs. Weedall in the continued illness of their daughter.

C. W. Wooden says he is well satisfied with his start at the Abbey Flower Shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Bloy, of Detroit, Mich., are in the city on a vacation. Mr. Bloy says that it will not be long before he pulls his stakes at Detroit and comes to southern California.

THE HOME OF ASTERS

The men who know from experience the value of good aster seed and where to buy it, are not neglecting their opportunity to supply themselves with this stock.

A dollar invested in good seed goes farther toward insuring profitable returns to the planter than anything you can do, and a large majority of our customers have increased their orders over last year so as to supply their increasing demand for good quality asters.

To avoid disappointment, please take notice when ordering that owing to the very unexpected increase in demand, our stock of seed is all sold except a limited quantity of the following varieties and colors:

pour had a tendency to put everyone in good spirits. The precipitation had been below normal for the season, and the rain that swept the state beginning February 18 meant millions of dollars to the farmers with early crops, as it was sufficient to drench the ground in fine shape. Outdoor flowers will be greatly benefited, particularly violets. Social functions have been many and the demand for all sorts of decorations has been large. Stock offerings, with the exception of roses, meet the requirements fairly well. As yet the rose scarcity has not been relieved; if anything, the shortage is even more acute than it was the week previous. There are few roses to be had, whether good, bad or indifferent. American Beauties are a minus quantity. However, the rose situation is expected to improve within the next few days, as some growers have good crops coming on.

Carnations are plentiful and leave nothing to be desired in quality. There is an abundance of good violets. The supply of indoor sweet peas is about all the market can stand. Peas bring $1 per hundred, which is unusually high for this flower in the local market. It is a cheap flower in summer and its cultivation under glass for the winter trade is a new venture, but one which seems to be meeting with success, as it is found that the public will pay the high prices. Some nice Easter lilies appear, and the market could probably absorb a few more. There are no callas, on account of the frost. Orchids and gardenias are on the short side of the market again, and the supply of valley has dropped off. Bulbous stock continues to improve in quality and increase in quantity, although the stems are still rather short. Owing to the recent freeze in the southeast, a good deal of Asparagus plumosus has been shipped from here to the middle west, on new accounts, leaving the local market unusually short.

Various Notes.

A deal has been consummated whereby the flower stand in the Clift hotel, heretofore operated by Miss Murray, will be conducted by the Bellevue Florists—Miss Rothschild and Miss Bertha Cohn—in conjunction with their store in the Bellevue hotel building, just across the street from the Clift hotel. They find that the patronage from the two hotels alone is large. Miss Murray recently opened a store on Geary street, near Larkin street, and is now giving it her full attention, as she found it difficult to divide her time between the two places.

David Lichtenstein was operated upon for appendicitis a few days ago and is reported doing nicely. While he is incapacitated his wife is looking after the business. Mrs. Lichtenstein had just returned from a little trip when her husband was taken ill.

Frank Claverie, for nine years with the American Florist, on Polk street, recently took over the business of the Bianchini Co., at 1457 Polk street. He is satisfied with his new venture, as business to date has been much better than he anticipated.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee shipped many violets for St. Valentine's day and now is enjoying a good shipping business. She has a 15-acre field devoted to violets on her ranch at Colma, and the flowers are now at their best. Mrs. Darbee reports business excellent at her store on Hyde street. She has been featuring fruit blossoms with good success.

Albert O. Stein recently took a little pleasure trip to Stockton and Napa. He was gone three days and greatly enjoyed the respite from business. The force at the Stein establishment has been unusually busy with decorations for receptions, weddings, dinners, etc. Owing to a scarcity of orchids, orders were turned down for corsages for the Mardi Gras February 20. Quantities of fruit blossoms were used at a Palace hotel wedding this week.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has two houses of American Beauties and expects to begin cutting a nice crop soon, according to J. A. Axell. By the time this goes to press, he says, they will probably be bringing in a great many more roses than at present. This concern makes a specialty of Cecile Brunner and is having success with it this season, not only supplying its own shipping demands but also furnishing other shippers with stock. The company has purchased another delivery automobile, the fifth machine for use in the business.

A. Zirkman has been calling on the local trade in the interests of the M. Rice Co., of Philadelphia.

Daniel MacRorie, of MacRorie & McLaren, has returned from a business trip to Los Angeles and other southern points. John McLaren has been touring the southern part of the state on a pleasure trip, accompanied by Mrs. McLaren. The firm handled the decorations for the Mardi Gras, one of the biggest social functions of the season. A special pavilion was constructed for it adjoining the St. Francis hotel, on Post street. The idea of a Russian fort was carried out in detail. The principal feature of the decoration was large triangles made of a solid mat of acacias, outlined with woodwardia ferns. The demand for corsages for the ball was so heavy that the entire supply of orchids, gardenias and valley was exhausted early in the day.

At Lundberg's store, on Polk street, business is reported good in all branches.

The San Francisco Seed Co. is supplying a big demand for fruit trees, especially almonds, and other nursery stock.

Mr. Pitts, of the W. F. Pitts Seed & Nursery Co., reports an active export demand for seeds. His company is now filling an order amounting to several thousand dollars for a general assortment of garden and flower seeds, for shipment to Russia on the next steamer. This is said to be one of the largest export seed orders ever filled here. Mr. Pitts reports a good business with South America. He says the rain is doing wonders for the local nursery business.

Avansino Bros. are cutting about 20,000 daffodils daily at their place at San Leandro. They are disposing of quantities of these flowers at their store on Geary street.

Alphonse J. Nevraumont, manager of the California Seed Co., reports a good demand for all nursery stock, as well as seeds.

T. C. Holmes, manager of the retail store of C. C. Morse & Co., says the

BABY DOLL

The most rapturously and strikingly beautiful little rose ever introduced. The color is absolutely new and startling in its brilliancy—golden yellow, tipped with clear cerise. The little buds and open flowers are elegantly finished and of most perfect form. Habit of the very best, strong and compact; freedom of bloom is remarkable and continuous throughout the entire season. We have given it a fair and thorough trial and have no hesitancy in offering it as the one best selling rose you ever handled. It is a money-maker.

rain has stimulated the demand for both seeds and plants. PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Snowflakes and raindrops alternating and intermingling caused disagreeable weather several days last week, and there was a marked depression in business. The gray weather was a benefit to the extent that it reduced the cut of carnations and retarded the maturing of bulbous stock, which threatened to flood the market. There had been some waste in carnations for a few days, but it is not likely that there will be any unused surplus for some time to come.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Portland Floral Society February 20 it was reported that the state legislature had passed the bill extending the mechanics' lien laws to cover materials or labor furnished by nurserymen or florists. This is a protection much needed by the trade and for several years efforts have been made to have such a bill passed. The legislature also passed a bill permitting the assessment of a tax of fifteen-one-hundredths of a mill to provide a fund for a yearly rose festival. Approximately $40,000 should be available each year, beginning with 1918. The National Educational Society meets here this year about the middle of July, and if an effort is made to stage some sort of floral display at that time the Floral Society expressed a willingness to give its best endeavor to make a success of the display.

W. M. Fleming, of Seattle, and his son were visitors. Mr. Fleming called attention to Puget Sound Homes and Gardens, a monthly publication he is issuing in the interest of school gardens and home beautification. A general discussion of amateur and trade publications for the Pacific northwest ensued.

PALMS PALMS

J. G. Bacher read a prose poem, Walt Mason style, on the rose, from the time the cutting was made to the mature flowering bush, and then following the rose bud to its place in a casket spray. Refreshments and cards were enjoyed after adjournment.

Various Notes.

Carl Starket is still bringing in Maud Dean mums. He does not know exactly how he has caused so late a crop. He intends this season to enlarge his production of asparagus.

H. F. Richards, the carnation grower, has been sick nearly the entire winter. At one time it was feared an operation on a troublesome growth in his mouth would be necessary, but this has been avoided, and he now is somewhat better.

James Forbes, of the Martin & Forbes Co., is proud of a vase of red carnations cut from some plants propagated by William Martin. It is a red variety of Gorgeous, having the same size of bloom and length of stem. Its color is unlike any red grown here. The blooms bring $2 per dozen, and for display purposes they are worth double the price of the smaller reds. Several of the flowers measured fully four inches across. The company's store showed the first Narcissus poeticus blooms last week.

The engagement of Thomas C. Luke, of Max Smith's store, to Miss N. A. Tobey, has been announced. The wedding is set for April 18.

Mrs. James Keeney, of Bend, was here last week.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Business last week was practically the same as that reported for the week previous—everybody busy. Funerals and parties are using up quantities of stock, but there seems to be no limit to either the quantity or quality. Bulbous stock is abundant. Carnations are in adequate supply, but roses continue scarce. Easter lilies and callas are plentiful and good.

Various Notes.

Bernson & Halle are having unusual success with their sweet peas this winter. The quality of their peas has seldom been excelled and rarely equaled. Carnation Aviator has made a hit with them, as well as with their customers. They are doing a good business in rooted cuttings of this variety.

Harry Kipp, who has been associated with the Spokane Florist Co. for the last five years, has severed his connection with the company. He has not announced his future plans, but will, for a while at least, devote his time to his private interests and investments.

A. J. Burt, who, after retiring from business the first of the year, left for an extended trip to California and planned to go to Honolulu, is reported to be still in Los Angeles, his wife having been taken seriously ill. He will remain there, it is reported, until Mrs. Burt is again able to travel. They will return to Spokane. Mr. Burt expects to continue in the landscaping business, which he first established some twelve or fifteen years ago.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Good business is the prevailing note in all the flower stores this week. Flowers continue to be slightly scarce, so that good prices are maintained. There has not been much bulbous stock in the market this week, which has had a tendency to stiffen prices for other flowers. Carnations are moderately plentiful, but there are few left after each day's sales. The dull weather experienced lately does not improve their quality and there are more than the usual number of splits. Roses are scarce and almost entirely from southern points. A number of calla lilies are coming in and are being used for funeral work. Freesias are being used more extensively than formerly and fine-quality flowers are coming in.

A few azaleas are on sale and good-quality plants are being sold at prices hitherto unheard-of. Cyclamens, primulas and cinerarias are plentiful and, with a shortness of tulips, etc., are selling freely. Several important social functions have stimulated business considerably.

Various Notes.

The weather recently has been favorable for outside planting, but nurserymen say there is not much doing so far. As usual, people are slow to realize the requirements of their grounds and things are left till late in the season. One florist said he had sold more bulbs this month than in October. As soon as the flowers are out they come after the bulbs.

A movement is under way to have a central rose show here this year. All the district societies and other organizations are expected to help, so there are good prospects of success.

Portland has received the official sanction of the American Rose Society for an official test garden. This should be of great benefit to all rose growers in the Pacific northwest, and Seattle will benefit with the others. T. W.

Walla Walla, Wash.—The Blossom Floral Co. will erect a large greenhouse here this month.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and Counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

IT is proving an excellent season for the nurserymen of the south.

THE obituary column contains a brief sketch of the life of D. R. Mayo, of Knoxville, Tenn., who died from apoplexy February 16.

B. TERRELL HOYT, proprietor of the Hoyt Nursery Co., of St. Paul, Minn., died February 14, at the age of 41. Mr. Hoyt enjoyed a wide reputation as a landscape architect. The business will be continued by Mrs. Hoyt.

CABLE advices last week stated that after the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-America Line, had sailed with a cargo containing hundreds of cases of nursery stock, the vessel was recalled to Rotterdam and that a portion of the cargo will come forward on a smaller boat.

THE Griffing Bros. Co., which operates one of the largest nurseries in the entire south, will soon be located on a 100-acre tract near Beaumont, Tex., with general headquarters at Beaumont. The Griffing brothers, W. C. and W. D., are located near Port Arthur, Tex., where they have built up a large business in ornamentals. The nursery at Port Arthur will be continued as a branch, as well as the other nurseries operated by the company at Mobile, Ala., Jacksonville and Miami, Fla., and San Benito and Nona, Tex.

CONNECTICUT ASSOCIATION.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association was held at Hotel Garde, Hartford, Conn., February 21. It was a most interesting session. The questions of foreign importations, diseases of plants, etc., were discussed, and much information relative to diseases was obtained through addresses by such able speakers as Dr. W. E. Britton, state entomologist; Dr. G. B. Clinton, state botanist; W. O. Filley, state forester; F. B. Kelley and others.

The election of officers resulted in the choice of the following: President, F. S. Baker, of Cheshire; vice-president, C. F. Brainard, of Thompsonville; secretary, F. L. Thomas, of Meriden, reëlected; treasurer, W. W. Hunt, of Hartford, reelected.

UNSATISFACTORY EVERGREENS.

I have noted some recently published remarks on Cunninghamia lanceolata. I have been well acquainted with this tree for a great number of years, and am also well acquainted with the specimen referred to as growing in a cemetery at Wilmington, Del. This tree, though of considerable size, is not a success and certainly is not much of an ornament. The growths are annually killed back, giving it a struggling-to-exist appearance, so that it is more fit for the rubbish heap than to occupy a space where so many good trees might be an ornament and a success.

I have met with this cunninghamia from near Philadelphia down through the Carolinas and Georgia and into Florida. There is a sample of considerable size across the St. Johns river, opposite Jacksonville, but it shows the same half hardy, cut-back appearance that it shows farther north, just as it does in sections of Georgia. If it will

POLISH PRIVET

The only absolutely hardy privet known. Introduced from Poland Russia over 20 years ago by the Iowa State College.

Now growing in every Northern State in the Union. Tested for hardiness on all the Dominion Experimental Farms in Canada, from Nova Scotia to Vancouver. Mr. Angus Mackey, Inspector of Farms for Western Canada, writes from Indian Head, Sask., that the Polish Privet is quite hardy and doing well. Write for circular giving prices and full description, with testimonials from over 50 prominent Horticulturists and Growers in both the U. S. and Canada.

What's the use of monkeying with Privet that kills back every few winters. Plant the Polish—it never winter-kills, is a fine grower, beautiful dark green foliage throughout the season, nearly evergreen. Propagates readily. Large stock, all grades, low prices.

not succeed in these climates, it is certainly not on account of excessive cold. My experience with it is that it is not worth planting except just as a curiosity or to make one in a collection.

Another tree that is unsatisfactory in this country is Cryptomeria Japonica, though I have had charge of beautiful specimens of it in England, where it makes a fine tree and succeeds admirably. I have a photo of this cryptomeria growing, or rather existing, near Boston, Mass. The tree has probably been planted fifty or sixty years, but is nothing more than a skeleton. I have met with this tree more or less down into central Florida, but have yet to see a specimen of any age or size that could be called respectable. Two or three years ago there was a large specimen of it in South Carolina, the best I have seen in this country, but it was recently broken up so badly by a cyclone that it is now little better than a telegraph pole. I was informed by the owner that he had planted it fifty-five years before it was broken up by the cyclone referred to.

There are some trees of Cryptomeria Japonica in Central park, N. Y., that have been planted some time, but they would look better on the rubbish heap than as examples of what a tree should not be. This tree is being extensively planted around New York. It may retain its shape and color for a year or two, but I never have met with a specimen of any age from Boston to Florida that was worth looking at.

Some time ago a hedge of this tree was referred to by a well known writer as near Philadelphia. This was probably on the estate of former Senator Addicks, in a little village between Philadelphia and Wilmington, Del., the name of which does not occur to me at the moment. I am well acquainted with this hedge and was informed by the gardener who planted it that it was made up of some surplus stock which he himself had propagated and, having more than he wanted, he had planted it out as a hedge to get rid of it. It was

Star Brand Roses

Hardy, Field-grown Climbers

The stars stand for our Star Brand Roses.

Each one of its fine points stands for a point about them. Each one of these points does its own full share to make them the friend-making business-builders they are.

Point 1. True to name. We guarantee every one of them.

Point 2. Quality. In back of which is 50 years of specialization and experience in rose growing.

Point 3. Strong roots. Every plant makes good, strong, vigorous, fibrous roots in our luxuriantly good soil. Good roots make for perfect tops.

Point 4. Healthy. Will thrive practically anywhere. Can stand rigorous winters. Require no coddling. Not a weakling among them.

Point 5. Care in digging and packing. Last, but by no means least, we see to it that you get all of the roots, tops properly trimmed. See to it that the plants are so packed that they will reach you in the same top-notch condition that they leave us.

On these five points our Star Brand Roses are based. Those we list here are among the best of the bunch.

only a few feet in length, and to call it a hedge is certainly going the limit in hedges.

So far as I have seen and known them from Boston to Florida, I have never seen a specimen of either of these varieties of any age that would induce me to plant them except as a curiosity or as one in a collection. There are exceptions to nearly all rules and there may be exceptions in the case of this cryptomeria and cunninghamia, but my experience is they are most unsatisfactory if not a total failure.

H. J. Corfield.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business during the last week has been brisk, and apparently the Lenten season has had little or no effect on flower buying. There has been good decorative work for weddings and counter trade has been brisk. Funeral work has been heavy, especially in large pieces, such as blankets and wreaths. The supply of stock is unusually good, owing to the bright weather and moderated temperature. There is a great variety in cut flowers and blooming plants at present. Bulbous stock predominates. Prices are unusually high. Lilacs are bringing $6 per dozen retail. Tulips, jonquils and Paper White narcissi bring $4 per hundred wholesale; freesias, $3 per hundred, wholesale, and 75 cents per dozen retail. Violets bring $2 and $3 per hundred retail; carnations, $4 and $5 per hundred. Roses are of exceptionally good quality, but the supply, while good, is not large enough to meet the demand. Blooming plants include rhododendrons, azaleas, lilacs, cyclamens, primroses and bulbous stock. The demand for these is excellent.

Various Notes.

The February meeting of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club, which was postponed on account of the boiler explosion at the F. J. Knecht range, was held February 22, at the Knecht greenhouses. There was a large attendance. The constitution of the club was voted on and adopted. The vacancy in the president's chair, caused by Miss Rhoda Doswell's marriage and removal to St. Louis, was filled by ballot, W. J. Vesey, Jr., being elected. Mr. Vesey gave a report of the

Do It Now!

Go over your Rose Houses carefully and estimate the plants you need for replanting this Spring, and place your order. Roses are going to be scarce. The Manetti situation is such that those who get it are fortunate, and the demand is far greater than the limited supply. We have sold over 100,000 grafted Roses in the last two weeks. We have 200,000 more to sell. There is considerable building contemplated. "Changing from Carnations to Roses" is a frequent explanation made when placing an order. If you are short at planting time it will be your fault and not ours. The growing of grafted Roses is an industry in itself. At Cromwell the large quantity of Roses grown for cut flowers makes it possible to get scions that are first-class. We want your Rose Plant order, and we want to be able to say "yes" to your inquiry. Estimate your requirements and write us.

New Red Rose DONALD MacDONALD

A New HAWLMARK Red Rose sent out this year by Alex. Dickson & Sons

We have tested this rose for winter forcing for two years, and with us it produces more red roses during the winter than any rose we have ever grown. It is not a large rose, but has perfectly formed, medium-sized flowers that sell at sight. Color bright orange-carmine; will not turn blue, because the base of the petals is orange. It is not a summer rose, as it has the same substance as Killarney. We build the plants up until November, and from Thanksgiving until May it is a money-maker for the Rose Grower, as no pinching is necessary.

American Carnation Society's convention at Indianapolis. Frank Knecht read an interesting paper on "Rose Culture." A general discussion followed the reading. Mr. Knecht had a good display of Russell, Shawyer, Ophelia, Sunburst and Killarney roses. The next meeting of the club will be held March 14, at the residence of W. J. Vesey, Jr.

Will J. Vesey, Jr., has returned from a business trip to Detroit, Mich.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are having a heavy demand for roses and orchids. Their orchid supply is heavy, but the rose supply, although large, is not equal to the demand.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. have been busy with funeral work. February 19 they got out two large blankets. Miss Hilda Lanternier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lanternier, announced her engagement at a social affair last week. The groom to be is R. J. Brown, a florist employed by A. J. Lanternier & Co. He is a brother of Mrs. Clem Lanternier. The wedding will take place May 1.

Markey Bros. are receiving good bulbous stock from their Hale avenue greenhouses. They report the demand brisk, with funeral work in the lead.

The Doswell Floral Co. is cutting some of the finest single violets seen in this city for some time. Its Ophelia roses and bulbous stock are of extra fine quality. R. F.

The Market.

Spring stock, as expected, is in great abundance, and the retailers are having sales to their hearts' content. The supply of roses is steady, but not excessively large. Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities, as well as carnations. Some extra fine Paper Whites are to be had. The demand for Beauties and long-stemmed Russells is good, but the supply of these is inadequate. Orchids, single violets and valley sell well. Last week saw a large consumption of lilies and roses, as there were several unusually large funerals.

Various Notes.

Hugo Schroeter, Inc., had on display in the window several bundles of scrap paper, suggestive of why the Saturday special could still be sold at $1; namely, the store had a saving grace as regards paper—the high cost of doing business did not affect the price of the special.

One of Frank Holznagle's greenhouses and the stock were damaged to a great extent last week by fire.

Harry E. Saier, of Lansing, was looking the town over last week. F. Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, also was a visitor.

Philip Breitmeyer has returned from Cuba and the east.

Bowling Club's Scores.

The Market.

Last week saw a still greater influx of bulbous stock to the market, including tulips, jonquils, hyacinths and freesias. There are some good Paper Whites in the market. Purple lilac has appeared, the white variety having been here for several weeks. Callas are more plentiful and splendid Easter lilies are offered. Carnations are plentiful.

Various Notes.

August C. Begerow trimmed an appropriate window for Washington's birthday, in which Old Glory, as usual, was the feature.

Henry A. Strobell had his windows filled with cherry bouquet baskets. Baskets with bouquets of large cherries, prettily arranged, have been a Washington birthday feature with Mr. Strobell for several years. R. B. M.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business last week was active, but on the arrival of Lent a change in the market was noticeable. The week opened with good weather and considerable more sunshine than usual, which had a tendency to make stock more plentiful. Many of the smaller concerns which grow some of their own stock were benefited by the weather.

American Beauties, although having eased up somewhat in quantity, are still clinging to the scarce side. Other varieties of roses are more plentiful and their quality is exceptionally good. Easter lilies are more plentiful. Carnations, too, are more abundant, with prices remaining the same. Sweet peas now are extra nice, but limited in quantity. Jonquils, daffodils and tulips are more than plentiful, but a lively demand for them prevails. Violets are much the same. Freesias, snapdragons, Roman hyacinths and calendulas make up the miscellaneous list. Adiantum Croweanum and smilax are sufficient for all present demands.

Various Notes.

A recent visitor to Buffalo was C. J. Ford, with A. Herrmann, of New York.

Last week W. J. Palmer had a heavy run of funeral work, most of it going to Collins, N. Y. Robert Dobbie has been sick for the last two weeks from bronchitis. A. E.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business is better than it has been for some time. Flowers of all kinds are more plentiful and much cheaper. Violets are of good quality and move steadily. Sweet peas are lower-priced and consequently sell better. The quality is still good.

Various Notes.

William H. Davenport says business at his store has been much better this month than that of last month. Mr. Davenport is cutting some fine Murillo tulips, the best to be seen in the city.

William P. Pierce reports a good, steady demand for plants.

Julius, the Florist, reports business good, but with Julius it is always good.

Ernest Chamberlain last week had a most attractive window of bulbous stock.

S. E. Shaw is sending in some uncommonly good sweet peas.

Edward M. Pierce is cutting good calendulas and violets. Mr. Pierce reports a good quantity of funeral work at his store. W. M. P.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has been having mild weather. As a result stock has piled into the wholesale houses in such quantities that it has been impossible to move it. Roses, which have been scarce since the first part of the year, are almost a glut. Daffodils and tulips are in such large supply that it is hard to dispose of them at any price. Violets come in an avalanche and street prices are the best that can be had for them. Carnations and lilies still are short of demand. Sweet peas are plentiful, but sell at reasonable prices. Beauties continue scarce, but no one seems to need them.

Trade continued firm until February 21. Everything took a tumble after that, and no doubt business will be quiet at least for the first ten days of March. After that there usually is more going on, and, with better weather, the street men can work off the surplus.

Various Notes.

The Western Pennsylvania Horticultural Society had an interesting meeting February 20. The members of this young society are enthusiastic. They attend the meetings almost to a man and all try to bring something with them to make the gatherings interesting.

The Florists' Club will meet March 6 at the Fort Pitt hotel. Several interesting stunts are on the program and all members should attend. Clarke.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

Greenhouse Heating.

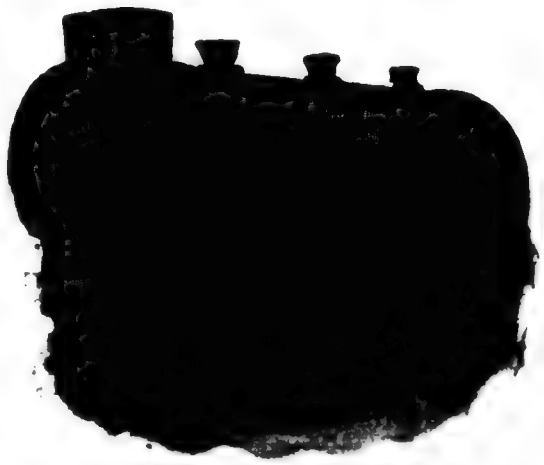
SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

HAS INSTALLED 1¼-INCH PIPES.

I have just installed a hot water heating system in my greenhouse, which is 22x32, six feet high to the gutters and fourteen feet to the ridge. The sides and one end are double boarded. There are three feet of glass in each side wall and in one gable end. The boiler room is at the east end of the house, with a cellar for the boiler. The house is well built, but is exposed to the northwest winds. I have used a 3½-inch pipe to lead from the boiler into the house. The 3½-inch main then branches out into four 2-inch flows, one for each bench. Each flow is connected with four 1¼-inch returns. I wish to heat the house to a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. The boiler is four and one-half feet below the return pipes.

F. O. W.—Ia.

So far as can be determined from the description given, there is no reason why the system will not give a good circulation, although the radiation is not sufficient to give a night temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero outside, except with hard firing or with a system under pressure. As a rule, we prefer to use returns larger than 1¼-inch for hot water, but in a short house, and with the top of the boiler four feet below the returns, they should give satisfactory results, especially when there are only four for each 2-inch flow pipe.



As nearly as we can determine, there are at least 1,200 square feet of glass in the house, for which at least 400 square feet of radiation should be used and 450 square feet would be better, while there are less than 300 square feet in the system. At least twenty-two 1¼-inch returns should be used. We would place a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each plate and one under each purlin, or about halfway from the gutters to the ridge. With each flow pipe we would prefer to use four 2-inch returns, although 1½-inch or even 1¼-inch pipes might be used, with eighteen of the former and twenty to twenty-two of the latter in the house.

Since the piping has already been installed, we would suggest the addition of two 1¼-inch pipes to each coil, making twenty-four in the house. Another suggestion would be to use it as a closed system.

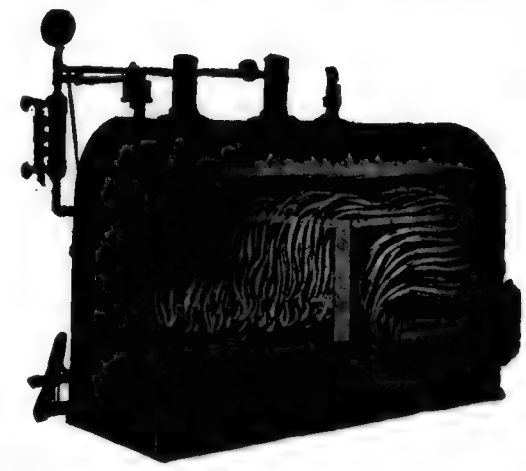
THE KROESCHELL GREEN HOUSE BOILER



BEST OF ALL FOR HOT WATER HEATING

The Kroeschell is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell the highest praise.

13,468,320 sq. ft. of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years.

The Kroeschell is used by hundreds of Florists' Review readers and mighty is their praise. The year of 1916 brought an enormous number of new customers who saw our boilers in operation at other places. greenhouse, the dimensions of which are as follows: It is 16x24 and twelve feet high from ground to ridge. The side walls are six feet high. The upper half of these walls is glass; the lower half is wood, covered with roofing paper. There is a 3-foot bench on each side and there is a 6-foot solid bed in the center. The house runs east and west and is pretty well sheltered. The boiler room is at the east end. I have a Hercules hot water boiler, rated at 900 feet of radiation.

Will the results be satisfactory if I run a 2½-inch flow pipe through the center of the house, branching it off at the west end to the coils under the side benches, which will have six 1½-inch return pipes? Will this piping be sufficient to heat the house to a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees in the coldest weather, when the outside temperature is, say, 6 degrees below zero?

D. W. S.—R. I.

If the proposed system of piping is limited to six lines under each of the side benches, we would not expect it to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather in a greenhouse of the dimensions given, although the number of returns might answer in a house 100 to 150 feet in length, provided a corresponding increase were made in the number of flow pipes. The deficiency lies in the fact that no provision is made for the west end of the house, which has something like seventy-two square feet of glass and fifty square feet of wooden wall, for which about thirty square feet of radiation should be provided.

We would start two coils, each composed of six 1½-inch return pipes, near the middle of the west end of the house,

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Despite the increased cost of living, the demand for flowers continues firm. Last week was an exceptionally good one. As social gayety reaches its height just before the advent of Lent, numerous affairs last week taxed the ingenuity of the florists. There were, as a result, unique decorations and offerings. The death rate continues unusually high, making funeral work the dominant factor of the business done.

Stock in almost all lines is more plentiful, a condition that may be attributed chiefly to the favorable weather. Bulbous stock has been especially abundant; roses and carnations have experienced a slight drop in prices. Good carnations can be obtained at $2.50 and $3, with the extra selects bringing $4 per hundred. More short roses have made their appearance. These bring from $3 to $5, the mediums from $6 to $8 and the long-stemmed fancy stock from $10 to $15. American Beauties are not conspicuous; those to be had are of fine quality.

Of the smaller flowers sweet peas lead in popularity. The prices range from 40 cents to $1.50 per hundred sprays. Freesias are in good demand and of excellent quality. Mignonette at $3 and $4, and cut hyacinths at $5 and $6, are valuable additions to the market. Callas are more plentiful, but clear well at $1 and $1.50, while Easter lilies have not begun to meet requirements.

The question of greens is still a serious one. Smilax, plumosus and Sprengeri are held at a premium, and fern leaves, even of inferior quality, are hard to procure. This scarcity of green goods is especially severe on the florists at this time, when funeral work is in such great demand.

Various Notes.

Frank Hasselman, B. Foehl and John Bender, all of the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co., visited Richmond and Newcastle this week. Everything looked well at both places. One impressive feature was a bed of seedling roses at the E. G. Hill Co. houses.

John Grande, Jr., has purchased a new delivery car.

The veteran fern man known to the trade as "Coxy" has been in the hospital during the last seven weeks, suffering from injuries received in an automobile accident. He has almost recovered.

In this part of the state geranium stock is extremely scarce. Baur & Steinkamp are completely sold out of young stock at the present time. There has been some talk of raising the price of 4-inch geraniums this spring to $10 per hundred wholesale, and $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail.

Charles Hitz has been ill during the last week from the mumps.

Stop that Sluggish Circulation in Your Steam Lines!

A Uniform Temperature

means better flowers—more naturally grown. The Morehead System maintains an even, consistent temperature throughout your growing houses by eliminating sluggish circulation and delivering every drop of the condensation, which is now allowed to clog up your steam lines, directly back to the boiler while it is hot.

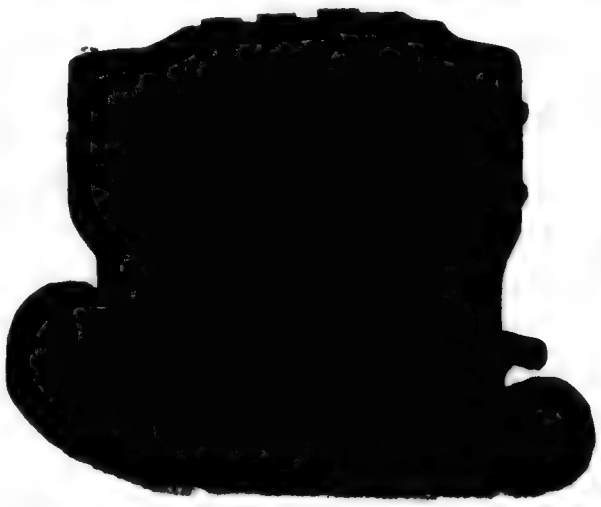
You not only get better flowers, but you also save a large per cent of your fuel.

Write for Back-to-Boiler Book Today

YOU CAN EASILY do it! Hundreds of other florists—sick of the never-ending bother of antiquated steam pumps—have solved the sluggish circulation problem permanently with the

Morehead Back-to-Boiler SYSTEM



Big representative concerns like the Minneapolis Floral Company, the Memphis Floral Company, the Pittsburgh Floral Company, etc., etc., now drain their steam lines and return the pure hot condensation immediately to the boilers as feed water with the Morehead System.

Quickly and easily attached to your present apparatus, the Morehead System gives you absolute control of the temperature in every foot of your houses—and soon pays for itself in the saving of fuel.

Tell us about your present heating troubles—our engineers will give you expert information on exactly what you may expect the Morehead System to do for you—and send you a book which covers the greenhouse steam plant situation thoroughly.

Sunlight Sash for Bedding Plants

Its successful use by hundreds of florists has proved that Sunlight Double Glass Sash gives far better service than single glass, and at half the operating cost.

Plants have all the light all the time, growing faster, stronger and healthier. No possibility of sudden chilling at night and no expensive mats and shutters to move and remove.

SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH for Hot-beds and Cold-frames

THE STANDARD

Scientific and practical endorsement by leading florists and gardeners have made Sunlight Double Glass Sash the standard.

Sunlight quality is also maintained in the complete line of single glass which we carry in stock—prompt shipment.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

the florists' business in this city. It is one of the latest models of the National Cash Register Co., operated by electricity.

On account of the primary election at Indianapolis March 6, the meeting of the State Florists' Association, at La Fayette, has been postponed to March 7. A special car will leave the terminal station at 8:15 a. m. A topic up for discussion will be "Get Higher Prices." Come, and be prepared with good arguments.

The new firm of Janisch & Weiss, or the Broad Ripple Floral Co., has established a branch in the City Hall Pharmacy and another in the Moninger drug store at Broad Ripple. This company has purchased a new delivery car.

Lennis Elder, Alfred Pettit and Henry Rodenbeck paid a visit to Newcastle and Knightstown last week. They report things looking well at the latter place; the roses were off crop at Newcastle. The carnation crop, however, was in excellent condition, and some extraordinary stock was seen at the P. J. Olinger establishment. Mr. Olinger's new red carnation, Radium, was well spoken of and bids fair to be one of the best of the commercial red varieties.

The Market.

Since the middle of last week stock of all kinds has become plentiful. Prices have dropped to a point at which the retailers can realize substantial profits, if they are busy at all. Roses of all varieties, including American Beauties, are in good supply; the same now is true of carnations. Easter lily receipts are large enough to take care of immediate demands. Sweet pea consignments are extremely heavy and these flowers are beginning to be a glut. Excellent daffodils, jonquils, hyacinths and tulips may be had. Single violets are in heavy supply. Other offerings include valley, orchids, callas, rubrum lilies and snapdragons.

Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are exceedingly scarce, the light but fairly steady supply going quickly.

Various Notes.

During the recent scarcity of flowers the Hoffmeister Floral Co. sent many excellent Easter and rubrum lilies to C. E. Critchell.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger went to the Olinger greenhouses at Newcastle, Ind., February 26.

A horse and delivery wagon owned by Imholte Bros. were stolen February 25.

The growers supplying the William Murphy Co. with sweet peas have been in full crop during the last week.

Among recent visitors were William Gardner, of Richmond, Ind.; George A. Lampert, of Xenia, O.; A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago; H. Junge, of the Smith & Young Co., Indianapolis.

The Market.

The supply of cut flowers was greatly increased all along the line last week, bulbous stock coming to the front in great quantities. There has been a good demand for everything, so that a general clean-up occurs each day. Roses and carnations continue good and sweet peas are steadily increasing in supply. Plants are selling well, the bulbous kinds being most in evidence.

Various Notes.

The greenhouses of the Lapham Floral Co., at Pawtucket, were broken into one night last week. A large palm was carried off.

William B. Hazard is on the job again after a severe attack of the grip.

It is understood that an effort is to be made to recruit members for the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, so as to include in its membership all eligibles throughout the state. The club has an interesting and creditable history, dating back to about 1890.

Herman G. Dolbeck, designer for Vose's, of Woonsocket, was in New York last week in the interests of the firm.

Mark A. Cassidy & Co. have removed from the Strand building, Washington street, this city, to 78 Dorrance street. The new quarters are larger and more centrally located. W. H. M.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

There has been a marked change in the weather during the last two weeks, and from all indications the worst part of winter is over. This sounds rather well after one of the severest winters of a number of years, and the florist in particular is glad, especially if he is one of those who did not have their winter's supply of coal put in last summer, and who have been paying a double price for it, with no assurance that they would be supplied with all they needed.

Business during the last two weeks has been good; in fact, trade has been so good and stock has been so scarce that there has been a continuous struggle for stock enough to fill orders. There seems to be a scarcity of stock throughout the country, as it has been almost impossible at times to buy from other markets. However, if the weather continues bright and clear, stock will become more plentiful.

Various Notes.

The sudden death of D. R. Mayo, which occurred February 16, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

Among last week's visitors were S. Nelson, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, and W. E. Harris, representing Wertheimer Bros., of New York.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Two Good Days.

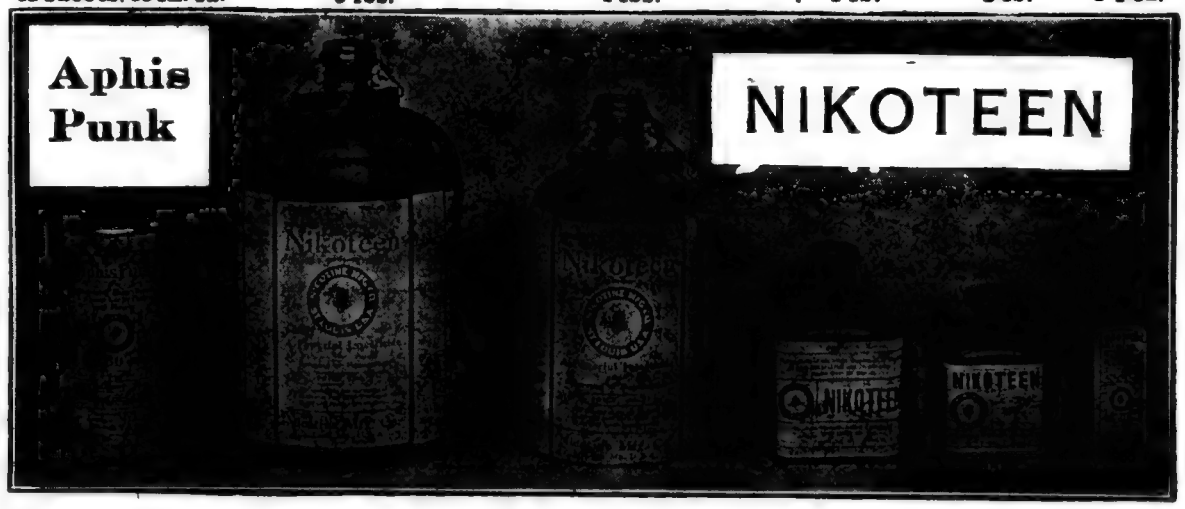
Although this report is somewhat belated, it should be recorded that the St. Valentine's day business this year was exceptionally good—greatly in excess of that of last year. The advertising for the day was spasmodic and lacked directness. If all the florists would get together in this advertising of special days we certainly would reap the profits of concerted effort. Stock was plentiful and many novel arrangements, baskets and corsages were on display. Sweet peas, violets and roses were most in demand.

Another day of some importance was the special "Dollar day," arranged by the city merchants for the benefit of out-of-town visitors to the automobile show. Many of the downtown florists did well with their dollar specials.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith had an exceptionally pretty window for Washington's birthday.

Arthur F. Crabb was busily employed three days, February 16 to 19, putting up the decorations for the auto show. Large arches of lattice, 100 in number, which set off the different booths, were embellished with southern smilax and wistaria blooms. A. F. C.



MILWAUKEE.

There has been little change in market conditions during the last week. Stock is plentiful, but there is no surplus. Prices are holding up nicely and, taken as a whole, business conditions have been satisfactory. The weather has been milder and this has given an added stimulus to business. St. Valentine's day trade was exceptionally good and the retailers, as well as wholesalers and growers, are well satisfied. The collective advertising that appeared in the local newspapers a few days before St. Valentine's day is undoubtedly responsible for the increase in business and it is probable that this sort of advertising will be done regularly.

Violets and sweet peas had a good sale last week and the quality of the stock was good. Carnations sold readily and, while some large lots were moved in order to keep the supply down, none was disposed of cheaply enough to be called bargain stock.

The demand for roses was exceptionally good and, while the cut was quite large, some difficulty was experienced in taking care of orders on the shorter grades. If the last two weeks can be taken as a forecast, the spring season will see a healthy increase in business over that of last year. H. J. S.

ROCHELLE PAPER POTS AND BANDS

Our Square Paper Pots are the Original Improved DOUBLE Bottom Square Paper Pots that we have sold for FIVE YEARS.

They are by far the BEST POT on the market today.

They are made with one tack. No glue.

By ACTUAL TEST they can be made up MORE THAN TWICE AS FAST as a stamped out pot can be folded, assembled and "locked."

They are made of the same new, tough paper that has made our Square Paper Pots and Square Dirt Bands FAMOUS, after FIVE YEARS' TEST by the U. S. Government, the Canadian Government, International Expositions, large numbers of State Agricultural Experiment Stations, City Parks, Public Institutions and many thousands of Superintendents, Florists and Truckers in all parts of the country and Canada.

"Enclosed please find a postoffice money order, for which please send us 10,000 3-in. Square Paper Pots by freight to Yantic, Conn." Avery Bros., Norwich Town, Conn.

(Avery Bros. got 5000 of our 3-in. Pots in 1913, 5000 in 1914, 7000 in 1915, 10,000 in 1916 and 10,000 this year. They know the merits of our Pots.)

"Kindly send us by express 20,000 Paper Pots, size 3-in., for which I inclose check." George Foulsham, Supt., Lenox, Mass.

(Mr. Foulsham orders our Paper Pots regularly every year and says "We grow sweet peas and all our annuals in them.")

"Send by freight 5000 3-in. Square Paper Pots, 8000 4-in. Square Paper Pots." G. E. Hunt, Florist, Rutland, Vt.

(Mr. Hunt orders our Paper Pots each year and knows they are the best there are.)

CREASED DIRT BANDS

1—Should a Dirt Band be CREASED and the ENDS held together until it is set in place? Yes. OUR DIRT BANDS ARE CREASED and the ENDS HELD TOGETHER.

NOT "LOCKED"

2—Should the ends of Dirt Bands be "LOCKED?" NO. Because "locking" does not serve any purpose and is a serious detriment.

If the ends are "LOCKED" the band has to be TORN OFF when the plant is taken out.

After the bands are filled and watered the soil settles tight against the insides and they cannot be unlocked.

TEARING the ends of the bands apart will break many of the "balls" or cubes of soil.

Get a "locked" band, lock it and try tearing it apart.

Ours are made to SLIP APART easily, without tearing, to let the plant out.

Our bands are made of the same special, tough paper that has been PROVED 5 YEARS to be perfect for the purpose.

They are the BEST Band on the market, but also the CHEAPEST.

Mr. H. B. Weaver of Bird-in-Hand, Pa., grows Carnations, Mignonettes, Sweet Peas and other cut flowers. He says of our Dirt Bands: "I believe any one using these bands will become a regular customer."

(He got 5000 Dirt Bands in 1913, 60,000 in 1914, 70,000 in 1915, 50,000 in 1916 and has just ordered 60,000 for 1917.)

Mr. J. M. Gager, Willimantic, Conn., says: "The crop from the plants raised in your Dirt Bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS."

(Mr. Gager has just ordered 10,000 4-in. bands for this year.)

Mr. Herbert W. Coulter, Avon, Mass., says: "I am so well pleased with the Dirt Bands that I DO NOT SEE HOW A MARKET GARDENER CAN AFFORD TO GROW PLANTS WITHOUT THEM."

To show the wide use of our Pots and Bands by Government, State, City and Public Institutions we might say that while we are writing this advertisement (Feb. 17th) one mail, just opened, brought us orders from South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station, Brookings, S. D. (They got 10,000 of our Paper Pots last year and expect to use 20,000 this year) and Board of Regents of Normal Schools, Whitewater, Wis., and inquiries for prices from New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University and University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

We have probably sold 5 times as many of our Square Paper Pots and Dirt Bands as all other firms put together.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

There has been little let-up in business conditions during the last week. Most of the stores continue busy, but a quieter time is expected to start within the next few days. However, funeral work is just as much in demand as it has been for some time, and a great quantity is turned out daily. There seems to be a lack of design work, the majority of this work being baskets and sprays. The growers say that the prospects for Easter trade are exceptionally good, with an abundant supply of blooming plants. Bulbous stock is plentiful. The demand is fairly heavy and the supply clears easily. Saturday specials are being run on violets, tulips and jonquils, and this helps to clean up the market. The daily out-of-town shipments arrive in better condition, owing to the milder weather.

Roses are plentiful, with a heavy supply of the longer grade. The supply of the shorter grade, for which the demand is much larger, is quite small and limited. Excellent Killarney, White Killarney, Sunburst and Ward roses, with a fair supply of Montrose and Milady, meet all demands for the better grade of roses. Carnations are of splendid quality and arrive in good shipments, with a slight shortage in the whites. Reds are somewhat poor, with no great demand. The market is well stocked with jonquils, which are of fine quality. Tulips and poeticus, with a fair quality of Paper Whites, are cleared nicely. Violets are moving faster this week. The quality is still good. Orchids are in the market again and sell well. The supply of gardenias is meeting all demands. There is a larger call for sweet peas and good shipments arrive. Cut lilacs sell well. The supply of Easter lilies is rather slim at present. The scarcity of asparagus continues to be a big drawback to business.

The postage alone

(If 2-cent stamps were used)

Would Cost $250.00

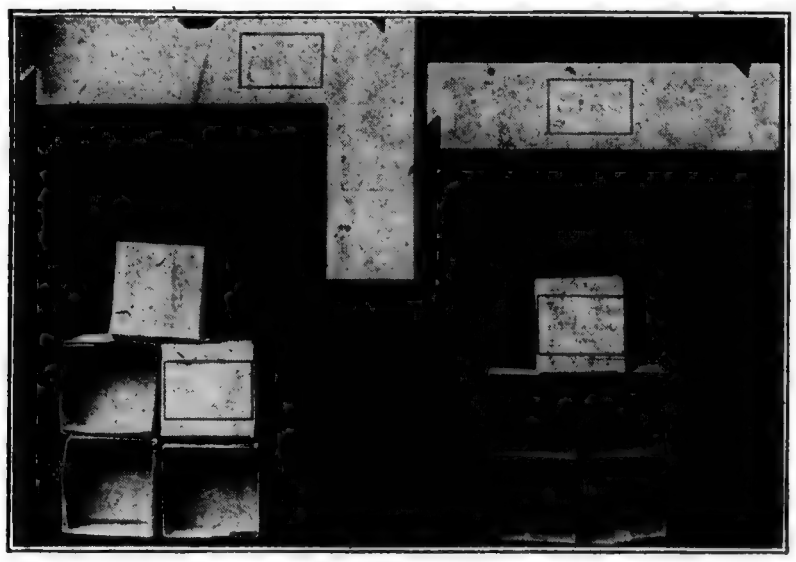
If you attempted to send to every reader of The Review even a simple circular advertising your business.

The circular itself, the paper (it has increased 125 to 150% in price since the war), printing, envelopes, addressing, etc., would more than double the cost. And even at that, you would be forcing your proposition upon the attention of the people to whom you sent it.

On the Other Hand

No one who buys The Review is forced to do so. He reads it from choice.

Your business announcements stated in The Review come to the attention of the buyers you seek in a manner and at a time that is psychologically correct.



You can print in The Review a half page, each issue, for a whole year, for what one circular would cost if you attempted to reach the entire circulation of The Review just once.

The Comparison is Startling

The one distribution of 12,500 circulars would cost approximately $650.00—one "flash in the pan," then silence.

A half page in The Review would cost only $702.00 for a whole year; it would be seen, read and remembered, if not this week, then next week for 52 issues—650,000 copies.

Every modern business man knows the cumulative value of continuous effort.

Save Your Temper

If you will use our newly patented square paper locking pots and bands, you will save a lot of things, including time, money and temper.

The Ramsburg Locking Pot

is not a mere paper strip, nor is it made of soft chip board that sucks the moisture up and throws it off in the air, as a lamp wick draws oil; but both our dirt bands and pots are made of first quality manila board, with a hard, coated surface that is 100 per cent efficient.

Send a postal for samples and prices of the best pot made and save time, money and temper. Our bands and pots are quickly set up by a simple twist of the wrist—no tacks, no hammer, no glue required. Testimonials by the dozen if you care to read them.

ROCHESTER NOTES.

Hotel Seneca February 21 for dinner. The committee included George T. Boucher, W. L. Keller, A. H. Salter and E. P. Wilson. Charles Felton, who was in the city on that day, and who has a large florists' business in Buffalo, was entertained by the committee at dinner. Mr. Felton told of the things the newly organized retail club was doing in Buffalo, and of the remarkable results for good developing therefrom. The standardizing of prices is the best thing that ever happened in Buffalo, he said. The committee decided to raise the price of rented palms to $6 per dozen for the first evening, and a proportionate amount for each day following.

George Harding, of Barnard, is growing fine cinerarias. His carnations are coming along in good shape and his daily cuttings are increasing.

Washington's birthday was observed by many people here and a good trade was done by the florists, all of whom had plants trimmed in the national colors. There were baskets and colonial bouquets for the occasion. Most of the windows were decorated for the day with photographs and flags.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Armbrust visited friends in Buffalo for the week end.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, is cutting some excellent Spencer sweet peas, for which he finds a ready sale. His bulbous stock is in prime condition, with a good-sized batch coming along for the Easter trade. H. J. H.

White Marsh, Md.—R. Vincent, Jr., comments on the severity of the weather, which caused his firm to suspend all shipping for several days, a thing which rarely occurs here.

Webb City, Mo.—William Hudspeth has resigned his position as foreman for J. E. Meinhart and accepted a similar one with B. F. Siebrecht, of Aberdeen, S. D. The change was made on account of Mrs. Hudspeth's failing health, South Dakota's more bracing climate having been recommended by the doctor.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The weather has moderated slightly and the coal situation has become less acute. There have been more frozen shipments of flowers this winter than in any previous season in this province, and the statement seems to apply generally throughout the Dominion. The man who can invent a light, frost-proof box to carry long-distance shipments, would soon be on good terms with the larger growers.

The outlook for the future is not altogether bright for those who have to enter into new contracts for coal for next season, and profits must be counted out for this year for the grower, if we mistake not. There are one or two firms outside Toronto who at this time of the year seem to go out of their way to demonstrate that they are not in the greenhouse business for profit; that it is rather a matter of sentiment which persuades them to buy daffodil bulbs at $1 per hundred, prepare the soil for them, give them retarding room for weeks and then force them under glass, only to dump them on a Saturday market for exactly the same money. As the old song says, "It's very funny, but it's true," although in these days, when the idea of thriftiness should appeal to everyone, the scheme does not seem to do credit to one's business perspicacity.

The year's test with women and girls in the greenhouses has proved that the new workers are capable of a great deal more than was thought possible when they were first called upon to assist. They now form more than twenty-five per cent of the staff and are all getting rich quickly, God bless 'em!

Sweet peas are arriving in splendid shape just now, and are far better in quality than they have been during the last five or six years. Violets also are a great success this season.

AFTER

WINGFOOT

Putting the Water On the Flowers

Were you spraying the carnations this morning?

Down the long aisle you pulled and tugged and strained, the poor hose twisting and flopping and kinking after you.

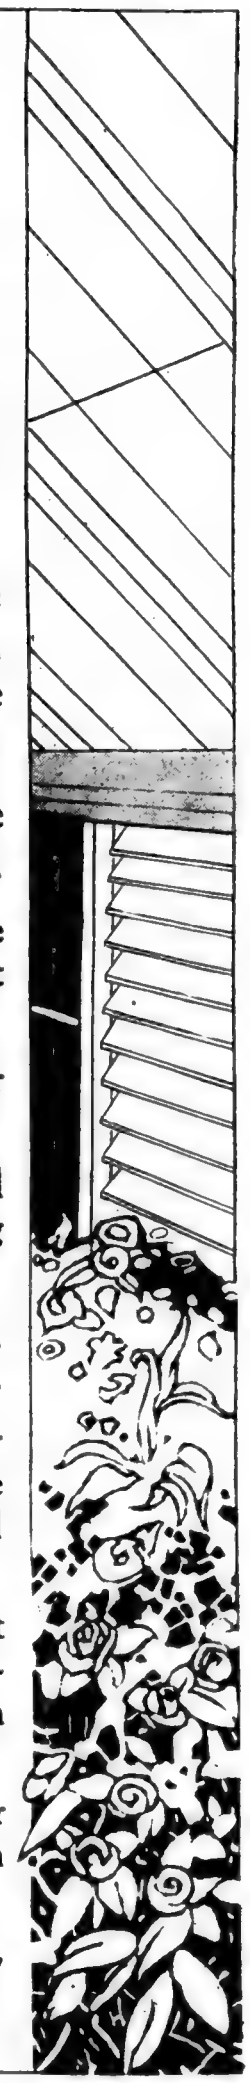
And when you had untangled the snarls and straightened the kinks, only a measly dribble greeted the drooping plants and flowers.

Cracks and breaks in the hose were stealing the water from them.

You can rid yourself of such annoyance by simply installing Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose in all of your greenhouses.

Then does your morning sprinkle or washout become a pleasant duty.

Then do cinder and concrete walks and obstructing bench legs offer no damaging resistance to hose so well made.



Goodyear Wingfoot Hose is, in fact, amply fortified against greenhouse abuse.

The seamless tube is of active rubber and braided cotton that will not become hard and brittle, yet does not soften and "mash."

So well made is Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose that every foot of it is guaranteed not to burst within two whole lawn hose seasons.

Ask your own supply dealer for further facts concerning Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose service.

HOW TO FORCE RHUBARB.

Please tell me how to force rhubarb under the benches or in a cool house.
H. E. H.—W. Va.

Rhubarb will start too slowly in a cool house. It should be boxed in so that it will be in complete darkness, or as near that condition as possible. The stalks will then have a good red color. At this season rhubarb needs a warm greenhouse. If you do not have such a house, perhaps you have a warm cellar in which you can start the plants and from which light can be more easily excluded. Pack some soil about the roots, soak them well with water and moisten the soil as needed. Do not wet the stalks as they are growing, or rot may set in, especially where they are kept closely and in darkness. The warmer and darker the roots can be kept, the more quickly they will start. C. W.

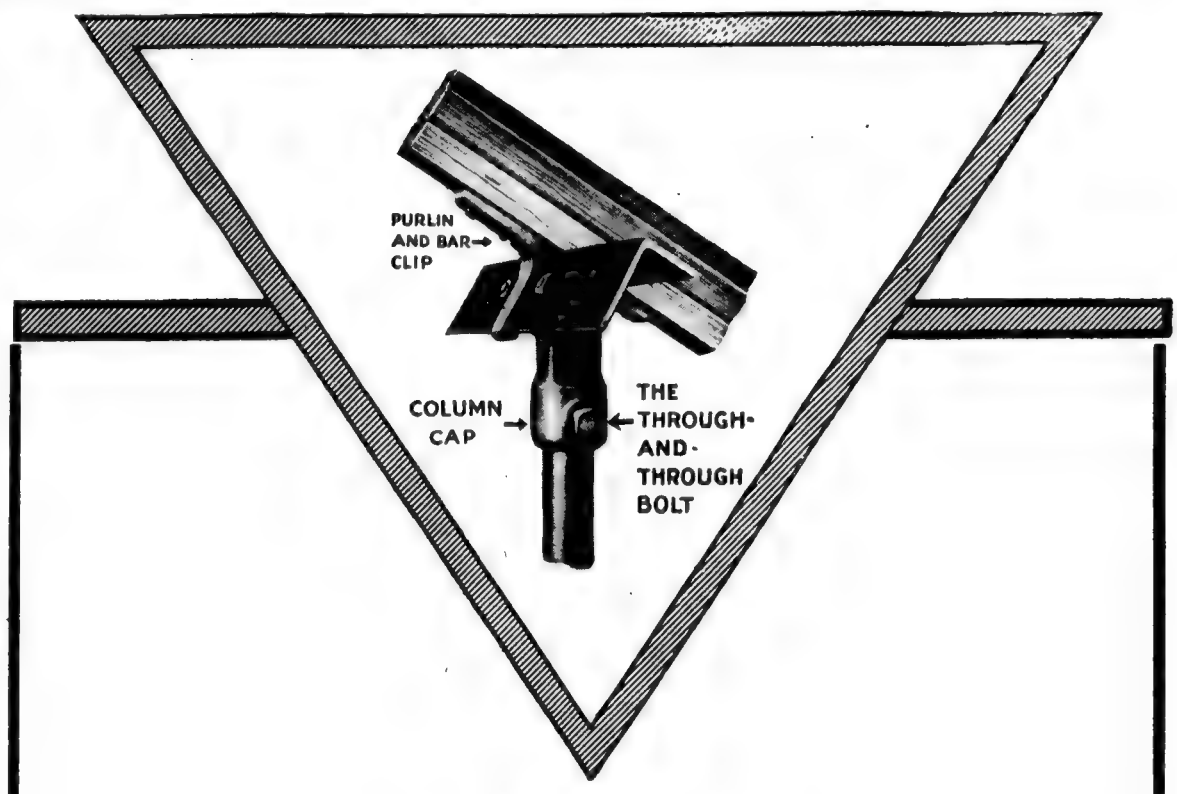
liage, has been of great value to the hybridists, who, by crossing it with other strains derived from B. Boliviensis and B. Veitchii, have produced a number of varieties with a dwarf, compact habit, but moderately sized and highly colored flowers.

The Wealth of New Colors.

The foregoing species, the chief parents of the present-day forms, in their native habitats grow at an altitude of 11,000 to 13,000 feet. This, however, does not signify that they are hardy in our climate. It will be noticed that, with the exception of the yellow-flowered B. Pearcei, all the original species have red, scarlet or crimson flowers; yet the result of hybridizing and crossing has been the production of progeny showing many varieties of color, such as white, pink, yellow, orange, crimson and many intermediate shades. Veitch & Sons, of England, and Crousse, of France, were the pioneers in the work, and when the small, drooping flowers of the parents are compared with the large, brilliant flowers of today, it seems hardly credible that such magnificent results could have been produced in a little over thirty years.

The cultivation of the tuberous begonia is not difficult. The easiest way is to purchase the young tubers from a specialist and start them in February or March in shallow boxes filled with sandy loam. They should be placed far enough apart to prevent matting and tangling of the roots when taken up to be potted, and should be kept at a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. The plants are ready for potting when the new shoots are about two inches long. The soil should consist of sandy loam and well-rotted manure, in the proportion of four to one. The size of the pots should vary according to the tubers, but generally a 3-inch size is large enough for the first potting. After potting, the watering should be moderate, as excessive moisture causes decay at the base.

Flowering and Resting.



A light, airy house and a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees are necessary for the best development. However, when the flower buds begin to form it is advisable to apply shade to the glass. This not only improves the coloring of the flowers, but also their keeping qualities.

By the first of June all the plants should be in their flowering pots. The amount of water given at this time should vary according to the weather and the growth. It is important, however, to water in the morning, for if the foliage is wet when the sun is powerful, brown blotches occur where the drops of moisture have rested. To produce fine, bushy plants, early flower buds should be pinched off, so that the strength will go to the plant itself, and the leading shoots should be removed to encourage side growths from farther down the stem. In order to bring forth showy specimens, the growth should be stimulated by feeding with liquid manure two or three times a week. The liquid manure may be made by suspending a half-bushel sack of cow manure in a 50-gallon barrel of water.

In October, when signs of ripening begin to show, the water should be gradually withheld until the growths decay, and the pots then should be placed on their sides under the benches in a greenhouse at a temperature of 40 degrees; or the tubers may be taken out of the pots and placed in dry sand in a cool cellar. In either case, care must be taken to prevent any moisture from reaching the tubers during the resting period. In the spring, as soon as the tubers show signs of growth, they should be potted. The best plants are produced during the second year, although they are good for several years.

PURLINS

Why We Use Angle Purlins in Place of Pipe

ALL the Iron Frame houses, of all kinds of construction, of all kinds of greenhouse concerns—all use angle iron purlins exclusively.

It would seem, therefore, that angle purlins are the best purlins.

Because they are best, we use them on both our Reconstructed Construction and Half Iron Frame.

In both constructions this makes possible the direct screwing fast of the roof bars directly to one of the flat faces of the purlin. Flat surfaces, as everybody knows, can be held tightly in place, better than when a round member is placed against a flat one.

That is just plain common sense.

And another thing—all our column fittings are bolted through and through the column on both constructions.

You know we go anywhere for business—or to talk business.

Here's a perfect outside wall for Your new greenhouse. Because——a glance through the glass—it's mid-January—the coldest in years. Now look at the eave plate—it's as clear as on a day in June. It's ice-clearing. Then, too, it has a projection outside that really sheds water—doesn't compel it to run down over the sash, carrying dirt and decay. Another point—the water on the inside actually falls into the drip gutter.

—the bar brackets are double bolted, hold the bars on three sides, leave the drip grooves free and do not cover the ends. Every bracket is cast with a glass stop—every bottom light rests on a heavy zinc strip.

—the wall is made of sash, instead of bars nailed in. No nails in sash. This gives a true, straight wall that outlasts bars that are toe-nailed top and bottom to a wooden rail or sill.

See the wide spacing—16 feet 8 inches—a long, free space as light as the big outdoors. If you want side ventilation, simply hinge the sash in the side wall—the sash will open up full—the AGMCO method of hinging makes this possible. Other sash open only part way. Now take in the whole picture—the house you see but a small part of is plumb and square. Here's the proof—the glass joints on the roof make a perfectly straight line. See the beauty of it all—its simplicity? Yet everything that is needed is there.

On account of a large purchase of materials at a close price, we are in a peculiarly good position to make you a particularly tempting figure. Don't beat yourself out of a chance to save some money. Get our price and compare it with others, but—

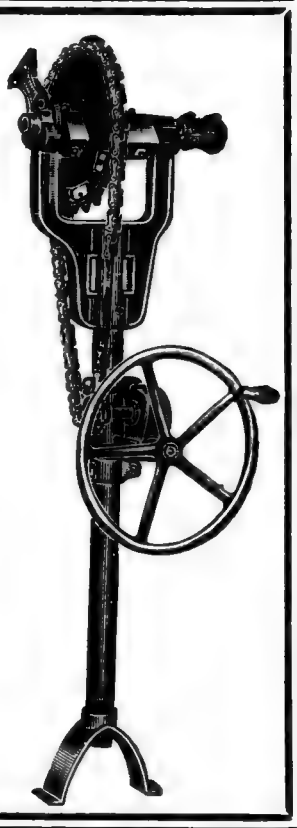
Put in a machine that always works

Do as Mr. Barr did, throw out the old machine that never did work right and put in an Evans Challenge.

Mr. John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind. Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 21, 1917.



Dear Sirs:—In reply to your letter of recent date regarding ventilating apparatus, we have a house rebuilt last summer 100 feet long by 30 feet wide with ventilators on both sides. The ventilators are attached to the ridge, extend down the roof 3 feet 6 inches, one glass between each ventilator, 15 ventilators on each side and each ventilator 5 feet long.

We are using ..... machine on this house, which is not giving us satisfaction. You may send us two machines, one for each side, with double acting arms. The machine to be attached in the middle of the house.

We have your machine in use in two other houses 150 feet long, each about five years and they are giving most excellent satisfaction, open regular from one end to the other. If you will send us two machines above referred to of this make, we will be well pleased.

Yours respectfully, B. F. BARR & CO.

NO TOLL FROM CHICAGO

Easter Stock, 1917

On time and in fine shape. Can ship any time, and it would be to your advantage, if you have glass, to have stock shipped a week or two before Easter, as there is much less danger of bruising the buds on blooming stock. Then too, it will make a much better appearance developing after shipment.

State whether to be in or out of pots. Three, four, five and six-inch stock, grown in pots, can be shipped in paper pots and save express. Azaleas, large Roses and Hydrangeas must be left in pots.

Packing will be charged at cost.

TERMS

All orders from parties unknown to us must be accompanied by Money Order or Draft (no personal checks). If you wire an order, wire the money also, as we refuse to ship C. O. D. to unknown parties.

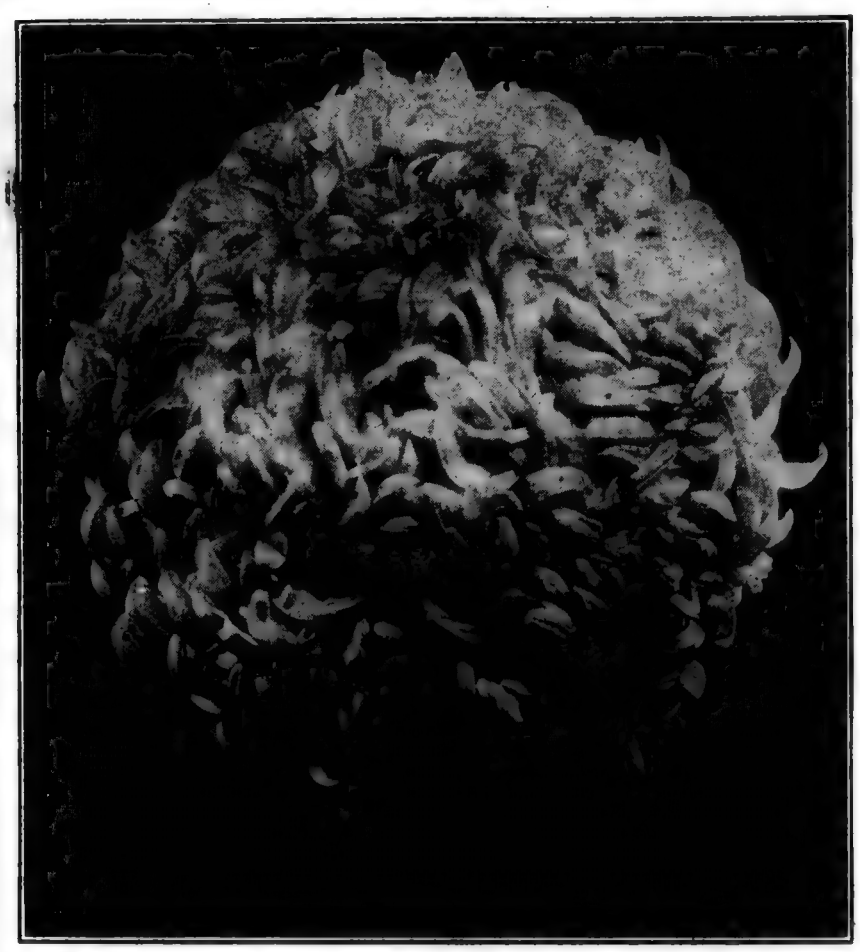
"Hamburg Late White" CHRYSANTHEMUM

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT awarded by Chrysanthemum Society of America

Picture was taken December 10, 1916, and will give a good idea of the symmetrical form of flowers of "Hamburg Late White." These flowers were cut from plants grown from single stems and planted six inches each way.

"Hamburg Late White" is pure white under all weather conditions and is a sport of Maud Dean, white, but has no trace of pink, as the original.



The average grower of Chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. "Hamburg Late White" has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but for late white one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November by taking an early bud, but by selecting later buds most of the flowers are cut during December, and would advise to select a late bud as the later buds come somewhat fuller. By selecting late buds flowers can be had as late as the middle of January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a light, graceful white flower is wanted "Hamburg Late White" cannot be surpassed.

"Hamburg Late White" will be disseminated in the Spring of 1917. Plants will be ready April 1st, 1917, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

Superiora Magnolia Leaves

—the biggest selling because they are the best!

For your own protection, Mr. Florist, accept "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves only. They are the best—the business-building kind—for you to use. Remember the name, "Superiora." REFUSE IMITATIONS

"SUPERIORA" BRAND MAGNOLIA LEAVES ARE SOLD BY EVERY WHOLESALE FLORIST IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA

What better proofs than these endorsements by the wholesale trade?

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are the best leaves that we have ever handled, and we have had no complaint from any of our customers who bought these leaves from us. We have stored these leaves under all conditions and found that they will not mould; it is a very satisfactory leaf indeed."

Reed & Keller, of New York City, say: ". . . and we beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way. We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory; colors vary and leaves mould quickly, etc."

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "My customers insist on having the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolias, as they claim these are the best, and that they do not dry out or become mouldy, and that every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest, besides being the best."

Geo. H. Angermueller, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "It pleases me to say that I have worked up a splendid business on your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, and I credit my success to the fact that the quality of your leaves has always been entirely satisfactory to my customers, etc."

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., says: "We have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves for the past six years and find in all this time that we have had no complaints but many compliments on these goods., etc., etc."

New England Florist Supply Co., of Boston, Mass., writes: "Have found 'Superiora' Magnolias the best leaves on the market. The sales on this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business."

Jos. G. Neidinger Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but find your leaves to be far superior to all others, etc., etc."

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Other Magnolia preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods 'just as good as Dux's' at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us, and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business and will not take a chance of losing it; in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as 'Magnolia Kings.'"

The Kervan Co., of New York City, writes: "We have handled your Magnolia leaves for several years and we take pleasure in announcing that our already long list of satisfied customers continues to grow. Since we have handled your leaves we have never had a complaint, but before that there was dissatisfaction."

L. Baumann & Co., of Chicago, Ill., write: "We regard your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves as being unequaled and certainly would not want to have anything else. Your leaves need no recommendation—they speak for themselves."

Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Have always found that the 'Superiora' brand gives our customers entire satisfaction; in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years."

Jos. E. Koppelman, of Providence, R. I., writes: "We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere, etc., etc."

Henry M. Robinson & Co., of Boston, Mass., write: "We are pleased to state that the quality of your leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale, etc."

STOP WASTING YOUR MONEY

Each year you buy advertising which does not have merit. This wasted money which you are throwing away in donation ads will pay for an advertising campaign covering a period of ten months—a campaign which will show you at the end of the year, or at the end of each consecutive month, exactly how much business it has brought to you. There are two ways of classifying business obtained through advertising: New business, from persons whom you have not had on your books heretofore; increased business, from old customers.

There Is no Guessing about the C. E. Falls Service of Advertising

If you will give me but a few hours at the start in preparation, I can develop your advertising from an indefinite expenditure to a definite, dividend-paying investment.

LET'S GET THE EASTER BUSINESS ON THE JUMP

Now is the time for you to get started. In writing me tell me what forms of publicity you are now using and approximately how much you are spending a year for this publicity.

I CAN SAVE YOU MONEY ON YOUR ADVERTISING

Write me today. Whether you spend $2.50 or $100.00 a month, I can give you more for your money than you are now procuring and get greater results on your advertising appropriation. Don't put it off.

Swas-Teeka Cannas For Your Customers Who Seek the New Good Things

THE Cannas described are all desirably new. In them it would seem that Antoine Wintzer, the Canna Wizard, has surely reached the high water mark in his years of wonderful Canna hybridization and development. They all notch right up to the Conard & Jones rigid quality standard. For your convenience in ordering, we have listed at the right, these Cannas with their wholesale prices. You can just fill in, in the space provided, the number wanted. Total up at the bottom. Fill in your name and address. Tear off and send to us.

NOVELTIES

TALL.

Gaiety	5	Reddish orange, mottled with carmine and edged with yellow. The tongue is yellow and densely spotted with carmine.
Olympic	5	Rich oriental red, with center shaded lighter red, and dappled carmine. Large, individual blossoms that make heads which are simply immense.
Wintzer's Colossal (Flowered)	5	Without doubt the largest-flowered Canna to date, as the average flowers more than cover a man's hat. The color is a strikingly vivid scarlet that retains its brilliancy.
City of Portland	3½	The color is a beautiful, glowing pink, deeper in color than its parent, Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, and the flowers are produced in greatest profusion on strong, erect, branching stalks. It is an early and continuous bloomer, blooming freely in hot or cool weather. Canna experts last season pronounced it the "finest all-round pink Canna to date."

MEDIUM.

Firebird	4	Clear, glistening scarlet flowers borne in immense trusses. Very fine. Foliage faulty.
Flag of Truce	4	Large-flowered, cream-white Canna, with faint pink dots on each petal and a sulphur-colored tongue. When a short distance from the flowers they appear pure white.
Golden Gate	4	The flowers open almost pure gold, but soon become richly rayed with orange crimson and apricot; throat deep carmine red. Foliage green.
Jane Addams	4½	True, bright Buttercup yellow.
Lafayette	4	This Canna was selected to plant in Lafayette Square, directly in front of the White House, for 1916. In some respects it resembles the famous "Meteor," but the flowers are more intense scarlet. The heads of bloom are carried erect above the healthy green foliage, producing a brilliant effect in mass planting.
Mrs. Woodrow Wilson	4	A charming shade of rich, soft crimson pink, particularly clear and pleasing to the eye. Flowers are large, with broad, overlapping, rounded petals of great substance and durability. Foliage is light green, prettily veined; the habit is robust, but the leaves do not hide the flowers.
Pocahontas (Bronze Olympic)	4½	Large, orient-red flowers, borne on firm, upright stems, just enough above the foliage to show the entire head. The foliage is a dark bronze green with emerald shadings, the ribs a darker bronze.
San Diego	4	Described as Chinese orange or Persian yellow in color. The crimped petals are remarkable for substance, which enables them to withstand the hot Summer sun without wilting, and another charm is in the buds, which are dark bronze, harmonizing with the golden bronze foliage. Grand in every way.

DWARF.

Dragon	3–4	An incessant bloomer which keeps sending up new bloom-stalks, until cut down by frost. Dark ox-blood red.
Sam Trelease (Imp.)		An intense, bright Poppy red, with a thread of Buttercup yellow around each petal.

VARIEGATED

MEDIUM.

Panama	3	The color is an attractive, rich orange red, with a well defined edge of bright golden yellow. The flowers are very large.

STORE MANAGEMENT IS VITAL PROBLEM

Little things, apparently trivial, make or break the florist, says this successful man, whose fifteen years of experience as a retailer of flowers make him qualified to speak. His ideas will be valuable to everyone engaged in this branch of the business. The points are clearly made.

By GEORGE E. SCHULZ

President The Jacob Schulz Co., Louisville, Ky.

THE topic, "Store Management," is worthy of the most serious consideration by the retail florist. There is hardly a commodity that the retailer uses which has not advanced from twenty per cent to 100 per cent, and, if my observation is correct, I doubt if seventy-five per cent of the florists are getting an increased price for their wares. I will also venture to say that there is many a retail florist in the country who is not aware of the fact that his raw materials are costing him more money; neither does he know that his expenses are climbing to a high notch.

This fact is due to several reasons, the principal one being the lack of a proper bookkeeping system. There is no doubt that a great many retailers are realizing the importance of a good system of books, but still the majority are lacking in this respect. The man who lays stress on his bookkeeping department is the man who knows what per cent for profit he must add to his merchandise, and, at the same time, he is the man who meets his bills promptly.

System Needed.

There is absolutely no way for one to figure his overhead expense unless he does install a good accounting system; and, unless he knows his overhead, he certainly does not know what per cent he must add to the cost of goods to make the profit to which he is entitled.

I have seen retailers who were successful and who did not keep an accurate account of anything, but they are few and far between. Furthermore, these cases are always looked after by the proprietor, himself, and his family, and, as a rule, stores conducted in this manner have nothing we would call overhead. The proprietor draws no pay; neither does his wife or children. In other words, they are practically putting in their time for their board.

Finds Daily Balance Helps.

I am emphasizing this subject because, to my notion, it is really the most important in the conduct of a retail store. In our own business we know exactly where we stand every day in the year, because our books are balanced daily.

Our bookkeeper runs off a daily cash proof, showing the amount received on accounts and the cash sales for that day. In addition he shows the amount received to date, as well as the amount paid out. In fact, I might say that this daily cash proof shows at a glance just what money we have on hand to the penny, it being made up as follows: Bank balance, amount in cash register, checks on hand, currency, coin, tickets and the total balance. This system has aided me materially in handling the financial end of our business.

There are many factors in the retail flower business which tend to make a man successful. We all know that we must have sufficient capital; a good location; that our store must be up-to-date; that our cases contain the newest creations; our show windows must be clean and the display arranged in an artistic manner. Our delivery service must be up-to-the-minute; our employees must report on time and be polite and accommodating to our customers; we must do a certain amount of advertising; we should help out our brother florist when he needs a little stock and we should make the acquaintance of our banker.

These are facts that most florists know, but I will venture to say that the percentage of florists who follow the above schedule is small.

Business Courtesy.

Nine times out of ten when you accommodate a brother florist you do so grudgingly. Few of us go about the country enough to keep in touch with the newer novelties in flowers and plants. Most of us do not know enough to treat the salesman who calls upon us with the courtesy to which he is entitled, and in consequence we pass up many good opportunities in merchandise.

Many retail stores are perched on side streets and in alleys because the proprietor figures he is getting reasonable rent. He does not realize that he might as well shove himself off the earth.

Many of us still have the habit of trying to work off old flowers—the growers are in the majority in this respect, however—when we realize that the freshest stock is none too good.

As to delivery service: I know many florists who continue to use a plug horse when an automobile can be purchased for $300, for which nominal sum he can render better service to his customers

Many florists do not understand that politeness is an asset in business. In our own business we try to treat everyone with due respect and politeness. Of course we have our "ups and downs," and occasionally we vary from this rule, but there is absolutely no excuse for it, no matter how roiled a customer may be.

The successful man of today is one who has self-control. This reminds me of a story I once heard about a peddler, who went to a house, knocked and asked the woman who came to the door if he could see the lady of the house.

"Yes, you can, if you ain't blind," snapped the woman.

"Oh, beg your pardon, madam. You are the lady of the house then?"

"Yes, I am. What did you take me for? Did you think I was the gentleman of the house, the next-door neighbor, one of the farm hands, the cat, or the ice chest?"

"I didn't know, lady, but that you might be the youngest daughter."

"Oh, did you? Well, that was natural, too," responded the lady of the house. "What did you want?"

The peddler displayed his goods and left the house, being well paid because he understood human nature and treated his prospect with respect and politeness.

Advocates Profit-Sharing.

Another subject I want to treat on is the welfare of our employees. We are apt to hire help for too small wages and, in return, expect too great service. I learned long ago that a man gets only what he pays for. Most of our employees hold stock in the company, and I haven't a man or woman in my employ who does not take a personal interest in the business. They are willing to work, early and late, and they are always there at the bugle call. In fact, I have such confidence in our force that I will wager that they can turn out fifty per cent more work, and of better quality, than an equal force which is not working on a profit-sharing basis.

I want to say right here that the average retail florist is too slow. What per cent of florists do any advertising or make an effort to promote the flower business? Very few. And when it comes to spending a little more money for the benefit of their business, either in a direct or indirect way, they figure they are throwing their money away. We, in our business, figure advertising as an asset. It is true one cannot become reckless when he is laying out his advertising campaign. If you spend five per cent of the gross sales, it is ample.

F. T. D. Increases Business.

One of the greatest opportunities before the retail store manager today is the out-of-town delivery of flowers. It behooves every proprietor and manager of a flower store to get busy and investigate the benefits of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. This organization transferred orders last year approximating $2,000,000. This was accomplished through individual advertising by its members, who now number, I believe, about 400. If you want to do an increased business this year, by all means join the F. T. D.

In the present age we must take advantage of every opportunity. As the old farmer once said to his sons: "Boys, don't you ever speckerlate or wait for somethin' to turn up. You might jest as well go and sit on a stone in the middle of a medder with a pail twixt yer legs and wait for a cow to back up to be milked."

The retail florist who is willing to wait for something to turn up, need not be surprised some fine morning to find a constable's sign on his store front.

The various things I have touched upon have come to me in my fifteen years' experience in the retail flower business and to all of them I have given a great deal of thought and attention. They are worthy of consideration.

SCHLING PLANS CONFERENCE.

Max Schling, of New York, plans a conference with the heads of the express companies in the effort to better shipping conditions in the trade and makes the following announcement:

For almost two years I have worked a lone hand on bettering shipping conditions connected with the different express companies. It was slow work for my impatience, but I managed.

About six months ago I brought this up at a meeting of our Retail Florists' Association, and had from our association, also from the Greek-American Florists' Association, a letter giving me authority to close any agreement which might further our interest, the interest of retail florists.

We will have a meeting in New York, Friday or Saturday, March 16 or 17.

The presidents of the different express companies are willing to do anything possible to protect our shipments and to further our business, and I will have to give them a few days' notice for what day they should arrange so that they can give us their time.

Any florists' club or retail florists' association which wants to send a delegate to this meeting should write me immediately. I will gladly submit to the different delegates what I have done in this matter heretofore. We can form a committee, elect a chairman in advance of this committee, and instead of representing the few hundred florists of New York, we can derive benefits for all the florists in the United States.

Mr. Schling's address is 22 West Fifty-ninth street, New York city.

FUNSTON'S FLOWERS.

Great masses of flowers representing tributes from persons in all parts of the country were used for the funeral of Major General Frederick Funston. It was one of the most elaborate military ceremonies of the kind ever observed in San Francisco. While many floral offerings were shipped with the remains from El Paso, Tex., and others were picked up along the way, the bulk of the work was done at San Francisco. Some of the local florists were rushed February 23 in getting out large pieces. Many telegraphic orders were handled on short notice.

The remains of the famous soldier were the first to rest in state in the great rotunda of the City hall at San Francisco. A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., had charge of the decoration, and its effectiveness did him credit. Palms were furnished by the park commissioners. The large number of set pieces and other tributes were grouped at the base of the grand staircase and at the sides of the rotunda. The catafalque, made by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., required about 10,000 daffodils, thirty large bunches of almond blossoms and yards of blue ribbon. It represented the California colors. S. H. G.

THE COMING ROSE FESTIVAL.

All the advance work for the show of the American Rose Society to be held in the First Regiment Armory, Broad and Callowhill streets, Philadelphia, March 20 and the three following days, is complete. The final schedule of classes and prizes has been mailed. Anyone desiring a copy can obtain it by writing to the local secretary, Fred Cowperthwaite, 1614 Ludlow street. The schedule includes many new special prizes that have been added since the preliminary schedule has been issued. The committee advises visitors who are coming to Philadelphia to the show to stay at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Broad and Walnut streets. The Bellevue-Stratford, which is one of the finest hotels in this or any other city in America, will be the National Rose Society's headquarters. The rates are $2.50 a day for room without bath, Flowers at the Funeral of General Funston, Arranged by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, Cal.

$3.50 for room with bath. A large number of entries have already been received. Many prominent florists from other cities have stated their intention of visiting Philadelphia during the show week. Phil.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Board to Meet.

The meeting of the executive board of the Society of American Florists will be held at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, March 16 and 17, with the first session at 9 a. m., Friday, March 16. Any committee or members of the society desiring to present any business to the board should communicate with the secretary immediately.

The National Flower Show Committee will meet at the same place March 17

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

Under date of March 1 Secretary Gray mailed the following letter to members of the society, requesting that each member coöperate with the executive committee of the society in furthering the interests of the organization:

Dear Sir: A strong effort will be made during the year to increase the interest and raise the society to the position of importance our popular flower deserves.

Your present executive committee stands as a unit in doing everything possible towards this end, and the support of each and every member will greatly help the committee in this work.

In the past much loss of interest has been due to the feeling that the members have not received an adequate return for membership in the society, but your committee is hopeful to be able to issue an annual to the members early in January of next year, which will be well worth the cost of membership. The annual will contain cultural articles on sweet pea growing, both outdoors and under glass, from all sections of the United States; live notes on varieties; best varieties for greenhouse culture; full data of our exhibitions, giving the number of vases shown and number of varieties shown; names of varieties suitable for exhibition, garden decoration, cutting, etc.; a list of the members with an audited financial report on the condition of the society.

Now, each and every member can greatly help the committee in this work by contributing articles and live notes on sweet peas from his section, by interesting others in becoming members of the society, and by giving the "Announcement to Members," herein enclosed, his prompt consideration.

New books are being opened, to which the names of the members will be transferred as responses are received.

Our ninth annual exhibition and convention will be held under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Horticultural hall, Boston, July 7 and 8, 1917. It is the intention to alternate these exhibitions held in the east between Boston, New York and Philadelphia, but this will depend on the invitations received at the convention. An attractive schedule of prizes will soon be issued to members and others interested.

It is hoped that all members will continue their support and give the committee the power to carry out the plans proposed.

The "Announcement to Members" referred to in the foregoing follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT TO MEMBERS.

The executive committee, in order that the society may be given a thorough business management, has approved the following changes:

That the business year end January 1, instead of July, in order that an audited statement of the financial condition may appear annually in the official bulletin to be issued early in January.

That under this plan, members who have paid dues to July 1, 1917, receive an official receipt to January 1, 1918, on the payment of $1.

That all other members whose names appear on the roll of the society be asked to renew their interest and receive an official receipt in full to January 1, 1918, on the payment of $2.

Members approving of this plan will please fill out the coupon attached and mail same with dues to William Gray, secretary, Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I.

The executive committee respectfully solicits the support of the members to this plan, and pledges itself to an economical business management of the society's affairs.

Signed by the executive committee:

Geo. W. Kerr, president.
Edwin Jenkins, vice-president.
William Gray, secretary.
William Sim, treasurer.

SHRAPNEL

Erfurt, Germany.—The seed growers are receiving government support in the matter of vegetable seed production as a means of maintaining food supplies, but export business has ceased.

Rotterdam, Holland.—The Dutch-Belgian frontier has been closed by the Germans, in preparation for the spring campaign, and for the time being it is impossible to communicate with the plantsmen at Ghent. Shipments have ceased.

Haarlem, Holland. — Although it is several months to shipping time and conditions may change at any moment, bulb exporters are worrying over the practical suspension of shipping as a result of the U-boat activities. The fear is that shipping space may not be available when the bulb crop is ready to move.

Ghent, Belgium.—This is the worst winter of the war. Labor is scarce and fuel has been so difficult to obtain that many nurseries have been unable to keep going.

London, England.—One of the new things that has grown out of the war is the purchase of space in trade journals for an advertising campaign to increase the membership of the Horticultural Trades' Association.

Wiesbaden, Germany.—Ferd. Fischer says the censorship permits only an occasional letter to pass and that the blockade has prevented shipments of cyclamen seeds to America since May, 1916. With few orders permitted to come in and no shipments permitted to go out, Mr. Fischer wonders what his American customers think of the situation.

THE ILLINOIS FLORISTS HOLD MEETING

AT URBANA AGAIN.

Officers Elected.

At the twelfth annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, held at Urbana, March 6, the following officers were elected:

President—I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, Ill.

Vice-president—W. J. Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill.

Secretary—J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., reëlected.

Treasurer—F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, Ill., reëlected.

It was recommended to the executive committee that a fall flower show and meeting be held at Galesburg in November and that a fee be charged for exhibition space.

The Program.

The purpose of the periodical meetings at Urbana is to keep in touch with the work for floriculture being done at the state experiment station and the program related thereto. It was as follows:

TUESDAY, MARCH 6.

Welcome, J. C. Blair, Head of Department of Horticulture.
President's Address, C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park.
Report of Secretary, J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.
Report of Treasurer, F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.

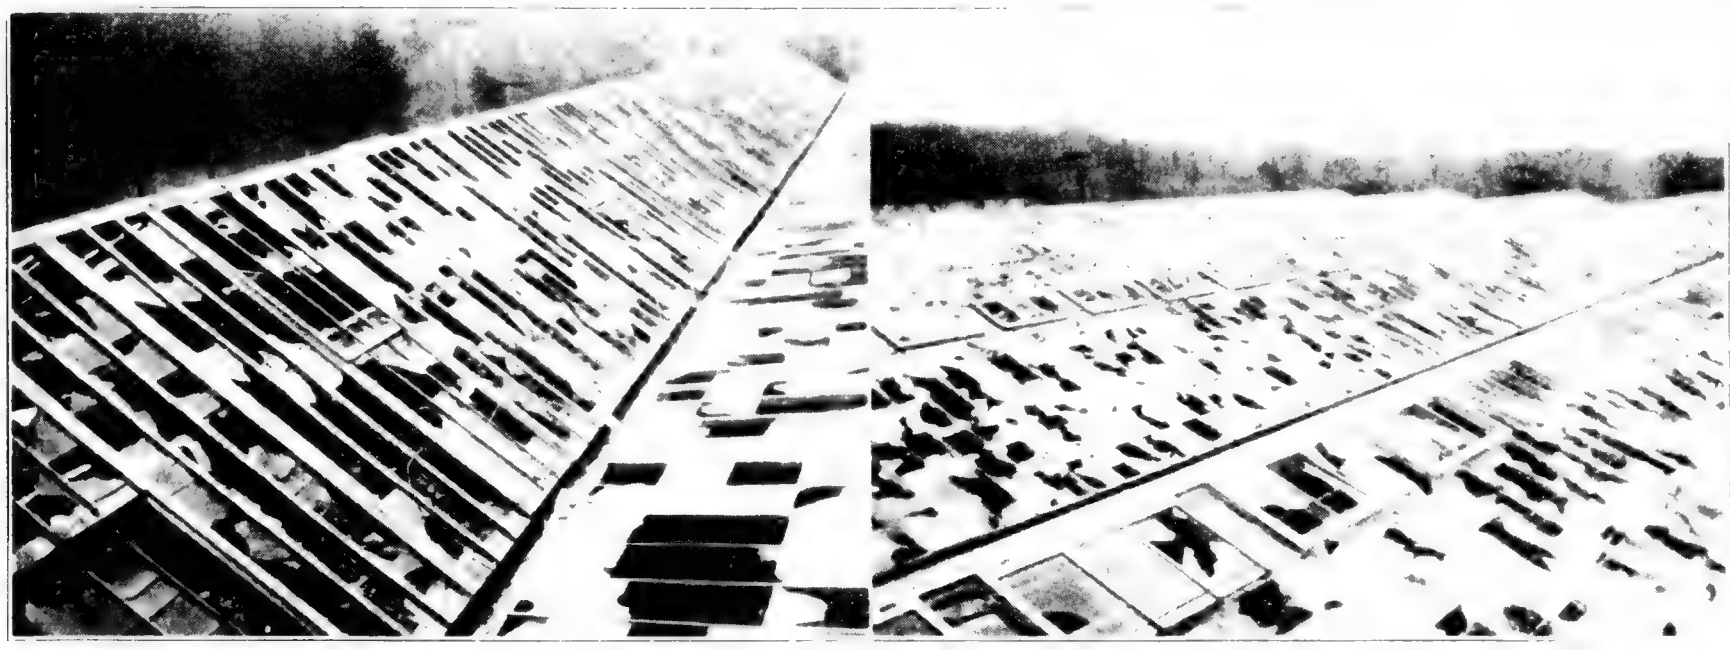
PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

[The address of President C. W. Johnson in opening the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, March 6.]

We are now assembled for our twelfth annual meeting. A year ago we had a successful meeting at Moline, in the extreme western part of the state, and now we meet again here at Urbana under the auspices of the Department of Horticulture of the University of Illinois. I am sure every member joins me in expressing our appreciation of the privilege we have in meeting here at this institution. Here at Urbana we come in touch with the work that is being undertaken by the University of Illinois to solve some of the problems which we as individuals have to contend with in our work connected with the cultivation of plants and flowers. Not only this, but the work being carried out along the lines of landscape gardening affords much of interest to the landscape gardener as well as to the retail florist whose business is partly of this order.



Every florist of this state, whether he is a grower or a retailer, should feel it his duty to take a great deal of interest in what is being done here for floriculture, and the Illinois State Florists' Association as a body should never be neglectful in giving its aid and support to those in charge of the work. The young men who are devoting four years of their lives to be especially trained in the work we represent are going to be a power, not only in the business but also in the societies allied thereto.

The Bloomington Show.

As your president it gives me pleasure to congratulate you on your efforts of the past year. It has been a fruitful one. At Bloomington last November our first fall flower show was held, a flower show that was remarkable in many ways. First and foremost, it was well supported by the members, not only by their presence but by contributing largely of exhibits. Every part of the state was well represented; not only the members with large establishments to make their selection from, but those not so well equipped did their part by either sending or bringing along an exhibit. The exhibits were of the highest order, receiving much commendation from the visiting public, and we are proud to say that every exhibit was contributed for the good of the cause without any chance of remuneration, it being a free will show in every respect.

I feel it my duty to call the attention of the members of the association to the good work done by our fellow members, the Washburn brothers, of Bloomington, in their efforts to make the show the success it was and to them we owe a vote of thanks. The Commercial Club of Bloomington also was untiring in its efforts to make our visit both pleasant and profitable, and to it we owe our thanks.

The purpose of the meeting at this time is the nomination and election of officers, to hear reports of the work of the different departments by the professors in charge and to transact such other business as may come before the association. I ask your active participation in all the details of the meeting, which will not only help the association but be of mutual benefit to every member.

Fields for Endeavor.

I would suggest for your consideration and discussion the various diseases and insects which attack plants. The carnation yellows is still an unsolved problem, though good work is being done to get at the bottom of the trouble. Every year some fresh disease or insect seems to come to the front. At the last meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, held in Philadelphia last November, a member spoke of the trouble growers of his vicinity were having with a form of clyndrosporum or fungoid growth which, commencing at the bottom of the chrysanthemum plant, quickly rises, covering the under surface of the leaves with a varnish-like coating that closes up the pores and stops all growth. Another member spoke of the gall fly, which attacked his plants seriously. Experiences of the members with these or any other difficulties should be brought before the meeting and freely discussed for the benefit of all.

To the officers and members I extend my thanks and appreciation for their support during my two terms as your president, and trust the same will be extended to my successor. Our association has done a lot of good for the florists of Illinois, but each year brings its new responsibilities needing the support and coöperation of everyone interested in our business.

In these troublesome times it is indeed a pleasure to again meet and shake hands with our fellow craftsmen, friends who have worked together the best part of our lives for the good of our common cause. With this I close.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[The report of Secretary J. F. Ammann, presented to the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, March 6.]

The one great event in the history of the association was the fall flower show held at Bloomington in November. This was, indeed, one great success. There were forty exhibitors and all donated the flowers, as the show was non-competitive, and all but one or two prepaid the express on the flowers sent to the show. This truly shows a spirit of good fellowship and yet I doubt if any better advertising medium for flowers could be had than such a show. Six certificates of merit were awarded. The attendance was unusually large, over 100 members attending the banquet. We hope now that the fall show and good fellowship meetings will come to be annual affairs.

The association is now the owner of 200 vases, the executive committee having purchased them from the A. L. Randall Co., at a liberal reduction from the regular price.

Five life memberships have been added to our list, making our present life membership fifty-eight, which together with an annual membership of 239 and an honorary membership of four makes the total membership 301. The receipts for the year were $127, disbursements $157.38.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA.

Will you kindly tell me when cuttings of Buddleia Asiatica should be taken and whether they can be successfully rooted in a carnation propagating bench? Also, please tell me the correct pronunciation of the word buddleia.

C. K. S.—Mich.

Cuttings of this buddleia will root readily in a carnation temperature. Cutback plants, if kept well sprayed, will soon give a good crop of cuttings. These cuttings should be potted off when the roots are an inch long and successively shifted to 4-inch, 6-inch and 8-inch pots as they need it. They are better if grown outdoors from June till the middle of September, then placed in a frost-proof plant pit or cold greenhouse. They can be flowered from early December until March.

The word is pronounced bud-lee-a, with the accent on the first syllable. The plant is named after Buddle, an English plant specialist. C. W.

HAIL'S HEAVY TOLL IN TEXAS.

February 22 a hail storm from the northwest visited Dallas, Denison and Ennis, Tex., and played havoc with greenhouse glass in those sections. At Dallas hailstones almost as large as eggs fell for three minutes. After the bombardment was over at the range of the Lang Floral & Nursery Co., a photographer climbed to a point of vantage and made the two photographs reproduced on this page. Otto Lang, president of the company, said that ninety per cent of the 50,000 feet of glass was demolished by the hail in less than three minutes.

Not to be beaten by the elements, however, Mr. Lang and his workers immediately secured 15,000 feet of lumber to cover the west side of the houses, which suffered the most damage. Canvas, burlap and other materials were used to close the houses as much as possible. Thanks to the warmer days that followed the storm, Mr. Lang says that, while the roses became heavily mildewed and all growing plants were beaten by falling glass, the damage to stock could have been much more severe.

The view at the left shows a sash house 22x200, on which single-strength glass was used. Practically every pane was shattered. At the right the remainder of the range of eight houses is shown. All the houses in this view had double-thick glass, and about ten per cent of it came through whole. This gives an idea of the force of the hailstones, which in some instances punctured tin roofs.

Cleveland, O.—The J. M. Gasser Co. has placed a contract for a steel frame greenhouse 60x400 with the Cleveland office of the Lord & Burnham Co. The material will be shipped from the contractor's western factory, at Des Plaines, Ill.

HOW TO INCREASE THE CUTS

OF ROSES AND CARNATIONS IN OUR GREENHOUSES

A report by F. W. Muncie, Associate in Floricultural Chemistry, Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, to the Illinois State Florists' Association, March 6, 1917.

IN a recent bulletin of the Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, in a number of papers which I have read before this association and one before the American Carnation Society, I have advocated the use of acid phosphate as a thoroughly safe and effective form of fertilizer for supplying phosphorus to rose and carnation plants. In no previous paper have I been able to recommend acid phosphate as superior to bone meal, although I have been rather widely quoted to that effect and a number of growers are trying out acid phosphate in comparison with bone meal.

Acid Phosphate vs. Bone.

In order to test out this point, two sets, 144 rose plants in each, of the varieties Richmond and Killarney, are being grown during the present season, one set being fertilized with acid phosphate at the rate of eighty pounds per 100 cubic feet of soil, the other with an equal money value of bone meal, calculated to be 42.8 pounds per 100 cubic feet on the basis of acid phosphate and bone meal costing $15 and $28 per ton respectively. Each of the fertilizers costs more today, but the ratio of cost of one to the other is about the same. The plants are 2-year-old stock. I will let the results speak for themselves. Here is the effect of fertilizing with bone meal and acid phosphate:

	Killarney		Richmond
	Bone	Phos.	Bone	Phos.
No. of plants....	144	144	144	144
Total flowers ...	1,918	2,391	1,792	2,069
Av. per plant....	13.3	16.1	12.4	14.3

The advantage in favor of acid phosphate is about two and one-half flowers per plant, which I consider a rather remarkable endorsement of acid phosphate, since the figures represent the production only from September 15 to December 18, 1916.

The Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, if these figures are verified by the results of the remainder of the year, will be able to make a second recommendation of practical importance to the rose grower, viz., that with an equal investment for fertilizer, acid phosphate will yield much the larger returns.

Phosphatic Fertilizer for Carnations.

In a discussion about a year ago, before the American Carnation Society, I stated that no extensive experiments had been published showing that phosphatic fertilizer would increase the crop of carnations, but I believed on general principles that it might well do so. I am able to give you the results of experiments with White Enchantress and Champion, the figures being for flowers picked from September 15 to December 18, 1916, with acid phosphate used at the rate of eighty pounds per 100 cubic feet of soil.

	Plants	Total cut	Av. per plant
White Enchantress—
With acid phos.....	352	1,656	4.7
Without acid phos....	338	1,394	4.1
Champion—
With acid phos.....	350	2,266	6.5
Without acid phos....	356	2,219	6.2

The increase with acid phosphate fertilization is around one flower per two plants, which appears more significant when stated as an increase of 500 flowers per each 1,000 plants in the bench. If these results are borne out by the rest of the experiment, I will consider the point raised as settled in favor of fertilization with acid phosphate, although apparently carnations are not the heavy feeders roses are, nor receive such marked benefit by fertilization.

Variability in Production.

In studying the production of some 1,700 rose and 1,400 carnation plants during the present year, some data of great interest and fundamental importance to florists have resulted. I will include enough of them here for the sake of illustration and comment on their significance. The figures below are for the production of flowers by Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney plants from September 15 to December 18, 1916, each plant being considered separately and arranged in the table according to the number of flowers produced as indicated in the first column at the left.

	Ophelia	Hoosier Beauty	Killarney	White Killarney
1	..	..	..	..
2	..	3	..	..
3	..	2	..	..
4	1	12	..	..
5	..	15	..	2

23	..	..	..	..
24	..	..	2	1
26	..	..	1	..

After discarding that portion of the column in each case which contains less than ten plants, there remains a portion near the center where the production varies as much as 100 per cent. Thus, with Ophelia, thirteen plants produced sixteen flowers, while eleven plants produced only eight flowers. If it were possible to raise the average production from the level of eight to that of sixteen, an increase in production of 100 per cent would result, and that without further investment for greenhouses or labor. Since an increase of twenty per cent by the use of a fertilizer is considered large, the importance of the question relative to those relating to the use of fertilizers is apparent.

Causes of Variability.

Possible causes of this variability are (1) relative location on the bench with respect to illumination, drying out, or temperature, (2) imperfections or poor quality of Manetti stock, although some results obtained previously on own-root stock showed me that this cannot be the sole cause, (3) variable vigor and productiveness of plants due to conditions of growth previous to their being set in the bench, and (4) variability of vigor and productiveness in the plants from which the scions of these plants were taken. This seems to me to be the fundamental question—whether plants obtained by the growth of scions from high-producing plants will themselves be high producers in comparison with those plants whose parents, if I may thus loosely term them, were low producers; and so fundamental and practical a question is it that you may expect results to be reported to some future meeting on this subject. Carnations show a similar variability and what I have said above for roses applies to them also, with the exception, of course, of the possible influence of Manetti roots.

A bulletin from the Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station which has just come from the press, on "The Use of Commercial Fertilizers for Roses," embodies the information contained in my report of March 7, 1917, with practical suggestions to florists. This report contains further experiments along the same line and uncovers a new line of promise in the study of variability of production by roses and carnations.

DISEASE DUE TO NEMATODES.

Its Increasing Prevalence.

Greenhouse men in the northeast, particularly in the New England states and in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, are experiencing considerable losses as a result of the occurrence and continued spread of a little known disease. The malady is due to nematodes, or eelworms, one or more species of aphelenchus, which have been found in this country infecting violets, strawberries, a number of varieties of begonias and many species of ferns. In Europe, where it has been known for many years, the disease has been reported as attacking forty-eight different species of plants.

On ferns, begonias and other plants the trouble affects the leaves, causing them to become discolored—usually brown—in definite areas, which may increase so as to include the entire leaf. It may also produce on strawberries and violets a slight swelling and distortion of the buds, crowns and leaves. Diseased plants may be killed or their market value, quality and appearance may be impaired.

The cause of the disease, thread-like nematodes, from one-thirtieth to one-fiftieth of an inch in length, can be seen with slight magnification when a small piece of infected leaf or tissue is teased apart in a few drops of water on glass.

By the aid of a compound microscope, the egg, larval and adult stages of the parasite may be observed within the unbroken diseased leaves, which they enter through wounds or air pores. Active larvæ and adults can easily emerge from leaves through these natural openings, or stomata, and may be carried to other plants, which they subsequently infect.

Methods of Control.

The following measures, suggested by specialists of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, as methods of control, have proved helpful in preventing the disease or in reducing losses from it:

1. Separate the diseased from the healthy plants; then remove from the former, and burn, all infected parts. In this way the chance of infection of the healthy plants is considerably lessened and some of the diseased plants can be freed from the pest.

2. Allow as much ventilation and aëration as possible, and avoid wetting the foliage, as the nematode is readily spread by water.

3. Propagate by seeds or by the use of parts or all of healthy plants, using soil that has been sterilized by the use of steam or by other means.

4. Avoid all stock from infected nurseries and regions, and use disease-resistant plants whenever possible.

5. Partial success in destroying the nematodes by submerging ferns in water at a temperature of 122 degrees for five minutes has been reported, says the Department of Agriculture.

MODERN TUBEROUS BEGONIAS.

The continuation of an article begun in The Review for March 1, page 18.]

Tuberous begonias are propagated by seeds, by division of tubers or by cuttings of side shoots, the most common and satisfactory method being from seeds. The seeds should be sown in shallow boxes or seed pans about February 1, in compost consisting of equal parts of leaf-mold and peat and one-quarter charcoal. The seeds are extremely small, resembling tobacco dust, and for this reason are best sown directly on the surface of the soil. The pan should be covered with a pane of glass and shaded to prevent drying out, but as soon as the seeds germinate the glass and the shading should be removed. When the plants show the third leaf they should be pricked into flats containing a compost similar to the one already mentioned, and spaced two inches each way. It is advisable to keep the flats in a moist atmosphere, and near the glass of the greenhouses, to prevent spindling. Later the plants should be transferred to 4-inch pots, using soil similar to that used for the tubers. The subsequent treatment corresponds to that of the tubers.

Increasing Desirable Stock.

If it is desired to retain and increase the stock of any variety, this may be done by taking cuttings of side shoots, two or three inches long, during the summer and inserting them in leaf-mold, sphagnum moss or cocoanut fiber. The cuttings should be kept close and shaded for several days; a moist atmosphere should be maintained by sprinkling overhead, and the temperature kept at 60 to 65 degrees. As soon as the cuttings root, they should be potted.

Another method of increasing the stock of any desired variety is to cut large tubers into parts, each of which contains a bud. This should be done in the spring, and the treatment thereafter is similar to that for the tubers. A necessary precaution in this method is to dip the tubers in slaked lime or charcoal to hasten the healing of the cut.

Producing New Varieties.

The raising of new varieties from seed is a most interesting occupation. The grower's enthusiasm is somewhat dampened at the start by the uncertainty of results, but the variety and brilliance of the flowers are hardly to be equaled by any other plant. The operation itself is simple. The female parent is chosen, the stamens are cut off before the pollen is ripe, and the flower is enclosed in a small waxed paper bag, to prevent any foreign pollen from settling on the stigma. The male flower may also be enclosed in a similar bag, to avoid the intermixing of pollen from other plants by insects. As soon as the stigma of the female plant is ripe—which can be told by the protruding of little hairs upon it—the pollen of the male plant may be brought to it by means of a camel's-hair brush or forceps. This is best accomplished in the middle of a bright day. In a day or two the stigma will turn brown and gradually die away, thus indicating that fertilization has taken place. A pod, which is soon formed, bursts at the top when ripe, and the seeds fall to the bottom of it.

Some difficulty is experienced with the double flowers. Often these fail to produce pollen, as the pollen-bearing stamens may have changed into petals. This condition may be avoided, however, by starving the plant—that is, reducing the water supply—thus forcing

JULES BOURDET.

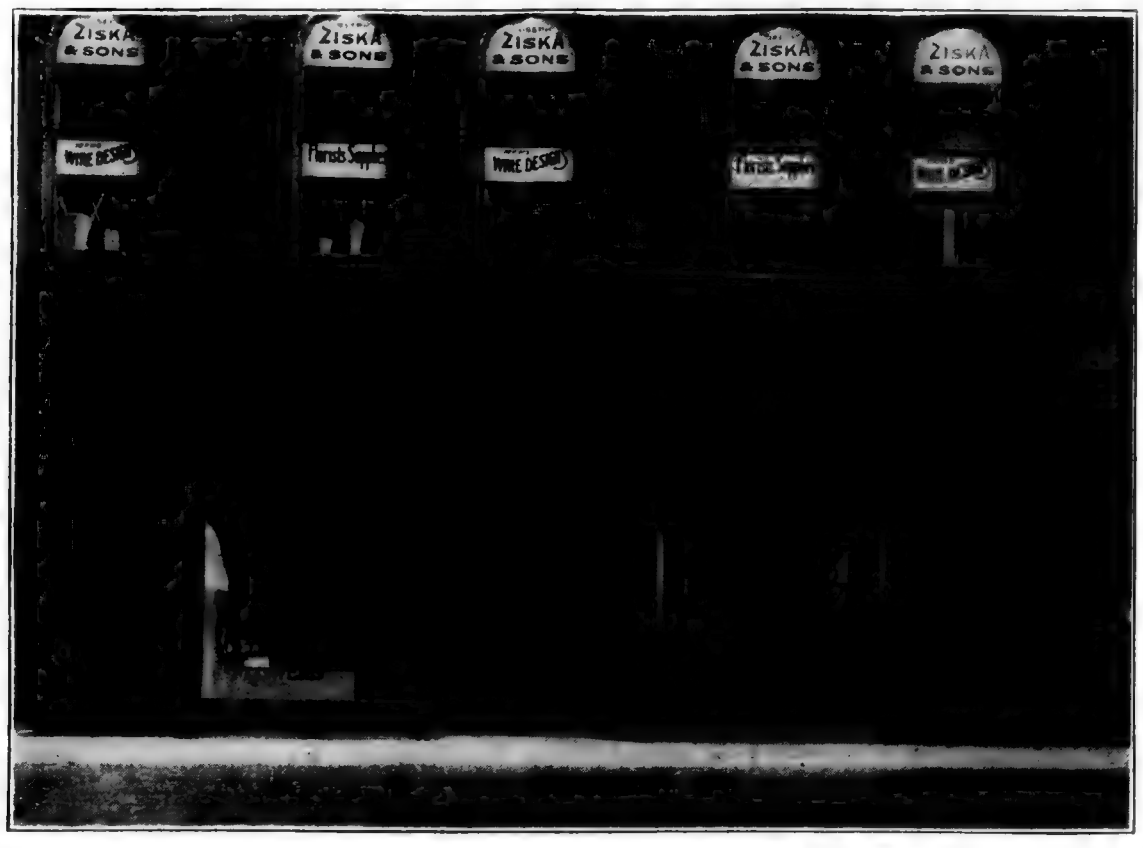
JULES BOURDET, manager of next week's St. Louis flower show, although a native of France, is now a loyal "St. Loo-eez-ian." He says so himself. When it was announced that the Parisian touch, which will characterize the show, would be truly representative because M. Bourdet "is a Parisian," he exclaimed: "No! No! I am a St. Loo-eez ian! I was a Parisian, but no longer. My allegiance is to St. Loo-eez." M. Bourdet came to St. Louis as official florist and landscape gardener for the French Commission to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. As such he reproduced the Grand Trianon for the grounds surrounding the French building at the fair. He made many friends in St. Louis and at the fair's close opened a flower store near Shaw's Garden. Twelve years have made him a loyal "St. Loo-eez ian," but he has not forgotten his Parisian training, as twenty-two subcommittee chairmen realized when they learned his plans for the show.

the flowers to be smaller and sometimes changing them into single flowers with some pollen-bearing stamens. This procedure is not always successful, however.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' NEW HOME.

For a number of years the growth of the wholesale cut flower and florists' supplies business in Chicago has been hindered by the lack of available space, those engaged in the business not being willing to risk locations outside a certain center. Recently a building of sixty feet frontage well within the chosen district became available to wholesale florists through the removal of a surgical instruments house and it now has been occupied by three trade firms: The E. C. Amling Co., dealing in wholesale cut flowers; Ziska & Sons, dealers in florists' supplies and wire work, and the new firm of Wiltgen & Freres, dealers in cut flowers, located in the basement. This addition to the market space, shown in the accompanying illustrations, relieves the constriction of the market area and already has given Kennicott Bros. Co., which had been looking for larger quarters, a chance to get the space it needed by taking a part of the store vacated by the Amling concern. There are other changes in prospect, all looking toward caring for increased business, as the wholesale business in Chicago is increasing steadily.

DISEASES SCIENTIFICALLY STUDIED



A report by E. M. R. Lamkey, of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Illinois, to the Illinois State Florists' Association, March 6, 1917.

THE work in floricultural pathology is directed along three lines: The diagnosis and suggested treatment of diseases of floricultural plants; the diagnosis of plant diseases other than floricultural ones, upon a request for such information; the experimental investigation of those diseases which at present are causing the most serious loss to the grower. A report upon some phases of this work which may have its practical application follows below.

Carnation yellows, perhaps, requires first consideration. Much of the conflicting evidence upon this disease among growers and pathologists is due to the similarity between yellows, bacteriosis and stigmonose. In fact, at certain stages of development it is almost impossible to distinguish between the three without recourse to the microscope and the pure culture methods of the pathologist. A report of the work upon yellows, giving the characteristics which distinguish this disease from stigmonose and bacteriosis, may be found in the proceedings of the American Carnation Society for 1917. Since the preparation of that paper, the data which have been assembled have resulted in additional information.

Formation and Appearance of Yellows.

If the forcing of the carnation in the early part of the season has resulted in cropping, and the removal of all flowers has left only the basal portions of the stems, the young shoots developing at this time have always come in yellowed. The tendency to come in yellowed seems to be especially marked if cloudy weather prevails when the young shoots are making a rapid growth, although the results of this may be seen by none except the most careful observer until after the flowering buds start to form weeks after. The reason for this is that at first the yellowed areas are inconspicuous and can hardly be seen except when held between the eye and the source of light. Later, as the leaf grows and becomes thicker, these spots do not grow in thickness with the leaf and, consequently, appear sunken and are conspicuously yellow or almost white. With an abundance of sunlight the tendency to come in yellowed seems reduced. Yellowed plants have been produced experimentally by the removal of all flowers from plants which have been allowed to crop. The removal of the flowers has resulted in the removal of a great area of leaf surface which is necessary for plant growth. The few leaves remaining on the basal portions of the branches are not sufficient to perform the normal functions of the plant. On the other hand, plants which have never cropped and have always been permitted to retain an average amount of foliage have never become yellowed. The evidence seems to indicate that yellows is an indication of improper treatment. The improper treatment mentioned above has produced badly yellowed plants. Other improper conditions are probably capable of producing it.

Preventive Methods—Not Cures.

Suggestions offered for the prevention of this disease are the discarding of unusually susceptible varieties, the taking of cuttings from perfectly healthy and vigorous plants, an early and frequent pinching rather than an occasional severe pinching, the prevention of the cropping of the individual plant as well as of the plants as a whole, an avoidance of vigorous forcing during the early part of the season, and individual attention to each plant to prevent the loss of an undue amount of foliage upon the removal of all flowers.

It is thought, from the observations and the experience of many of the best growers, that an excess of water in the soil and atmosphere at a time when plants are severely or partially cut back will result in the forcing of water, intended for a large leaf area, into the reduced area and result in injury. This may be partially responsible for the more pronounced appearance of yellows during cloudy weather. This point, while suggestive, remains to be proven experimentally, but might well be kept in mind by the grower. While the work upon yellows is by no means completed, it is deemed wise at this time to give whatever information we have to the grower. One thing to be emphasized is that a plant must receive proper treatment, both in regard to soil fertility and methods of culture, at all stages of growth if it is hoped to keep it in a healthy condition. Disease prevention is always more logical and satisfactory than disease cure.

Fusarium Wilt of Carnations.

This disease, known as "dry" stem-rot and "branch wilt," varies in severity in different sections of the country and often becomes epidemic in nature. In the southern states this is a serious disease, which, when once started, shows up year after year, being responsible for the death or failure of plants to develop after benching. In the north and east the disease is more spasmodic, but often becomes epidemic.

The Feature of the New Amling Store at Chicago is that its Width Permits the Use of Refrigerators on Both Sides.

Work, here, in connection with a survey of the fungi present in greenhouse soils, has shown that this fusarium is present in abundance in all carnation soils. Infection, however, seldom takes place if the temperature is held as low as is consistent with the full development of the carnation and if the spacing allows ample circulation of air around each plant. The fungus is most active at high temperature—a condition to be avoided. Soil sterilization is impractical, for the fungus may be brought into the houses anew on the soil clinging to transplanted plants. However, if the disease has once become serious in a house, it is recommended that the plants transplanted to the field be placed in soil which has not been grown to carnations for some time, and that the houses and benches be thoroughly sterilized with a strong fungicide before bringing in fresh soil which has never been grown to carnations. Absolute cleanliness and the destruction of all dead parts of plants are essential for the holding of this disease in check.

This fungus is often serious as a cause of damping off in the propagating bench, as it is quite common to find ninety-five per cent of the dead or undeveloped cuttings attacked by this fungus. Ordinarily, it need not be feared if fresh, clean sand is used in the propagating bench.

Assistance Offered by University.

At present work is being done to determine if the fusarium which causes the wilts of tomatoes, potatoes, etc., will attack the carnation. The application may be seen, but until we have complete results, no recommendations in this direction are offered.

In addition to the above, work is being continued upon aster wilt and yellows, and an attempt is being made to produce a rust-resistant snapdragon. New diseases in the form of a bacterial decay of cyclamens, a crown blight of ligustrum and a disease of canna root stock have been under observation. Serious diseases, other than floricultural ones, have also come to our attention.

We wish to remind you at this time that the division of floriculture of the University of Illinois is always ready to examine any diseased plants which you may send in and to suggest remedies whenever possible.

E. M. R. Lamkey, Urbana, Ill.

Worcester, Mass.—H. F. A. Lange had a fine window display of flowers arranged in the national colors on Washington's birthday. It was much admired.

Jewett City, Conn.—At the Jewett City Greenhouses Benora is considered the best paying carnation. "It brought 3 and 4 cents at wholesale last June and topped all our other sorts," says Proprietor A. A. Young.

Fairhaven, Mass.—Following a prosperous season, Peter Murray is enjoying a brief vacation at Atlantic City. Mrs. Murray accompanied him. Easter stock looks promising. An additional house is on the tapis, to be built the coming season.

Brookline, Mass.—F. E. Palmer says his sales of cyclamens this season exceeded all previous records and he attributes it largely to the superior strains now being grown. The nursery has been given up, the land being too valuable, but a large retail trade is done from samples planted around his residence and greenhouses.

Auburn, R. I.—D. N. Potter says the labor situation is most serious for the market gardener and he would welcome a host of orientals as a solution of the problem.

Hartford, Conn.—A fine group of flower shops can be seen in the Capital city. Their attractiveness doubtless contributes largely to the excellent business done. John Coombs owns two that take the output of his extensive greenhouses. Welch, Inc., has the latest in a delivery auto, painted black and white, the lower part of the body resembling mosaic or miniature checkers. It is a startler.

Hartford, Conn.—Carl Peterson, proprietor of the Whiting Greenhouses, has for many years grafted his own rose stock and finds this season a large number of failures following grafting. Inspection of the Manetti shows it has died down so that hardly any can be used over again. The loss runs near fifty per cent. Reporting on business and prospects, Mr. Peterson says: "We are now on top of the heap."

Assistance Offered by University.

At present work is being done to determine if the fusarium which causes the wilts of tomatoes, potatoes, etc., will attack the carnation. The application may be seen, but until we have complete results, no recommendations in this direction are offered.

In addition to the above, work is being continued upon aster wilt and yellows, and an attempt is being made to produce a rust-resistant snapdragon. New diseases in the form of a bacterial decay of cyclamens, a crown blight of ligustrum and a disease of canna root stock have been under observation. Serious diseases, other than floricultural ones, have also come to our attention.

We wish to remind you at this time that the division of floriculture of the University of Illinois is always ready to examine any diseased plants which you may send in and to suggest remedies whenever possible.

E. M. R. Lamkey, Urbana, Ill.

Worcester, Mass.—H. F. A. Lange had a fine window display of flowers arranged in the national colors on Washington's birthday. It was much admired.

Jewett City, Conn.—At the Jewett City Greenhouses Benora is considered the best paying carnation. "It brought 3 and 4 cents at wholesale last June and topped all our other sorts," says Proprietor A. A. Young.

Fairhaven, Mass.—Following a prosperous season, Peter Murray is enjoying a brief vacation at Atlantic City. Mrs. Murray accompanied him. Easter stock looks promising. An additional house is on the tapis, to be built the coming season.

Brookline, Mass.—F. E. Palmer says his sales of cyclamens this season exceeded all previous records and he attributes it largely to the superior strains now being grown. The nursery has been given up, the land being too valuable, but a large retail trade is done from samples planted around his residence and greenhouses.

Auburn, R. I.—D. N. Potter says the labor situation is most serious for the market gardener and he would welcome a host of orientals as a solution of the problem.

Hartford, Conn.—A fine group of flower shops can be seen in the Capital city. Their attractiveness doubtless contributes largely to the excellent business done. John Coombs owns two that take the output of his extensive greenhouses. Welch, Inc., has the latest in a delivery auto, painted black and white, the lower part of the body resembling mosaic or miniature checkers. It is a startler.

Hartford, Conn.—Carl Peterson, proprietor of the Whiting Greenhouses, has for many years grafted his own rose stock and finds this season a large number of failures following grafting. Inspection of the Manetti shows it has died down so that hardly any can be used over again. The loss runs near fifty per cent. Reporting on business and prospects, Mr. Peterson says: "We are now on top of the heap."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Canterbury Bells.

The earliest batch of Canterbury bells has spikes twelve to fifteen inches in height. These are grown in a carnation temperature, which is as warm as Canterbury bells will succeed in. Great care is necessary during the winter and early spring to water moderately and never to wet the foliage any more than is really necessary. If the plants are kept moderately dry at the roots until the end of March, there will be little trouble from rot, but if kept steadily damp at the roots, whole plants sometimes will rot away. This fact is not sufficiently appreciated, and until it is there will be many disappointments for those who grow these beautiful plants under glass. About the middle of March make a sowing of seed for next season. The singles are the best to grow, and pure white, pink and mauve are the more desirable colors. The doubles and hose-in-hose varieties are too heavy and need too much staking.

Asters.

Make a generous sowing of early asters for outdoor planting now. There is no better variety than Queen of the Market, and white, pink and lavender are the only colors that have much of a sale, with white selling the best. Do not sow the seeds too thickly in the flats, and as soon as they are germinated give them a light position on a shelf, where they will be kept stocky. When of sufficient size, prick them off into flats. Shade the seedlings for a few days and be sure to keep them well up to the glass. Allowing the seedlings to become crowded in the seed flats and delaying transplanting so long that, in order to firm the plants properly, the stems must be more or less buried, is the surest way to develop stem-rot. The rot may not appear right away, but a wet spell after the plants are in the field will soon make them show signs of distress. Outdoor-sown asters are much less subject to stem-rot than those started under glass.

Buddleia Asiatica.

Buddleia Asiatica is one of the most valuable winter-flowering plants sent out for some years. It can be had in fine bloom as early as the beginning of December by giving the plants a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees, or by holding the plants a little above freezing they can be retarded until March. They are so easy to grow that it would pay every florist who sells pot plants to try a few. In addition, the cut flowers have considerable value. From cut-back plants a crop of nice cuttings will now be available. These will root in a fortnight and, if potted on from time to time and given one or two pinches, they will make splendid, bushy stock in 8-inch pots before fall. They are better if grown outdoors during summer, plunged to the brims, and need much water and doses of liquid manure when the pots are well filled with active roots.

Calceolarias.

Calceolarias make their best growth during the coldest months of the year. They need to be grown cool. They will simply not tolerate any coddling; a temperature a few degrees above freezing suits them. If grown warmer they are simply worried by green aphides and fumigation once a week is necessary to keep them absolutely clean. Now that the plants are nicely established in their blooming pots, give them occasional doses of liquid cow or sheep manure. Before the flower shoots are too far advanced, use as supports one or two light, neat stakes in each pot. This is necessary both with the herbaceous and rugosa sections, which are equally brittle. The sun has not yet sufficient power to affect them, but about the middle of March a light shade from direct sunshine will be found necessary.

Marguerites.

Take a batch of cuttings now from any of the white or yellow varieties of marguerites if you want nice plants for spring sales. The white variety, Mrs. Sander, is especially good for outdoor planting and piazza boxes. It blooms persistently and the flowers in summer nearly all come double. Plants of the white varieties propagated between now and the early part of April and grown along in pots will make fine plants for blooming early next winter. It is possible to have plants in full bloom for Thanksgiving or Christmas by discontinuing pinching twelve weeks before the plants are wanted. The leaf miner is often troublesome on marguerite foliage. It can be killed by spraying the plants with a nicotine solution. One spraying carefully given will kill every worm.

Leavenworth, Kan. — G. Rozendal, whose specialties are fruits, vegetables and greenhouse lettuce, has been so well pleased with what is known as the "Dandy" transplanting carrying pot that he has applied for a patent on it and plans to put it on the market.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Among recent visitors here have been J. W. Davis, of Terre Haute, Ind., and George Sykes, of Chicago.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—After a year in the employ of W. Morgenroth, J. H. Shine has resigned to become a member of the Wertz Floral Shop staff, at Roanoke.

Ennis, Tex.—The Dunlap greenhouse here was heavily damaged by hail February 22. Hailstones six to seven inches in circumference fell in the town proper and caused a loss estimated at $20,000.

Greeneville, Tenn.—The firm name of the Greeneville Floral Co. has been changed to Rhea Floral Co. The change was made necessary because people confused the name Greeneville with many local industries and because other towns in various states bear the same name.

De Land, Fla.—E. A. Kuhnke, who was for many years in the florists' business at Toledo, O., where he is said to have accumulated a competence, since selling out has made his residence here, where he is not engaged in the trade, but takes a strong interest in things horticultural.

Oakman, Ga.—An Atlanta daily recently published a lengthy write-up of Mrs. Julian Hurt, wife of Julian Hurt, owner of the Rockdale Seed Farm. Mrs. Hurt owns and successfully manages a sheep ranch near Cartersville, while her husband undertakes the less strenuous work of growing grain seeds.

Denison, Tex.—Losses of glass by hail were severe here on the evening of February 22, according to a local daily. It is said that one range was practically destroyed.

Albany, Ga.—J. P. Metzger, of Atlanta, has been chosen superintendent of parks here, to succeed R. C. Orr, Jr. Mr. Metzger has done landscape gardening in Virginia and New Jersey. Mr. Orr will open a nursery and greenhouse here.

Pass Christian, Miss.—J. B. Adams & Son, in sending out a price list of seasonable stock, enclose a slip stating: "We are giving a small plant absolutely free of charge to each person who visits our greenhouses during the month of March. Everybody invited. Come and get yours."

Brunswick, Ga.—With respect to his recent tour of inspection, David Griffiths, the Department of Agriculture's bulb expert, told a reporter: "I visited the bulb farms of C. S. Tait, who devotes all his spare time to raising narcissus bulbs. On his farm he has planted 75,000 of one variety and 50,000 of another. I also visited Mr. Tait's bulb farm at New Hope, where he has planted nearly 200,000 bulbs, and his success convinces me you are missing a great opportunity by not taking advantage of your superior soil. Glynn county is to be congratulated on having a citizen of Mr. Tait's type. Although it is a hobby with him, he has demonstrated the bulbs can be grown here successfully."

ANOTHER HEAVY TAX.

The so-called excess profits tax provided for by act of Congress last week will bear heavily on many comparatively small partnerships and corporations throughout the country and will be a penalty of success in the florists' trade. In this business none of the partnerships or corporations employ large capital, the earnings being the result of individual effort rather than the use of money. Consequently the profits of most successful concerns in this line are considerably in excess of the exemptions and therefore largely subject to the special tax of eight per cent.

This is the way it will figure out in the case of a corporation with $25,000 capital stock which has accumulated and is using a surplus of $10,000, doing a general florists' business of approximately $100,000 and making a net profit of $12,500 per year:

Amount exempt—
Specific exemption	$5,000
8 per cent of $35,000	2,800
		7,800
Balance subject to tax		$ 4,700
Amount of tax at 8 per cent		376

The excess profits tax is in addition to the income tax of two per cent on the total net profit and is additional to state, county, city, school and other local taxes on real and personal property and the capital stock taxes levied in many states.

LACHENALIA TRICOLOR.

Can you tell me the name of the enclosed flower? It is a bulb and blooms annually. Do you believe it would be a good thing to work up a stock of?

H. B.—Wis.

It is Lachenalia tricolor Nelsoni, a variety of bulb from the Cape of Good Hope, requiring treatment similar to that of freesias. Half a dozen bulbs suffice for a 6-inch pan, or twelve to sixteen for an 8-inch pan. Lachenalias succeed best in an ordinary greenhouse, kept at not over 50 degrees at night, and should be kept well up to the glass. The flowers keep fresh for a number of weeks. It is increased by bulblets, which are freely produced, a majority of which will flower the following season. Small ones can be sown in pans and grown for a season. They will flower a year later. Seed, if sown in early spring in pans or flats of sandy soil, will produce a few flowers the first year. Gradually dry off after flowering and repot in August or September. Lachenalias are rarely seen commercially, but should prove a desirable novelty if nicely flowered.

C. W.

West Grove, Pa.—Robert Pyle recently returned from Detroit, where he spoke on roses before several clubs and named the varieties best suited for Detroit's bare spots.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Material has begun to arrive for the five new greenhouses which are to be added this spring to the establishment of the J. W. Davis Co. These houses are to be even larger than the ones previously erected, each being 80x600. Like the other houses in the range, these are to be built by the Lord & Burnham Co., the material coming from the factory at Des Plaines, Ill. While the original houses are devoted exclusively to cucumbers, plans are being made for using some of the new space for cut flowers.

OBITUARY

A. A. Reed.

A. A. Reed, of Whitman, Mass., who died February 26 in his seventy-eighth year, was one of the best known and most highly respected florists in Massachusetts. He was a Civil war veteran and lost a leg in that great struggle. He attended many of the grand army encampments, going to California only a few years ago, and always visited places of horticultural interest while on these visits. At Whitman he had an excellent local trade, for which he grew a general line of stock. He was fond of orchids, which he grew particularly well, including not only cattleyas, but also zygopetalums, phalænopsis and other species. The deceased was a well informed and most genial man and was highly popular in the community where he resided so many years. A. Roy Reed, his son, who has been associated with him in business for some years, will continue the Whitman business. W. N. C.

David W. Duncan.

David W. Duncan died at Arlington, Mass., February 22. He was 50 years old. He came from Glasgow, Scotland, and had resided in Arlington about twenty-five years, being most of the time in business as a florist. Part of his produce was sold at the Boston Coöperative Market, where he was for some years a stall-holder. The interment was at Arlington, February 25. W. N. C.

Otto Schucht.

Otto Schucht, aged 89 years, of Sheboygan, Wis., died February 26, of senile debility.

For years Mr. Schucht conducted a greenhouse business at Sheboygan. He was born May 20, 1837, in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany. He immigrated to New York in 1849 and came to Sheboygan to make his home. In 1852 the decedent moved to San Francisco, then to Portland, Ore., and Vancouver, only to return to Wisconsin in 1864. Mr. Schucht suffered severe business reverses, but in 1890 he conducted a successful florists' business at Sheboygan.

The decedent is survived by his aged wife and eight children. One son, William G., is a florist at Chilton, Wis.

August Luther.

August Luther, Sr., one of the pioneer florists of Kansas City, Mo., passed away last week. He had been a florist for thirty-nine years and was well known in the middle west. Taken with illness several years ago, the decedent sold most of his interest in the business to his son, August, who successfully manages it today.

Mr. Luther's love of flowers is shown in a provision of his will. The sum of $1,000 is left in trust, the interest of which is to pay for the upkeep of his own and wife's grave in Forest Hill cemetery. The will specifies that cut flowers be placed on the graves Memorial and other days.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Commenting on the evolution of events, Charles Loveridge compared his condition when he first landed in Chicago, in 1886, with exactly $1.35 in his pocket, with his present prosperity as proprietor of a flourishing business at Peoria, Ill. "Opportunity, good fortune and 'pep' have made things lovely and placed us on the ridge-plate of success," was the decision of our worthy confrere.

A. Washburn & Sons, of Bloomington, Ill., have decided to refrain from adding more glass at present, but they have splendid facilities, including a switch from the electric railroad into their place. The shortage in the supply of flowers no doubt will be a factor in further expansion. The store is a model of cleanliness and arrangement.

"Our experience this season," observed J. M. Imlay, of the Imlay Co., of Zanesville, O., "is that the call for roses exceeds that for carnations. While we sold all the carnations we produced, our grower's record shows a yield of twenty-four blooms by each carnation plant and a yield of twenty-seven blooms by each rose plant. This proves that, at the present time, the rose is the most profitable. We shall not change, however, when replanting. Alice is the best cropping carnation we have. It is also a splendid keeper. Killarney is our most profitable rose. We planted Mrs. Bayard Thayer in place of Russell, but it is not a success, as you see. Hoosier Beauty we consider too thin in foliage—so much space between breaks. This batch of tomato plants is to be planted between the carnations about the end of this month, two rows on the 5-foot bench. The plants, when above the wires, are run up on a single string. They are kept as bushy as possible, and at that time benefit the carnations by their shading. Last season we received $900 for 1,700 plants, netting about 40 cents per bush. Each plant produced a cluster of from seven to nine fruits, and these were easily disposed of to one local grocery. We are not vegetable growers, but think it a profitable side line. The variety is Comet and invariably comes perfect. Radishes and lettuce follow chrysanthemums, and in turn are followed by sweet peas," concluded Mr. Imlay. A first-class line of Dutch bulbous stock was noted. Couronne d'Or and Murillo tulips, in bloom February 1, were particularly fine; also miniatures, violets, primroses and pansies. About 15,000 pansies are grown outdoors for the retail trade. An additional house for storage, 30x100, of concrete or tile, will be built this summer. Pointing to a herd of Holstein cattle, Mr. Imlay remarked that the animals were a valuable accessory.

As an instance of the condition of the flower pot industry, I learned that the Peters & Reed Pottery Co., of South Zanesville, O., is filling an order for twenty-one cars and one for six cars, for two eastern houses, to be sent to the buyers' western customers.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THERE will be no shortage of stock at Easter unless weather conditions play pranks with the plans of the plantsmen.

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from Pittsburgh that all makers of steel and iron pipe again have advanced prices, this time $4 to $6 a ton.

Now is the time for florists who retail seeds to resurrect the display cabinet from the storeroom, fill in the lithographed packages and give the case a prominent place "up front."

THE REVIEW has been notified to discontinue the mailing of the paper to its subscribers in Belgium for the reason, so the postmaster says, that the mail service to that country has been suspended.

IT is worth while to note that the men who seem to be permanently most successful in this trade are not "Cheap Johns;" they produce a consistently good grade of stock and ask fair prices for it.

THE plantsmen have adopted the European practice of charging the customer for packing materials, or at least a considerable number of the leaders have. Of course, such a charge carries with it the obligation to pack well and lightly, so there should be a distinct gain to the buyers if the careless ones also adopt the custom.

"In the Review I often see growers telling how good their stock is," writes L. H. Haney, of Greenfield, Ind., "but I do not see that I need to take a back seat among the sweet pea growers. In case the editor is from Missouri I am mailing a sample of my Rose Queen." The flowers that accompanied the letter had stems twenty inches long.

GROWERS who find the cost of coal burdensome, and who seek relief through the use of crude oil, find that the latter fuel also has advanced in price, fully as much as has been the case with coal.

A CONSIDERABLE number of growers have obtained their fuel this year at contract price, if with some difficulty on the score of transportation, but they find that when the old contracts expire new contracts cannot be made except at an advance of at least $1 per ton.

ALOIS FREY, Crown Point, Ind., last week sent The Review a box of his Rainbow freesias. It was not the first time, and they always have been good, but these were the best yet. Mr. Frey is making steady improvement in his stock by selection for size of flowers, brightness and purity of color and robustness of habit. It is understood he is flowering this season some 20,000 seedlings produced from his best varieties of previous years.

IT SELLS FOR ALL.

It makes no difference where the florist is located, The Review sells for all. Like this:

We carried an ad of Francis King gladioli exclusively in The Review and find that we are entirely sold out of that variety.—Los Robles Nursery & Garden, Santa Cruz, Cal., February 22, 1917.

Please stop the ad, as I am compelled to return checks after having sold all I had. The only way to keep up with The Review is to have a great many more of an article than you think you can possibly sell.—Ernst Manthey, Jr., St. Bernard, O., February 26, 1917.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

FLORISTS OF NEW YORK.

In a circular letter sent to all the florists in New York state, A. L. Miller, vice-president of the S. A. F., urges nonmembers to join the S. A. F. at once. In this connection he gives some interesting facts as to the extent of the trade in his state. That paragraph of his letter is as follows:

"Greater New York has 914 live florists; the state of New York has 1,898, making a grand total of 2,812. The present membership of New York state in our national society is 252. Although this is the highest state membership, I regret to say that it is a poor showing for the Empire state. Would it not be gratifying to have a membership of 1,000 at the opening of the convention?"

Vice-president Miller does not indicate the source of his information regarding the number of florists in New York state. When the government took the census of 1910 it enumerated 1,398 florists' establishments in that state. The government counted only florists having glass, greenhouses or hotbeds, but it included any whose principal occupation was something else but who derived twenty per cent of their annual income from the sale of plants or flowers.

GLASS PRICES GO UP.

In accordance with the forecast made in The Review earlier in the year, the prices of glass still are going up. There was another advance March 1, in explanation of which the following statement was given out at Pittsburgh, the headquarters of the window glass industry:

"The window glass output is still being curtailed, and the operating cost at the factories has been greatly increased. In view of this the Johnston Brokerage Co. has withdrawn its prices, and the American Window Glass Co. has announced new discounts in price of slightly better than ten per cent in lieu of price withdrawal.

"The Johnston Co., in announcing its decision, issued the following statement: 'During the last month fully half of the factories of the country have been out of blast, and at certain periods two-thirds of the plants have been closed, owing to lack of fuel and material, poor railroad service and freight congestion. This has retarded the completion of our old contracts and has made deliveries of new business uncertain until our sold business has reached a point where the factories do not care to increase it at present discounts at this time; therefore we are instructed to withdraw our prices and to quote only on specifications as they are submitted.'"

HOLLAND MAIL LOST.

The trade is notified that all the mail for Holland that arrived at New York between January 19 and February 17, almost a month, accumulated there and was lost when the Laconia went down. It included a large number of orders for 1917 imports.

Mail lost when the Laconia was sunk included that addressed to European countries, except Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Turkey and Russia, received at New York from noon February 14 to noon February 17, as well as that for South Africa, West Australia and India. Mail for Holland received at New York from January 19 to February 17, and for Norway, Sweden and Denmark from February 1 to February 17, and parcel post mail for Great Britain and Ireland received at New York from January 27 to February 17 also was lost.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

City trade has been dull, due in a large measure to Lent, and houses which have little shipping trade are agreed that business has been poor indeed. Those whose trade consists in large measure of out-of-town business, however, were more cheerful, as the demand from this source was steady and fairly large. Roses are at present off crop with most growers, but the supply is more than enough to meet the demand and prices, on the whole, are lower. Growers are sizing up their crops to see what they will have for Easter and present indications are that the supply of roses will be about normal. Long-stemmed American Beauties are expected to be in a little short supply, but an abundance of medium length and shorter stock is expected. It also seems probable that the supply of carnations will be none too plentiful, as there has been a heavy crop cut and the new crop with most growers will probably not come in until after Easter. This should create a larger demand for roses and bulbous stock.

There was an immense quantity of bulbous stock on the market last week, amounting almost to a glut. The demand was poor and prices sank low, in many cases being not much higher than the original cost of the bulbs.

American Beauties are perhaps the one important item which sold up to quotation figures steadily throughout the week. The supply is not large, but in most cases probably sufficient to meet the demand. The supply of carnations was ample, the demand being decidedly sluggish.

Valley remains about the same. The supply is not large, but sufficient to meet the demand. Easter lilies and callas sell slowly and anyone with a large supply of violets had his hands full. Sweet peas did a little better. Mignonette also has not been selling well, while Paper Whites, which are at the end of their season, dragged heavily for the most part. Poeticus, too, moved slowly, while tulips, jonquils, daffodils and freesias all dragged heavily. Pansies arrive in small supply and sell fairly well. The supply of snapdragons increases and they have been selling fairly well.

Plumosus is still scarce, but the supply is a little larger than the week before. The price of most other greens has advanced.

Wholesalers Complete Organization.

Following an excellent dinner at the Sherman House March 1, attended by twenty-nine wholesale florists or their representatives, the organization of the Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association was completed by the adoption of by-laws and the election of a board of directors, which also is given the title of consulting board. Its members are Charles Erne, of Erne & Co.; C. S. Guza, of the A. L. Randall Co.; A. T. Pyfer, of Pyfer & Co.; A. J. Zech, of Zech & Mann, and F. C. Hoerber, of Hoerber Bros., together with the officers: President A. F. Poehlmann, Vice-president Paul Klingsporn, Treasurer P. C. Schupp and Secretary A. C. Kohlbrand.

The executive body will handle such problems as the improvement of the holiday express service, the department store sales of cut flowers for advertising purposes and other thorns in the flesh of the trade.

having been fifty-eight per cent of the possible sunshine as against fifty-one per cent as the average for February.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has consummated a three years' lease on the second floor of the building at 66 to 70 East Randolph street, one door west of its present location. The additional space, which is equal in size to the second floor of their present store, will be used for the show and sales rooms of the supply department, the fourth floor at 72 East Randolph street, now used for this purpose, being retained as a stock and shipping room. An arch will be cut through the walls of the two buildings, connecting the new rooms with the cut flower department, located on the second floor at 72 East Randolph street. The need of additional space for the supply department has long been felt by the company, as that department has shown large growth within the last year. The new rooms will meet this need admirably.

The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. has received an order from Gullet & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., for the erection of a new range consisting of ten houses 200 feet in length, of the new Agmco pipe frame type. This new range will be devoted entirely to the growing of plants and together with the houses now used for this purpose should place the firm in the front rank of growers in the middle west.

A new firm, the Rapid Wrapper Co., 56 East Randolph street, opened for business last week. This concern will manufacture patented paper wrappers for plants which are so constructed that a plant can be completely wrapped in a few seconds, saving both paper and labor.

Although the average size of sales decreases year by year, thereby increasing the cost of doing business and cutting the percentage of profit, W. J. Smyth says the total sales at his store thus far have increased rapidly enough to keep the net profit from decreasing materially in any year, with the first half of this year showing a turn in his favor.

Emil Buettner and wife, accompanied by Mr. Buettner's brother and wife, left for Pasadena, Cal., March 6. They expect to return about a week before Easter.

Carl N. Thomas, who has spent the winter, as usual, in the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co., returned March 3 to his summer home at West Springfield, Pa.

Charles Wiffin, of Des Plaines, Ill., accompanied by his son, Sidney, will leave for South Dakota, March 10, where they have taken up farm lands. They intend to do stock raising and general farming, returning at the end of the summer.

according to C. L. Washburn, who says he expects to see a shortage this year, not as many lilies having been grown as formerly. Last year, he says, was a hard year for lilies with many growers, who accordingly discontinued growing them.

The mother of the Wietor brothers was 85 years of age March 1 and there was a quiet celebration of the event at her home in Rogers Park.

While descending the elevated stairs at Randolph street one day last week, with a couple of large bundles in his arms, D. S. Musser, of Miller & Musser, slipped and fell almost the entire length of the stairs, badly bruising both his legs.

The Mrs. Shawyer rose always has done specially well at the F. J. Benthey establishment at New Castle, Ind., which is associated with Kennicott Bros. Co., in this city. Mr. Benthey says he will increase his Shawyer planting to 15,000 this season, discarding Hoosier Beauty and cutting down on White Killarney to obtain the additional space.

The city office and western headquarters of Lord & Burnham Co. have been removed to the Continental & Commercial National Bank building, where greatly increased facilities were available. M. C. Wright, formerly in charge of the Philadelphia office, has been brought to Chicago as sales manager. George Sykes, who is in charge of the company's western interests, has recently returned from a month's outing in Florida.

H. N. Bruns and family returned March 6 from California, where they have been for more than a month with E. C. Amling and family. The Amling party will remain west for the rest of this month.

Peter Reinberg celebrated his fifty-ninth birthday anniversary March 5.

Ernest Quiran left Niles Center on the evening of March 3 to walk to Morton Grove, two miles away. Next day his body, the skull fractured, was found beside the road. It is believed he was the victim of an auto.

A second light delivery truck with panel body has been ordered by George V. Wienhoeber.

That good lilies will be scarce for Easter, is the opinion of Philip Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's, and he is advising customers to order early.

According to W. B. Rix, who is one of the veterans in the business, iron reservoir vases will be among the season's scarcities. The cost of iron not only is high, but it is difficult to get casting done except at what he considers an almost prohibitive charge.

Peter Pearson is congratulating himself on having received a quantity of boxwoods last autumn, which he carried over winter.

T. Babros, of the A. L. Randall Co., is happy over the arrival of a baby girl.

March opened unusually well this year, according to J. P. Degnan, of Winterson's Seed Store. The Winterson wholesale catalogue is on the press this week, having been held back in the hope of definite word regarding the plant imports.

Many growers are said to be figuring on putting in a supply of coal sufficient for from sixty days to an entire year, according to the size of their bins, and thus guarding themselves against the great stringency which would develop in case the nation should go to war, in which event all mines of Pocahontas might be requisitioned.

Miss O. A. Tonner paid a visit to the houses of Louis Linneman, Des Plaines, Ill., March 5, where she found all stock in excellent condition and looking promising for Easter.

Frank J. Rioux, of the store fixture department of the A. L. Randall Co. reports a contract for a large refrigerator from Wilson & Co., at the stock yards.

New York, was in town last week on business.

E. D. Marsh, of the Marsh Trellis Co., Westboro, Mass., was a visitor last week.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

At this writing, March 4, a blizzard is raging that rivals any we have had this season. A mixture of sleet and snow, driven at hurricane speed, discourages the most optimistic anticipations of the coming of spring. A heavy snow a few nights ago caused glass to break at several greenhouses.

During the previous week summery weather brought large quantities of flowers of all kinds to the market. Shortly afterward Mr. Winter dropped down upon us and slackened the sale of most flowers greatly. A large quantity of bulbous stock is being brought in, as well as snapdragons, sweet peas and all other flowers. Snapdragons, while of excellent quality, are dragging. Their sale is not in keeping with that of former years. Owing to the immense cuts of sweet peas and violets, many blooms find their way to the ash cans. Carnations and roses continue to move at usual prices and, although there is an increased quantity, there is never a surplus on hand.

Lilies are still rather scarce, though probably in a few days they will arrive more plentifully. Quantities of plants are being sent in daily. Cinerarias, primulas and bulbous plants are in abundance. There also are some extremely good azaleas, a large proportion of them having been carried-over plants. They were flowered more easily than newly imported plants.

Various Notes.

While coal is arriving more freely, thanks to the release of many cars, the price is still soaring and is causing much unrest in the trade, especially to those who have much glass to heat. Those who stored their winter supply—at least what was considered enough to last through the winter—ran out of coal some weeks ago, and many are having great difficulty in procuring their supply. On account of the high price of coal during the last season, nearly all of the vegetable growers of this section abandoned their greenhouses. They are now planting the houses. Lettuce at present is selling at 60 cents per pound.

Decorations are claiming the services of many of the stores at this time. The force of F. Walker & Co. spent a pleasant Sunday erecting the large decorations at the New York store. It was one of the largest opening decorations of the season, calling for blooming plants by the wagon load, as well as the usual palms and ferns. The company receives

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week business was particularly poor. Apparently the Lenten season is being strictly observed, for there is little doing in the way of social functions. The market is well stocked with cut flowers and seasonable plants, and prices are somewhat easier. The weather has improved and sunshine each day is bringing stock along in good shape. There is no shortage of anything in cut flowers; rather more, in some kinds, than the market requires. The supply of roses is large, especially in the longer grades, but there is still a decided shortage in short-stemmed stock. Russell, Maryland, Ward, Sunburst, Killarney and Montrose roses are the best sellers; the daily demand is quite large.

Carnations are plentiful and sell well. A few good reds are seen now, but they do not sell readily. The market has been overstocked with violets and many have been disposed of at 35 cents per hundred. The demand for sweet peas is quite good, and these are of exceptional quality, with stems extra long. Orchids and gardenias are moving more easily now. Mignonette, myosotis, snapdragons and jonquils are popular in basket work. There is a good demand for the spring flowers, but the daily consignments are large. Golden Spur and Emperor narcissi sell fast. Poeticus and Paper

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

A week of extraordinarily unfavorable weather was the first one in March. It was so dark in the middle of the day in the central part of the city, when the week opened, that lights were used on trolleys, on motors and in the office buildings. There was snow, and hail, and sleet, and rain, and darkness in the hours of daylight. People generally went about in a dispirited sort of way, telling each other what a miserable sort of day yesterday had been; they wondered whether today was much better and doubted whether tomorrow could be much worse.

Has Phil forgotten that he is writing about the cut flower market? By no means. The effect of the weather on the cut flower market has been disastrous. Production has suffered, although the wholesalers and retailers will not believe it. Business has suffered much more. Values have receded. Averages have dropped. Some flowers even have remained unsold. One discouraged salesman made a careful comparison between this first week in March and the dullest week in midsummer, with advantage to the latter. But this is going rather far.

Greens are the only stock except Beauties that can be described as in short supply. Smilax is short; asparagus is extremely short. This market has been accustomed to rely on outdoor southern sprays of Asparagus plumosus during the late winter and early spring. Unhappily, for the first time in a decade Jack Frost went as far south as Jupiter, quite a long way south of Jacksonville, Fla., where the brothers Pennock have slat houses for asparagus. Jack Frost invaded these houses, nipped the tender shoots and changed the asparagus from select to ordinary, when select was most badly needed.

There are several changes in the bulb situation. Emperor daffodils have arrived; they are, of course, preferred to Golden Spur. The double tulips, Couronne d'Or, Murillo and Salvator Rosa, find a market, while the singles have a stale time. Mignonette, daisies, primulas, calendulas, violets and here and there snapdragon, waste their beauty unseen. Sweet peas have been awfully plentiful. That is about the story. Why go further? We hope for better things when it clears.
